RULES FOR THE EXAMINATION AND CON-TROL OF THE NEWLY-APPOINTED MEMBERS OF THE BENGAL CIVIL SERVICE.

The following rules are prescribed for the examination of the newly-appointed members of the Bengal Civil Service in the languages of India prevailing in the Presidency of Fort William, for their guidance and control, until qualified for the public service by knowledge of those languages, and for the discharge of other duties formerly performed by the secretary and examiners of the College of Fort William :

I. There shall be a board of examiners in Calcutta consisting of a president and as many members, exofficio or otherwise, as the Government may from time to time appoint, with a secretary who may be also a member of the Board.

II. For the more convenient despatch of business the Board may form itself into Sub-Committees each consisting of two or more of its Members, and the President shall appoint a Secretary to each Sub-Committee from among the Members of the Board and its Secretary. There shall be one Sub-Committee for the examination of Civil Servants by the qualification test and for honours, and for the performance of the other duties formerly discharged by the Examiners of the College of Fort William; and another Sub-Committee for the exa-The correspondence and mination of Assistants. miscellaneous executive business of the Board shall be conducted by the secretary acting under the orders of the President.

III. The President of the Board shall be the President of each Sub-Committee, and the act of each Sub-Committee shall be, and be described to be, the act of the Board.

IV. Every person appointed a Member of her Majesty's Civil Service on the Bengal Establishment shall, immediately on his arrival in Calcutta, report himself in person to the Secretary to the Board.

V. Every such Civil Servant on his arrival in Calcutta, and until he is either attached to the Public Service or directed or permitted to proceed into the Interior, is under the orders and authority of the President of the Board of Examiners, and is bound to obey all orders, general or special, which he may receive from the President, or through the Secretary to the Board. All such orders shall be regularly entered in an Order-Book to be kept by the Secretary.

VI. The newly-appointed Civil Servants will be allotted to the different Divisions of the Presidency in such proportions as may be determined from time to time by the Government of India. Application for an exchange from one Division to another must be submitted to Government through the Board of Examiners.

VII. Every Civil Servant must qualify himself for the Public Service by a knowledge of two lan-guages according to the prescribed test. Those allotted to the Lower Provinces must qualify in Bengalee and Oordoo. Those allotted to the North-Western Provinces, the Punjaub, and Oude must qualify in Persian and Hindee.

VIII. There shall be a general monthly examination at the commencement of every calendar month, at which all unpassed Civil Servants, resident in or near Calcutta, are required to attend. Intermediate examinations are not to be held, except under peculiar circumstances, and with the express sanction of seventh general monthly examination, and in second language at or before the thirteenth general monthly examination, after his arrival in India. Failing either of these expectations a Civil Servant will not be allowed to remain in Calcutta, but will be sent to complete his studies under some Civil Authority at a Station in the Interior.

X. On good cause being shown a Civil Servant will be permitted to prosecute and complete his studies under some Civil Authority at a Station in the Interior the Interior.

XI. A Civil Servant who fails to pass the test in two languages within eighteen months from the date of the first monthly examination after his arrival in India (allowance being made for duly certified sickness) will, on the expiration of that period, be finally removed from the Service.

XII. No Civil Servant will be permitted to study for honours except in Calcutta, and unless he pass the test of qualification in two languages at or before the eighth general monthly examination after his arrival in India.

XIII. No civil servant will be permitted to continue studying for honours, of whom it is reported by the Board in the general examination report of each month, that he is not making good progress, and it is not likely, within the prescribed time, to obtain either a certificate of high proficiency or a degree of honour, as the case may be.

XIV. Twelve months from the first monthly examination after the date of arrival is the extreme period allowed for obtained honours in one language, and eighteen months from the same date for obtaining honours in two or more languages.

XV. No Civil Servant who fails to obtain a certificate of high proficiency within eight months from the first monthly examination after arrival shall be permitted to study for honours in a second language.

XVI. The first language in which a Civil Servant will be permitted to study for honours is the vernacular language of the greater part of that division of the Presidency to which he is allotted-that is to say, Bengalee for the Lower Provinces, and Hindee or Oordoo for the North-West Provinces, the Punjaub, and Oude. After obtaining a degree of honour or a certificate of high proficiency in any one of these languages within the prescribed term, a Civil Servant may apply himself to the study of any other of the dead or living languages of India.

Conversing (in the vernacular languages) with accuracy and fluency.

The examination for a degree of honour will be of a searching nature, and the exercises, both oral and written, must be performed with such excel-lence as distinctly to establish a claim to eminent proficiency.

XX. To every Civil Servant who gains a certificate of high proficiency there shall be awarded a donation of eight hundred Rupees, and a cer tificate under the signature of the President of th Board.

XXI. To every Civil Servant who gains a degree of honour there shall be awarded a donation of one thousand six hundred Rupees, and a Diploma under the signature of the head of the Government

XXII. But two pecuniary rewards for the same language will not be given; and if, after obtaining a certificate of high proficiency, a Civil Servant becomes entitled to a degree of honour in the same language, he shall, on the second occasion, receive only the difference between the rewards attached to these two several distinctions.

XXIII. To every Civil Servant who passes the test of qualification in two languages at or before the fifth general monthly examination after his arrival, there shall be awarded a donation of eight hundred rupees. To every Civil Servant who passes the test in one language with "marked proficiency" within the same time, there shall be awarded a Medal of Merit in that language, and if he passes also with "marked proficiency" in his second language at or before the eighth general monthly examination after his arrival, there shall be awarded to him a second Medal of Merit in that language.

XXIV. Certificates of high Medals of Merit shall be delivered to those entitled to them by the President at a full Meeting of the Board. Degrees of honour will be conferred by the board. Degrees of nonour win be contacted by the head of the Government in person.

XXV. When a Civil Servant has completed his course of study, and has been attached to one or other Division of the Presidency for employment in the Public Service, he shall receive from the Secretary to the Board of Examiners a certificate specifying the proficiency he may have acquired, the rewards adjudged to him, and the general tenor of his conduct while engaged in his studies.

XXVI. No Civil Servant unattached shall reside out of Calcutta or its vicinity, including a circle with a radius of five miles from Government House, without the permission of the Government. Every instance in which this rule is transgressed shall be reported to the Government by the Secretary to the Board.

XXVII. Any young Civil Servant who may be guilty of any irregular or indecorous conduct which may not appear to call for a report to Government, shall be admonished by the President. But serious instances of wilful disobedience, or of disorderly and unbecoming conduct, shall be reported for the information and orders of the Government.

XXVIII. Whenever it may appear to the Secretary or to any Member of the Board of Examiners that a young Civil Servant is likely, from expensive habits, from idleness, or any improper indulgences, to incur debt, or otherwise to disgrace himself and set an injurious example to others, a report shall be made to the President, and the President, after admenition, shall, if he think necessary, report the matter for the information of the Government.

XXIX. The contracting of debt by the Civil Servants of her Majesty is prohibited. Those who enter the Public Service under pecuniary embarrassment, implying the contraction of habits of prodigality, will be held to be disqualified for employment of trust and confidence so long as those habits and embarrassments continue.

XXX. Every Junior Civil Servant shall supply himself, at his own cost, with Grammars, Dictionaries, and Text-books. A supply of the books in use will be generally kept on sale at cost price in the College Library. XXXI. The Accounts of the Office of the Secretary to the Board of Examiners will be kept, audited, and rendered in the same manner as those of the late College of Fort William.

XXXII. Civil Servants who are not qualified for the Public Service, but are permitted or ordered to reside in the Interior, will be placed under the au-thority and orders of the Commissioner of the Division, or the Judge of the District in which they severally reside, and are bound to obey all orders they receive from him. They are not permitted to quit the Station and its vicinity without the sanction of the Government.

XXXIII.—The examination of unpassed Civil Servants in the Interior will be conducted as at present, by means of written papers prepared by the Board, and forwarded under seal by the Board's Secretary to the Chief Civil Authority of the Sta-

XXXIV. Civil Servants will receive from the date of their arrival in the country until they pass the test of qualification in one language, a salary of 250 Rupees a month, and so long as they remain in Calcutta an allowance of 80 Rupees for house-rent.

After passing the test in one language they will receive, until attached to the Public Service, a salary of 800 Rupees a month, and, while they remain in Calcutta, 80 Rupees as house-rent.

XXXV. Native Teachers will be allowed to the young Civil Servants at the Public expense. In Calcutta each Civil Servant will be at liberty to entertain a Moonshee or a Pundit according to the language he is studying, and every such Teacher will receive from the Secretary to the Board of Examiners the authorised allowance (Rs. 30 a month) on the production of a certificate duly attested by the student on whom he may have attended. An examination for admitting Moonshees and Pundits will be held by the Board from time to time, and only such as gain testimonials of qualification to teach shall be eligible for employment by the students. A testimonial is to be given for each language in which, on examination, qualification is established, the test for such examination being the same as that laid down for a degree of honour, including a fair knowledge of English. One Moonshee, or Pundit, will not be allowed to draw pay for more than three students in one mouth.

XXXVI. In the Interior the choice of the Moonshee or Pundit will be subject to the approval of the Chief Civil Authority, and on the production of a like certificate, the authorized allowance will be paid by the Collector of the District and debited his accounts to the Secretary to the Board of Examiners XXXVII. No medical certificate furnished by an unpassed Civil Servant in proof of inability either to prosecute his studies or to attend Examination shall be held to be of any effect, unless it distinctly states, from personal observation, the nature of the illness in question, as well as the symptoms by which it has been manifested, and the period during which it has existed and incapacitated the Civil Servant from study; nor unless it is signed by a Pre-sidency Surgeon, or, in the case of a Student studying at a Station in the Interior, by the Medical Officer of the Station, and countersigned by the Superintending Surgeon; nor unless it is transmitted to the Secretary to the Board of Examiners within one month from the period of sickness to which it refers.

XXXVIII. Any unpassed Civil Servant who may be prevented by temporary indisposition, duly cer-tified as above, from attending any examination, having failed to pass at which such Civil Servant would, under Section IX. of these knles, be required to leave Calcutta, shall be required to undergo a special examination on the expiry of a period equal to that which is covered by his medical certificate. Secy. to the Govt. of India.

WASTE LANDS.

STLHET, August 80 .- The following Rules for the sale of unassessed waste lands, and for the redemption of the revenue of such lands already granted for a term of years, in the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal, are published for general information:

1. All unassessed waste lands in which no right of proprietorship or exclusive occupancy is known to exist, or to have existed, and to be capable of revival, are available for purchase under these Rules, unless specially reserved under Rule 21.

2. No greater quantity of land than three thou-sand acres shall be sold in one lot except with the express sanction of the Government. If for special reasons, in particular localities, a lower maximum area than three thousand acres should be determined upon, it will be duly notified hereafter.

3. Every lot shall be compact, and shall include no more than one tract of land in a ring fence; and when the land touches a Public Road, or a Navi-gable River, the length of the Road or River frontage shall not exceed one-half the depth of the lot. No lot will be sold unless it has been previously surveyed and demarcated, or until it shall have been surveyed and demarcated in consequence of an application for purchase. The Survey need only be in sufficient detail to ensure the ready identification of the boundaries of the lot, and to ascertain its gross area. If on completion of the Survey it shall appear that the area of the lot applied for exceeds the prescribed maximum, the excess shall be excluded.

4. Applications for the purchase of waste land shall be made to the Collector of the District, and every application shall contain the following parti-

The estimated area of the land applied for 1st.-2nd. The situation of the land and its boundaries accurately as can be ascertained.

5. If the Collector be satisfied that the land ar plied for is available for purchase and within the conditions prescribed in Rules 2 and 3, and if it have been previously surveyed and demarcated, he shall advertise the lot for sale on a given day at an upset price of not less than 2 Rupees 8 annas an upset price of not less than 2 Rupees 8 annas an acre on the whole area. The advertisement shall be published in the Collector's Office, in the Court of the Principal Judicial Officer of the District, and at the Moonsif's Court (if there be one), and Police Station within the limits of which the lands are situated. situated.

6. If the Collector be satisfied as above, and if the land have not been surveyed, he shall cause it to be surveyed and its boundaries demarcated, the estimated cost of such survey and demarcation being first deposited by the applicant. On the completion of the Survey the advertisement of sale shall be published as above.

7. The day of sale to be named in the advertisement shall not be less than thirty days from the date of publication, and the sale shall be held at the Collector's Office. The sale may be postponed if in the Collector's judgment it be necessary, due notice being always given of the date on which the sale will be held.

8. If before the day of sale no claim of proprie tory, or occupative, right in the land be preferred, the lot shall be sold by auction to the highest bidder above the upset price, or to the applicant at the upset price if there be no higher bid.

9. On payment of one tenth of the purchase money, and of all expenses of survey, demarcation, advertisement and sale, the purchaser shall receive a deed (in a form which will hereafter be issued by the Board of Revenue), signed by the collector, conveying to him the lot, in full hereditary and transferable proprietary right, free for ever from all demand on account of Land Revenue, but subject, nevertheless, to all general taxes and local rates imposed by law, and to any other claim, whether of the Government or otherwise that may have been er may hereafter be established in any Court of competent jurisdiction.

10. If before the day of sale a claim of proprie tory or occupative right in any part of the land be preferred, the Collector shall investigate the claim, and if satisfied that it is groundless, shall reject it, and proceed with the sale.

11. If on investigation any such claim should appear to be well grounded, the Collector may either reject the application for purchase of the lands, or refer it for the orders of the Commissioner. In the former case the applicant may appeal to the Commissioner.

12. The Commissioner may direct the Collector either to reject the application, or to preced with the sale of the land, either unreservedly on the conditions prescribed in Rule 9, or, if any claim to right of proprietorship, occupancy, or use in any part of the lands be established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, with a special reservation of such right, or exclusive of the area in which such right exists. If the application for purchase of the land be rejected, the amount deposited as cost of survey will be forfeited.

13. On being put in possession of the lot, the purchaser shall be bound to erect as many substantial boundary marks of masonry as the Collector may think necessary.

14. If the land be purchased by any person oth than the applicant, the estimated cost of survey de-posited by the applicant shall be returned to him.

15. The purchaser may, if he choose, pay the whole of the purchase money when the lot is sold, or the deed delivered to him. Or, if he choose, he may pay a portion, not being less than 10 per cent., at the time of sale, and the remainder in instalments at the time of sale, and the remainder in instalments at any future time, not being more than ten years from the date of sale. In the latter case simple interest at the rate of ten per cent. a year will be charged on the unpaid portion of the purchase money, and the whole lot will remain hypothecated as security for the full discharge of the amount, including principal and interest, and he liable to sale cluding principal and interest, and be liable to sale by order of the Collector if the said amount be not paid within the stipulated period.

16. If the purchaser fails to pay one-tenth of the purchase money, all other expenses within three months from the day of sale, the lot will be put up to sale again on the same conditions as before, and sold at the risk of the first purchaser, whose deposit will also be forfeited.

will also be forfeited.

17. The upset price will be calculated on the whole area of the lot, without any deduction on any account whatever. Ordinarily the upset price will be 2 rupees 8 annas an acre, but in special cases the Collector, with the sanction of the Commissioner may put a higher upset price on any lot, provided that the upset price of available waste lands shall in no case exceed 10 rupees an acre.

18. If it should at any time be found that the same land has been included in more than one lot it shall be held to belong to the lot first sold, and all subsequent sales shall as regards such land become null and void. In the event of any dispute regarding the boundary of two or more adjoining lots, the Collector may, on the application of any one of the parties, re-adjust the boundaries of the lots, and his decision shall be final. The price paid by any subsequent purchaser for land thus excluded from his lot will be refunded to him with simple interest at 10 per cent.

19. All grants of waste land already made for a term of years under previously existing Rules, in which no right of occupancy or proprietorship exists, except that of the guarantee or that derived from will be treated for the purposes of this Rule as if the land were permanently settled; and the guarantees or their representatives may redeem the future land revenue of such grants, or of any compact part of them, in perpetuity, for a amount equal to the present value of all future stipulated annual payments calculated at 5 per cent. interest, provided the said amount is not less than 2 rupees 8 annas an acre on the whole area of which the revenue is redeemed.

20. All sales of waste land, and all redemptions made under these Rules in each Division, will be re-ported immediately to the Board of Revenue in such form as the Board may direct; but no sale of waste lands once made by a Collector in conformity with these Rules will be disturbed by any higher executive authority.

21. Reserves of grazing and forest land, of land for the growth of firewood near Towns and Stations, of building sites, parks, recreation grounds, and the like, and of land required for other special purposes, are not to be sold under these Rules without the express sanction of the Government. A list of these lands is under preparation by the Board of Revenue, and when it has been approved by the Government it will be published in the Gazette.

22. Lands for the purchase of which application has been made under the Resolution of the 17th of October, 1861, will, if such application were duly registered, be dealt with in accordance with the terms of the said Resolution so far as the Law allows.

23. From and after the date of the promulgation of these Rules no fresh applications for grants of waste land under any previous Rules will be entertained.—By Order, &c.,

MILITARY SCANDALS IN INDIA.

EVERY mail from India brings an account of some fresh irregularity and offence against military discipline on the part of officers of European regiments. At Dinapore the Brigadier in command of the station, a brave and efficient soldier, is forced to resign the service through the officious intermeddling of a malapert subaltern. The latter boasts that he threatened to inflict personal chastisement upon his commanding officer, unless he gave up a certain letter written by the wife of an absent colonel, and asserts that the document was given up in consequence. On the other hand the gallant old Brigadier positively denies that any threats were uttered in his hearing, and explains that he returned the letter in question because he understood such was the wish of his fair but injudicious correspondent. Probabilities are certainly in favour of this explanation, but in any case what are we to think of the state of discipline, or even of gentlemanly feeling, that would permit a young man to menace his senior before even the latter had manifested any disinclination to comply with his demand. As the story is told in the Indian papers, the lady's champion, according to his own showing, conducted himself more like a bully than a gentleman, and, from the military point of view, richly deserves to be tried by a court-martial.

Then, in Calcutta we find society agitated by the most unseemly behaviour of two officers of long standing in the service, and members of a very important Committee of Inquiry. In the course of conversation at the United Service Club of that Presidency, Major Fitzgerald incautiously remarked to Colonel Priestly that he entertained no very high opinion of the Commander-in-Chief, either in his public or private capacity. It was certainly unwise to speak disparagingly of his military "pastor and master," for not only walls have ears and birds of the air are given to twittering, but sycophants of rank are to be met with, ready to ingratiate themselves with their superiors even in the contemptible office of tale-bearers. Sir Hugh Rose, besides, is not so immaculate, unless rumour grossly belies him, as to be indifferent to censorious reflections. His age does not save him from foolish flirtations, or from doing homage to the fascinations of female wit and beauty. Acting upon this knowledge, and judging that the consciousness of his own weakness would render his aged Excellency doubly sensitive, Colonel Priestly condescended to make an official report on Monday of a private club by his motion, beyond the contempt of all importance remains to be noticed. honourable and high-minded men, but why should Major Fitzgerald be visited with the same mark of his Excellency's displeasure? Surely he had a perfect right to form an unfavourable opinion of the senile philanderings of his Commander in-Chief, and even to express that opinion in private to a brother officer. He would not the less have done his duty in the inquiry to which he was appointed, and Sir Hugh Rose might have escaped the charge of small-mindedness had he treated the Major's ill opinion of himself with perfect indifference. The latter officer, however, is to blame for tendering an apology for the words he uttered. If he really thought what he said, it was a weak thing to offer a retractation under fear of evil consequences. Unless he felt he had been indulging in the pitiful meanness of backbiting without any justification for his strictures, his true course was to adhere to his words, however much he might regret the publicity given to them. The Committee of the Calcutta Club have very properly taken up Colonel Priestley's conduct, and in all likelihood will declare him unfit to retain the privileges of a member. On the other hand, the Commanderin-Chief is said to have forbidden all discussion in military circles of this disgraceful affair. It were as easy to forbid the wind to blow, or to bind with a word the onward flow of a river.

No fault, however, can be found with Sir Hugh's scathing remarks on the shameful cabals that have been proved to exist in her Majesty's Inniskilling Dragoons. If a house divided against itself cannot stand, neither can a regiment be fit to take the field the officers of which are quarrelling among themselves. That the senior officers should systematically and perseveringly oppose the efforts of their commanding officer to enforce good order in the regiment is, happily, an event of rare occurrence, and still more strange is it that they should invite the co-operation of the noncommissioned officers. If Colonel Crawley erred at all it was in showing too much forbearance, though he may be pardoned for supposing that gentlemen would rightly appreciate his patience and courtesy. It seems, indeed, that he was mistaken in his estimate of the unruly spirits in his corps, but no previous experience could have prepared him for such an extraordinary state of affairs as the internal economy of this regiment presented. The very officers upon whom before all others he would naturally rely for cordial support were those who were most active in opposing him. The Major, the Senior Captain, the Adjutant, and the Surgeon, backed by the Sergeant-major and other non-commissioned officers, were the leaders of the cabal against the Colonel, whose views of regimental efficiency little harmonised with their habits of indolence and self-indulgence. The Paymaster, who has thus far alone been brought to trial and deservedly punished, was, after all, a minor offender than Captain Weir and his confederates, except that he was guilty not only of insubordination, but also of the indiscretion of committing his unsoldierly thoughts to paper. He has found to his cost that it is the letter that kills, but we shall be grievously disappointed if H.R.H. the General Commanding-in-Chief do not visit the other conversation that took place on the previous members of the cabal with unmistakable marks geant-major, that distinguished and exemplary soldier, who was described by newspaper correspondents as having died broken-hearted at the indignity of being placed under arrest, turns out to have been a drunken sot, whose death was hastened, if not altogether caused, by his intemperance. But this is only another proof of the little attention that is due to the violent and abusive letters that are so freely and improperly admitted into the local journals. High seasoning, indeed, appears to be the order of the day in all departments of Indian iournalism.

THE TWO POLICIES.

Injudicious admirers of Lord Canning's policy of conciliation are in the habit of contrasting it with the stern and somewhat arrogant policy adopted by his illustrious predecessor. Now, both were good from the particular point of view taken by their respective founders, and it is equally absurd to uphold the one as perfect, as to denounce the other as unjust and suicidal. Mr. Laing naturally gives in his adhesion to the more liberal system of administration in which he himself bore a distinguished part, and there is no doubt of its being more consonant to the spirit of the times than the trenchant rule of Lord Dalhousie. But it does not thence follow that it is better suited to the native temperament, or that it will be found to answer in the long run. Nothing is easier than to get up any amount of mock sentimentalism, or to "bring down the gallery" by mouthing sonorous platitudes about our common humanity, the brotherhood of mankind, and equal justice to all men. There are many principles in ethics which no one in his senses will attempt to gainsay in the abstract, but which in practice involve points of the highest importance, that demand an attemtive consideration apart from a mere moral enunciation. Very few, for instance, would nowadays care to vindicate the institution of slavery as a right thing in the sight of Heaven. and yet it is generally admitted that its immediate abolition would produce far greater evils than its temporary continuance. In like manner, in many other great questions, some sort of compromise of abstract principle is absolutely unavoidable, unless one is prepared to go the entire length of the ancient dogma, and accept the ruin of the universe as a lesser misfortune than an aberration from the straight path of justice. Let it be granted, by all means, as a broad truth that India should be governed for the Indians, and that the welfare of its teeming population should be the first care of its rulers. There is no question as to that. With the exception of Lord Normanby, and the King of Prussia, hardly any one will nowadays assert that there is any particular divine right, any peculiar divinity attached to the holders of power and hedging them around against profane intrusion. Any Government that wilfully sets at naught the principles of truth and justice is simply signing its own death warrant and lives only on sufferance. In this sense - and not in the clap-trap signification in which the phrase is used by the silly persons who look upon Providence in the light of a parish vestry and themselves as its Saturday. It is true he has gained very little of his severe displeasure. A point of lesser clerk and special reperter—the British Government in India is in the position of a the objection to the infallibility of abstract steward entrusted with grave and responsible duties. Whatever may have been our original motive for settling in India, whatever may have been the true causes of the defensive wars which almost invariably terminated in the acquisition of territory, it is now frankly agreed on all hands that we are bound to use every means within our reach to promote the happiness and prosperity of the people we have subdued by our prowess. On that head there was no difference of opinion between Earl Dalhousie and Earl Canning—they only differed as to the best mode of attaining the end they both had in view. Equally desirous to act aright, they each took the path chalked out by their respective character and disposition. Equally brave and resolute, the one was active and aggressive, the other passive and serene. Equally bent upon ameliorating the condition of the working classes, the one thought more of material comforts, the other of the sham liberalism and the Whig panacea of self-government. The one would have spread the board with beef and beer, the other with a "property" banquet, interspersed with artificial flowers and goblets of yellow paper. The one, like Henri Quatre, was anxious that every man beneath his sway should have a fowl for his dinner, while the other cared little about the fare, but insisted that every man should be allowed to light his fire his own way.

Starting with the assumption that the natives were an inferior race, deteriorated by centuries of misrule, Lord Dalhousie proposed to reduce them all to one level of well-fed animals, until the sense of ease and security developed a yearning for a higher state of existence. He cared not for allies, he asked only for subjects. Even feudatories implied too much independence to harmonise with the sad monotony he sought to impart to two hundred millions of men. The time and means at his disposal were, however, insufficient for the great design he had sketched out and contemplated. In five more years, and with ten thousand more European soldiers, not a native prince or potentate would have remained to exercise even the shadow of independent authority. English prefects and pro-consuls would have administered with strict justice, but without feeling or sympathy, the immense empire enclosed between the mountains and the seas. For at least another generation, no career whatever would have been open for a native beyond the grade of a deputy collector. The policy was decidedly ungenerous, but it was intelligible and practicable. The trading classes and the peasantry would gradually have struggled upwards into the possession of comforts and of wealth, while the ancient chiefs would have grovelled without hope in foul sensual indulgences, till their vices worked out their annihilation.

Lord Canning's policy was the reverse of all this, and at first sight rallies to itself every man of kindly and generous impulse. He not only secured to all existing princes the possession of their territories, but actually enlarged their sphere of action. The native gentry, too, he endeavoured to raise up to a position of influence and respectability, and, in short, so governed India in all respects as if it were his appointed task to prepare its people for the principles. Is the idea of self-government one that can be transplanted to an Oriental country? It is, we know, the one gift that the Whigs are ever so anxious to bestow. According to their version of the ancient fable, it was not Hope, but a Constitutional Government, that Pandora found at the bottom of her box. No wonder she turned of the death-like hue represented by Mr. Gibson! But how has the fatal boon worked in the Ionian Islands? How is it appreciated even in Prussia, or Austria, or France, or, indeed, in any country but our own? And with us the fabric of our constitution has been gradually built up, here a little and there a little, through the experience of centuries, and through a long series of misadventures. It is a problem which every nation must work out for itself. A constitution decreed de par le roi is no more than a literary curiosity, valuable only to students of history. The breath that created it, still more easily destroys it, and it is neither missed nor regretted. But the logical consequence of the innovations introduced by the late Vicerov must necessarily lead to the Government of India by the natives, and this at no very distant epoch. The cant of the day is, that it is our "mission" to educate them for that honourable duty, thus acknowledging at the outset that the people must be Europeanised, or rather Anglicised, by a sort of moral electrotype process before they will learn to value the responsibility thrust upon them. If we are really solicitous for their happiness and well-doing, it would surely be more to the purpose to rule them after the fashion best suited to their hereditary character. Instead of which, we scrub our blackamoor with scented soap, and mistake the suds for the whitening skin. While covered with froth, the inherent blackness is for the moment effaced, but all the while it is there, and is no more changed than the configuration of the brain, or any other peculiarity of physique. Lord Dalhousie's policy had the advantage of being susceptible of modification. It could be rigidly enforced or occasionally relaxed, but for the present policy there is no pause, and no possibility of retrogression. Each successive Viceroy will be hurried on quicker and quicker by the "footsteps behind him," until our Indian empire has faded into a shadow. That that day may be far away, hidden in the gloom of centuries still in the womb of night, should be the earnest prayer of all who truly wish well to India and its mysterious inexplicable tribes and peoples. In any case it is premature to assign the palm to the policy of conciliation over the policy of conquest.

CORRESPONDENCE.

KIRWEE PRIZE-MONEY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL." SIR,-The authorities seem to find it difficult to decide whether the prize property taken at Kirwee shall be participated in by troops serving under Sir H. Rose, or divided among the actual captors under Sir G. C. Whitlock. The principle adopted on the termination of the Mahrattah war of 1817-18 for the distribution of the prize property captured by the army of the Deccan may, I think, form a very good precedent for the decision of this question. The reserved division of the army of the Deccan was commanded by Brigdr. gen. Munro, having Brigdr. gen. Pritzler rate in the country between Poons and Dharwar. When the main body of the division under Gen. Pritzler was ordered to move to the North, Gen. Munro was detained at Dharwar for the settlement of civil duties in which he had been previously occupied. On the conclusion of these duties, being precluded by the disturbed state of the country from joining the main body of the division, he assembled a small body of troops and proceeded to operate to the north and north-east of Dharwar. With this small party he captured the fortress of Badamy, Belgaum, and several other places of minor import. During all this period Gen. Pritzler regularly sent to him reports and returns of the division, as its commander. Gen. Munro ultimately effected a junction, and continued with it until it encamped for the rainy season at Hoobly, to the south of Dherwar. The principle on which the prize property taken by the army should be distributed was carefully considered in England by a commission, over which, I believe, the late Duke of Wellington presided. The decision then come to, as it affected the reserved division of the army of the Deccan, was, that the two separate portions of it should divide the prize property captured by each; the result of this decision being, that the portion which fell to the share of the officer commanding the division was a few hundred pounds, while his second in command received as many thousands.-Your ONE WHO WAS PRESENT. obedient servant. 24th Oct., 1862.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that the gross earnings of the half-year in respect of the 437} miles open for traffic amounted to £239,688. Of this sum only £167,146 was brought into account, the difference, £72,542, having been first deducted from the total amount to meet the cost of conveving by the ordinary means the traffic across the gaps in the railway at the Bhore and Thull Ghats and at the Goolbun ravine. The working expenses amounted to £103,715, or 62 10 per cent., leaving £63,431 as net profit to be carried to the credit of the company's interest account with the Government. The cost of maintaining the line and works was equal to 8d. per train mile. works on the Bhore Ghat incline were in so forward a state that it was expected they would be completed and opened by the end of March next. The capital account showed that £9,654,040 had been received and £8,521,934 expended, leaving a balance of £1,132,106. The net revenue account showed that the net profit from working amounted to £413,202, the whole of which, with the exception of £45,098, had been paid into the Government treasury.

INDIAN CARRYING COMPANY.

The report stated that the whole of the first issue of shares was taken up immediately on the publication of the company. The unemployed capital had been profitably applied, and the se-curities in which it was invested were not worth considerably more than their original cost. A further sum had also been received for interest. Managers of many years' experience in the carrying business had been despatched to Bombay, Madras, and Calcutta in March last. The reports of those managers confirmed in every way the anticipations upon which the company was formed. The Government authorities in India had promised every aid and assistance, and the railway authorities, without exception, had shown the utmost desire to aid in promoting the establishment of the company. Contracts, mutually favourable to the interests of the respective companies, had been made with the Madras and East Indian Railways, which would tend to secure this company from injurious competition. By advices received from the manager in Calcutta, the Board were informed that on the opening of the East Indian Railway through to Allahabad the Government Commissariat Department would transfer to this company their carrying business upon that line. In furtherance of their operations, the Board had rented the Kalai-bridge and Beypoor duties of self-government. But here comes as his second in command, and destined to ope- Ferry, in the Madras Presidency, and in connection with the Madras Railway. The receipts from this source commenced on the 1st of July, and, in addition to advantages which the possession of the ferry had secured, the step was likely to prove a very profitable one. General business in the Madras Presidency commenced on August 18, between four stations on the main line of the railway and the large towns adjoining. Business in Calcutta would be commenced in October, and the company would be fully prepared for the opening of the Eastern Bengal and Calcutta and South-Eastern Railways, which was to take place at the beginning of November. The capital account, to the 30th of June, showed that £25,220 had been received and £2,394 expended, leaving a balance of £22,826 in cash and securities.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On air sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. 22; oc, on cloth, in a case, 22. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, 23. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all statious, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The awaly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been avoided.

A CRINERAL MAD of INDIA. compiled

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honouraule East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, or cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNESIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. Combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrap, it forms an agreeable Efferescing Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and, above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.
Manuscutzed (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) only by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

PRITCHARD'S DANDELION, CAMO-MILE, RHUBARB, and GINGER PILLS.—This peculiar preparation of Dandelion acts particularly on the liver thus avoiding the use of mercurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a sluggish state of that organ or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well known stomachic efficacy of camomile, rhubarb, and gingor, renders these pills the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a safe remedy they will find this medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all nersons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience.

Prepared by W. Pritchard, Apothecary, 65, Charing-cress, Londen, in bottles, 1s. 1sd., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all Medicine Ventors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS. HOLLOWAYS OINTMENT and PILLS.—
BOWEL COMPLAINTS, DYARRIGA.—When these diseases preval inmediate recourse should be had to this Omitment, which should be well rubbed two or three times a day upon the abdomen, and the intestinal irritation will gradually subside, all inflammation will be subdued, and accessive action safely restrained. This treatment, assisted by judicious doesn of Hollowsy's Fills, is applicable to all forms of Distribution and Dysentery, attended by heart sickness, griping, flatulence, and other distressing and dangerous symptoms. After rubbing in the Ointment a flannel binder should be worn, and the patient should be restricted to a farinaceous diet for a few days till the urgency of the disease has been diminiahed by the patient and applicant of these remedies.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE, LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Conste is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confidantly say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some clauses of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics taelf, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1862.

"Many a tourist this autumn will have cause to thank Pro-fessor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . . . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a tour than the author of this inte-resting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1862.

time entertaining and useful."—Athenseum, March 6, 1862.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaffected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enviable talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-beards, and of so describing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. His last ('Memorable Events') is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agreeable, high-minded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and failures."—Spectator.

THE HISTORY of CHESS: from the Time of the Early Invention of the Game in India till the Period of its Establishment in Western and Central Europe By Duncan Forbes, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes a stout fight for the Hundoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the precess and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than chessplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative etymology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the title-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but freshly, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Herald. Nor are these qualities wanting in the work which we are reviewing.

. . Cons dering the difficulty of the task which Mr. Young has undertaken to discharge, and the extent of useful knowledge he has succeeded in imparting accurately and lucidly in so small a compass, we can without hesitation commend this work to the public as by far the best elementary course of marhematics in our language."—The London Review, April 6, 1861.

"As a prose satire, 'The History of the Abderites' yields only in breadth of humour, and pungency of wit, to Dean Swift's immortal travels of Captain Lemuel Gulliver, and of works of that class we know of none in any language that can compare with either of the two."—Observer.

"Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English men and women. Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution to-wards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites: and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to mankind, of the Quixotes', Gullivers', and other luman foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to ou shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old overflowing with wit, fun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of nationa thanks, we undertake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only less we should not have thanked him sufficiently."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received our usual files of papers by the Bombay Mail of the 11th October. The expulsion of Colonel Priestley, of H.M.'s 42nd regiment from the Bengal United Service Club, was accomplished on the 26th September, notwithstanding the ill-judged intervention of Sir Hugh Rose and the protests of Colonel Hatch, the Judge Advocate-general, of Colonel Haythorne, the Adjutant-General, of Major Johnson, Deputy Adjutant-General, and of Lieut. Burne, Military Secretary. It is also reported that Sir Hugh will be requested to resign the presidentship of the club.

Another gambling fracas has been added to the Chronique Scandaleuse of Simla. The heaviest loser appears to have been Colonel Christie, whose losses are variously estimated at from £20,000 to £25,000. Another officer is said to have lost £6,000; the winner, in both cases, being Lieut. Elton, of the 37th Bengal, N.I., who has, in consequence, been removed from the staff of his Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief.

The seige of Herat makes no progress. The Dost is reported to have offered terms of accommodation, which were rejected by Ahmed Jan. It was likewise rumoured that a Persian Herat. This rumour may possibly be confirmed, but for the present we give it simply for what it is worth.

The death of Mr. James Hume, senior magistrate of Calcutta, and a well-known contributor to the Indian Field, is announced as having taken place at Galle on the 21st September, on his way to Europe. Death has likewise been busy at Bombay. The obituary comprises the names of Dr. C. C. Mead, surgeon of the European General Hospital; of Mr. A. B. Boswell, one of the oldest European inhabitants of that Presidency; and of Mr. J. H. Vitters, Assistant-secretary to the Legislative Council.

In the Punjab Commission the following appointments have been made: - Mr. Melvill, to be Commissioner of Umritsur; Lieut .-Colonel Hamilton, Commissioner of Delhi; Mr. W. Ford, Commissioner of Mooltan; Major Graham, Deputy-Commissioner, Dehra Ishmael Khan; Captain Pollock, Deputy-Commissioner, Lahore. These changes will necessarily lead to others.

If common report do not greatly err, Lord Elgin is not likely to remain in India for any considerable length of time. The climate, and other disagreeable circumstances, are not at all to his Excellency's taste. For the present the noble earl will proceed only to Ootacamund to recruit his health, and will confer on State affairs with Sir William Denison, previous to the visit of the latter to Travancore and Cochin. Sir Hope Grant, after a tour of inspection in the Mysore country, Ceded Districts, Hydrabad, and Kamptee, will meet Sir Hugh Rose at Jubbulpore during the ensuing cold season. The head-quarters' camp of the Commander-in-Chief in India will move from Agra on the 10th of November to Gwalior, thence to Jhansi, from Jhansi to Seepree, and on to Saugor, Jubbulpore, Nagpore, Rewah, Allahabad, and Lucknow, where his Excellency will remain until about the 9th of January, when he will return to Agra to meet the Go. vernor-general.

The appointment of Sir Charles Trevelvan as successor to Mr. Laing will cause more surprise than regret in most quarters. There is, perhaps, something almost "funny" in an inambassador, escorted by 2,000 horsemen, a subordinate Financial Minister being succeeded Master Robinson, Master Roberts.

battalion of foot, and two guns, had arrived at | by an insubordinate Governor of a Presidency, but there can be no question as to Sir Charles' administrative talents, or his perfect fitnesstemper apart-for the highly responsible post with which he is now entrusted. In India itself his appointment will be decidedly popu-

CONSPIRACY TO BURN CANTON.

CANTON, Sept. 26.

A serious conspiracy to burn this city and kill the mandarins has been discovered. The conspirators are in league with the Taepings. Numbers of them have been arrested. The city authorities are in a great state of alarm.

Rustonjee, one of the parties concerned in the late opium frauds, has surrendered himself to the authorities at Hong Kong.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 19.

The Taepings have again retired from the vicinity of the city, and the surrounding country is now quiet.

The Mahommedans who revolted at Shensi have succeeded in capturing the city and twenty-five towns in the vicinity, killing all the mandarins, and destroying every vestige of the Imperial authority.

Nothing is known respecting the movements of the army which had been sent to quell the Silk, higher prices demanded. Total export to date, 39,625 bales. Exchange, 4d. higher. Freight, £3 to £4. 10s.

EXPULSION OF COLONEL PRIESTLEY. ceedings of an Extraordinary General Meeting of the Bengal United Service Club, Calcutta, 25th September, 1862.

In pursuance of the terms of an Advertisement, dated the 11th August, 1862, and published in the principal newspapers of the Presidency, an Extraordinary General Meeting of the Members of the United Service Club was held at the Club House this day.

Mr. J. A. Crawford having been voted into the Chair, the advertisement convening the Meeting, the Circular of the Committee of Management, and four protests from officers of the Head Quarters Stuff at Simla, were read and laid on the table.

Scrutineers were appointed for the purpose of examining and recording proxies.

The circumstances connected with the conduct of Colonel Priestley, together with the correspondence to which it gave rise, having been carefully considered, the following Resolutions were unanimously adopted:-

1. That in the opinion of this Meeting the conduct of Lieutenant-Colonel Edward Ramsden Priestley, H.M.'s 42nd Regiment, in officially reporting a private conversation which took place at the dinner table of the Bengal United Service Club, is a circumstance calculated most seriously to interrupt the harmony, to affect the character, and to endanger the stability of the institution. and it is therefore resolved that Lieutenant-Colonel Edward Ramsden Priestley, H.M.'s 42nd Regiment, be expelled the Bengal United Service

2. That the Chairman of this Meeting be requested to take the necessary steps for communicating the purport of the above resolution to Lieutenant-Colonel Priestley.

J. A. CRAWFORD, Chairman.

BURMAH.

When the British Government first declared war against the King of Burmah in 1824, to demand reparation for outrages committed in our territories and on our subjects, that potentate boasted of large armies, rich provinces, and considerable wealth; and although since that period we have twice humbled the pride of the Burmese by invading their country, defeating their troops, and conquering and wresting from them the best and the most valuable portions of their empire, we have from time to time quietly submitted to insults and indignities, and even to this day our Envoy approaches his golden-footed Majesty in the same undignified manner as did those in former years, when the Burmese had not been taught lessons of such a nature as men seldom forget, when the proverbial arrogance of their rulers was at its greatest height, and when they actually believed that they were the lords of the universe. Scarcely ten years had elansed from the conclusion of the Yandaboo treaty, when King Tharawaddy, the father of the present monarch, offered the grossest indignities to our Envoys, Cols. Burney and Benson, who were successively deputed to his Court; and urged by arrogance and with the intention of displaying his contempt for the British Government his Majesty went even so far as to tear into shreds, in open Court, the treaty of Yandaboo, which his brother had concluded on the termination of the war. Our insane and disastrous expedition to Affghanistan at the time prevented us from demanding and exacting reparation for the insults offered to us; and the matter was allowed to rest for some years, until the extortions practised on two English Captains of ships by the then Government of Rangoon roused the British Government from its lethargy, and the second Burmese war was declared, which, as is well known, resulted in the annexation of Pegu.

It ever that great statesman, Lord Dalhousie, committed a grave error, it was to stop the progress of our victorious troops to the Capital, satisfying himself by simply annexing a portion of the country, was constrained to succumb to the mighty ture of coal to a minimum.

King of Burmah's dominions, without demanding | of his Majesty to sign such a treaty as would enable us to regulate the King's future conduct towards us. No treaty was demanded, because in the opinion of Lord Dalhousie a treaty with a semi-barbarous Government was waste paper, and the result has been that, notwithstanding since that period two unsuccessful attempts have been made-though not with that show of firmness compatible with the dignity of the British Government-to induce the Burmese monarch to sign a treaty, our position has not in the slightest manner improved; on the contrary, we have witnessed from day to day the serious injuries caused to trade by the indiscreet policy of the King, and the losses sustained by those who have embarked their capital in adventures in Upper Burmah. For want of a treaty the British subject settling in the King's dominions can obtain no security of life or property; we cannot interfere when the King and his ministers, by a policy the reverse of what political economy teaches us, prevent the development of the resources of the country, and thus, in an indirect manner, retard the progress of trade in our province.

For some time past rumours were current that our Government had come to the conclusion of demanding of the King a treaty, and that in case of refusal, coercive measures would be adopted. Whether such is the intention of Government we are not prepared to say, but that the approaching visit of Colonel Phavre to Mandelay by orders of the Government seems to have created a great sensation both here and throughout India is a fact, and it is confidently believed that he will not return without success. Be this as it may, we cannot for a moment believe that the Government of Lord Elgin would so far forget the respect due to itself as to depute Colonel Phayre to the Burmese Court simply for the purpose of making another and a third attempt to obtain a treaty from the King, without giving him such powers as will enable him to assert our right to a treaty, and in case of refusal, extort one vi ct armis. The Burmese have already more than once duped us by their low cunning, and quietly laughed in our faces, and we contend that for the sake of the honour of the British Government the farce of approaching and appearing before the Lord of the White Elephant in the same manner as a servant appears before his master according to Burmese custom should not be repeated. Colonel Phayre is not the servant of the King of Burmah,-he appears before the king as the representative of a great, if not the greatest, sovereign in the world, and in such capacity must and ought to be treated with due respect. It is idle to talk of the customs of the Burmese Court or of the country. No less an authority than Col. Burney has left it on record that "the Burmese require us to take off our shoes in their palace, not as the fulfilment of a mere custom, but as a means of exalting their King and gratifying their own pride and vanity by humili ating and degrading the British character." leave the determination of this much vexed question to those who are better judges than ourselves; but, assuming for argument's sake that Burmese customs have always demanded and still demand of the representative of other Governments to appear before the king barefooted, and assume a half-sitting, half-kneeling posture the same as a servant adopts in the presence of his master-we still contend that these barbarous customs must be made to give way before the march of civilisation. We learn from history how two great Emperors acted towards the European Powers-we mean the Emperors of China and Japan. No Envoy from any European Court was allowed to appear before his Celestial Majesty unless he submitted himself to the degradation of kow-towing, and only the other day Lord Elgin himself saw the Emperor's Summer Palace in flames, and entering the Imperial city with the allied armies, compelled Prince Kung, the Emperor's brother, to dispense with the degrading customs of the country, and adopt those of the civilised world. Japan, which had kept herself isolated for centuries refusing to hold intercourse with any other arm of civilisation. And are we, in the nineteenth century, to allow a petty powerless tyrant to refuse an audience to the representative of her Majesty, unless he consent to appear in the capacity of a servant? Better, far better, it would be to cease all intercourse with Burmah, and leave to time to do what, for want of moral courage, we have hitherto failed to perform. France or Russia would have pursued, under the circumstances, quite a different course-a course that would at once have settled all difficulties.

Attempts have been made from time to time by certain parties, and by none so pertinaciously as by our local contemporary of the Times-but whether designedly or ignorantly we are not prepared to assert-to represent, or rather misrepresent, the present state of the Burmese Court and the character of the reigning monarch.

The change that has come over the Burman Empire since the first war is as great as that recorded by history of the Mahomedan empire in India during the second half of the last century : and to compare the present ruler of Burmah and his country with the rule of his grandfather or uncle is to compare the King of Delhi about the beginning of the present century with his predecessors, Jehangeer or the Great Aurungzebe. The loss of Arakan and the Tenasserim Provinces after the first Burmese war, whilst it diminished the pride and arrogance of the descendants of the great robber chieftain Alomparah, deprived the Burman kingdom of a certain amount of power and of revenue; but the loss of the rich province of Pegu ten years ago, from which the Burmese Government derived large revenues, has so completely crippled its resources, that the present monarch is constrained to turn a trader and monopolize almost all articles of produce, from the profits of which he manages to meet the expenditure of his palace. Though possessed of a mild disposition for a Burman, and without the tiger-like propensities of his father, he is no less a sensualist prematurely old, than any of his predecessors were, and as superstitious and ignorant as most of them. Surrounded by a host of phoongyees, corrupt ministers and unprincipled and needy adventurers, who hourly gratify his vanity and his pride by falsehoods of a most atrocious nature, the poor deluded monarch is made to believe, sometimes even against his own convictions, that he is as great a ruler and conqueror as ever an Alexander, an Augustus, or, in recent times, a Napoleon had been. Under such a king and under such a Government it is but natural to suppose that the poor people are fearfully oppressed, and it is only a wonder that a revolution has not before now brought matters to a crisis. We have not attempted to draw an exaggerated picture of the present monarch of Burmah and of his court; and we beg leave to ask of every honest man whether such a king has the slightest right to demand that the representative of our Gracious Queen should appear before him in the capacity of a servant? State policy might have hitherto induced Colonel Phayro not to demand of the King to dispense with the degrading and barbarous customs of his court, but we have no doubt he will now worthily represent the great Government of which he will go as Envoy, provided he is armed with ample powers to carry out its mandates; and we shall be sadly disappointed if we learn hereafter that such powers have been denied to him by Lord Elgin's Government, and that he is going a third time ostensibly for a treaty, prepared only to play the old game with the Burmese. -Rangoon Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE INDIAN NAVY .- Her Maiesty's ship Odin has arrived in Calcutta. She carries the broad pendant of Commodore Lord John Hay, c.B., who is to inaugurate, in concert with the General Government, the naval arrangements necessarily resulting from the annihilation of the Indian navy.

An important discovery has been made, by Mr. M'Lardy, of Calcutta, in the disposal of waste steam, which is calculated to reduce the expendi-

THE LATE MR. HUME.—We regret to announce | the death of Mr. James Hume, which took place at Galle on the 21st September. This gentleman's state of health, says the Allahabad Gazette, "has been of a most precarious nature for the last four years, and necessitated his return home on sick leave during the year 1860. Since then, though he came back to his duties and endeavoured to fight against his complaint, he has finally had to succumb. Mr. Hume was a bar-rister-at-law and entered of the Inner Temple in January, 1832, and admitted to the Supreme Court 15th June, 1839. For many years he has We believe been Chief Magistrate of Calcutta. that the Deputy Commissioner of Police, in conjunction with the late Viceroy, considered himself the most unpopular man in India during the mutiny, but we doubt whether he was justified in disputing that unenviable position with Mr. Hume. In the latter's magisterial capacity during 1857 he invoked the undivided indignation of every member of the Anglo-Indian community by reason of the strong bias which he appeared to evince towards the natives; some of his censors even went the length of charging him with treasonous sympathy with the mutineers, but for our part we are convinced that whenever the lamented gentleman erred, he erred conscientiously. Mr. Hume was an elegant and accomplished scholar, and in his time, under the nom de plume of 'Able East,' enjoyed his share of the Indian audience. As an authority and stanch supporter of all old English sports he acknowledged no superior; a long list of journals published in this country have known him as proprietor, editor, and contributor, the last of which is one rapidly making its way to a safe place in public opinion, the Indian Empire. Mr. Hume was one of the few remaining members of a celebrated 'Society of Friends' in the literal signification of the term; in the days of the old Sans Souci, when Henry Miers Elliot, Torrens, Pattle, G. W. Johnson, advocate of the Supreme Court, and author of 'The Stranger in India,' W. H. Macnaghten, D. L. Richardson, John Colvin, Sir Edward Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant, Longueville Clarke, Meredith Parker, and others, formed the elite of Calcutta. In the privilege of friendship we place this tribute on the tomb of him whom Henry Torrens not inappropriately styled 'STURDY JEM HUME.'"

Simia, Sept. 20.—Sir Herbert Edwardes, com missioner of this (the Umballa) division, arrived to-day, on his annual tour, and the petty chieftains of the surrounding hill states are gathering here to pay their respects. The bazaars have been cleaned up, as thoroughly as such sinks can be, and everything made shipshape in honour of his advent. The officers of the artillery, who muster pretty strong here, gave their ball on the 18th, and a very crowded gay affair it was. The walls were decorated with festoons of pinebranches mingled with flowers, and hung with scrolls denoting the many battles and sieges in which both branches of the regiment, Royal and late Indian, have borne a part. officers of the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade have issued invitations for their ball on the 25th, and a wish has been expressed to have as many guests in fancy costume as possible. A gentleman occupying a large house, once Lord Auckland's residence, is getting up tableaux vivants to finish off with a ball in costume. Such are the public engagements for the remainder of this month. I have not heard a date named for the last performance of the minstrels to be given under the patronage of the masonic body. I suppose they wait for a lull in the gaieties now engrossing people's minds. The rainy season is closing; there has not been a shower since the afternoon of the 16th, but the fogs are frequent and dense, and the dews are very heavy. The atmosphere is consequently rather chilly, mornings and evenings. Thermometer indoors steady at 62 degrees, and the same outside, in the shade The prices of grain and supplies are high in Simla, and will be more so next year, in consequence of the large establishments expected with the Governor-General. The present rates are— no earthly good could possibly come of it, for of about two crores of rupees have been pur-Ghee, 12 seers per rupee; sugar, 21 to 3 seers; with the first rise of the river they flew like shut- chased on account of Government.

PURNEAH, Sept. 18 .- We have had one of the most terrible inundations that has ever been known in this district. Not even the conventional oldest resident remembers anything like it. On the 13th a change in the weather took place, and it commenced raining, and the river also rose a good deal, and every one supposed it was caused by the rain, and that when the cause ceased the river would cease rising; but no, it still rose, and rose on to such a height as to create feelings of alarm about the station and inhabitants living in low places. Within twenty-four hours the whole of the old station went completely under water, and the new one began to show symptoms of following its sister's example. Natives took to the tops of their houses, where several families passed the day and night until help was sent to them. No end of lives have been lost, judging from the corpses you see sticking in different places, swept away by the torrent of water that came down: to say nothing of the numberless cattle, quantities of furniture (native), ploughs, carts, &c., that one too, has been seen, in his every-day dress. Who or what he was, or how he came by his death I cannot say, but I surmise that he must have been trying to escape from the inundation and got overtaken by it. We have had no report from outside, and have not been able to ascertain what loss of life or damage has been done, but I am told that up at the north, where the inundation commenced, many villages have been swept away, and the paddy crop, which was just being reaped and had to be threshed out, has all been carried off, or a great part of it. I anticipate great distress in the cold weather for the poorer natives. Two of the station bridges have been carried away and most of the roads so cut that it will be months before they will be fit to drive on. The Ganges and Darjeeling road has been breached in many places, while some parts of it have been completely under water. All communication from the station and the bazaar has been stopped, and indeed even from village to village, except by boat. Several Christians in the old station have been living on the tops of tables, chairs, &c., for two days. All praise should be given to our magistrate and civil engineer, who were seen in all parts of the station while this calamity lasted, rendering assistance and making the police do their duty, and never funking the rain or sun a bit. They crowned their acts by procuring boats, and personally went and brought away several people from the tops of their houses and islands. who otherwise must have perished either from starvation, or the water.—Englishman, RAMPORE BAULEAH, Sept. 17 .- Rampore Bauleah that was is no more. For the last three weeks it has been getting gradually smaller and beautifully less. Cutcherries, circuit house, library, billiard rooms, dak-house, &c., have all fallen a prey to the Ganges, and the jail, with the exception of a few houses, is all that remains. It is now two years ago since the river commenced cutting, and from that period it has never relaxed its efforts. The banks of the Ganges immediately above and below are intact, and it seems most singular that the river should have selected merely the station as its victim. There is a diversity of opinion as to whether it might have been saved or not, but the majority believe that had proper measures been taken in the first instance, Bauleah might have remained as it was -one of the prettiest little stations in Bengal. Let us now look at the means that were used by the Public Works Department to render this effectual. The P.W.D., with their usual foresight, precaution, and discretion, commenced sticking bamboos into the banks and running them out single file into the stream in an oblique direction, to a distance of about twelve yards. This the P. W. Agent termed making small breakwaters, but of course tlecocks before the wind. This work had been going on for a period of eighteen months, wherein hundreds of thousands of bamboos have been thrown away, and thousands of rupees misspent, and most probably would have gone on until the present time, had not the Lieutenant-Governor, who was here in July, seeing the utter uselessness of it, ordered that not another pice was to be spent on such folly. As it was known that the river would yet rise higher, it was necessary that a bund should be erected to prevent the remaining houses of the station from being inundated, and the Municipal Committee made a small grant for the purpose. The person who was engaged to do the work contended, however, that such an amount was not enough to make a bund of sufficient strength. The Municipal mittee, though, argued that they would grant no more money: accordingly this said bund was erected. But they were baiting their own trap, for it was very clear they were going on the penny-wise and pound-foolish system, as you will see what followed. About a fortnight ago, at one o'clock in the morning, a hue and cry was raised that the bund had given way; and so it turned out. The magistrate's, assistant-magistrates', and doctor's houses, also a cutcha cutcherry that had just been built, were very quickly swamped, and had it not been for a body of military police, whose assistance was kindly lent by the Commandant, every deed, paper, &c., in the cutcherries must have been inevitably lost. The result of such an untoward event as this, had it happened, I need hardly mention. So much for Indian Municipal Committees and Public Works. There is some talk of a new station being built at Char Ghat, a place about thirteen miles distant, but I think as yet nothing is definitely settled.—Englishman.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT MUSSOORIE.—Our hill stations this year have been rather fruitful in accidents. We regret extremely to hear of an accident at Mussoorie, caused by carelessness, and resulting in one of the most melancholy occurrences we have heard of for some time. Mrs. Le Marchant was riding along the mall the other evening, in company with a young man, Mr. Parker. Mr. Scott, the merchant, riding furiously along, came into collision with Mr. Parker, and knocked him off his pony. Mrs. Le Marchant was so much alarmed that she fainted, a jampan was procured, and she was taken to her residence at Landour, but the shock was so great that, to the extreme grief of her family and friends, she never rallied. She died on Sunday evening, and was buried in the Landour cemetery on Monday, the 29th September. It is to be hoped that this will prove a warning to those senseless people who are in the habit of riding VICEREGAL DOINGS.—We (Englishman) hear that the steamer Feroze, now and for some time past fitting up as a yacht for the Governor-General, at Bombay, will, as soon as she is ready for sea, proceed to Suez to receive on board and bring round to Calcutta Lady Elgin and suite. It appears that the Governor-General will not leave the Presidency till towards the end of the cold season, as we understand that cards of invitation to a fancy ball at Government House have been issued for the 6th of January. The invitations bear a note "Fancy Dress or Uniform," and the notice given allows time to get "fancy dresses" from London or Paris as the case may be.

THE 15TH BENGAL CAVALRY .- The command of the 15th Bengal Cavalry, vacant by the death of Captain Godby, has been conferred by his Excellency the Commander in-Chief upon Captain Chamberlain, now commanding the 23rd N. I. Musbees, and brother of Brigadier General H. Chamberlain. Captain Chamberlain is an officer of distinguished service, and leaves the 23rd N. I. in excellent order and discipline. Major S. Hire, of the late 22nd N. I., succeeds to the officiating command of the 23rd N. I., vacated by Captain Chamberlain's transfer as above noticed.

ALLAHABAD.-The Lieutenant-governor of the N. W. Provinces has, we (Englishman) hear, applied to the Supreme Government for some manifestation of its intentions with regard to a suitable residence at Allahabad. In making this application, Mr. Edmonstone disclaims all regard for his own interest, and adds that in requesting the information he is anxious above all things to have the matter so arranged as to fall in with the lately propounded scheme, that all public offices should be concentrated within a convenient distance of the gubernatorial residence. Of the excellence of this scheme there can be no doubt, and there can be, we should think, no objection to a similar course to that followed some years ago in the case of the Bengal Government being pursued now. In 1854 a house was purchased for the Lieutenant governor of that province at a cost, including outlay for alteration, &c., of Rs. 100,000, and to meet this a deduction of Rs. 500 per mensem was made from the Rs. 11,000 allowed to the Lieutenant-governor for house rent and establishment. This view has, we understand, been taken by the Government of India, and Mr. Edmonstone has been informed that a residence will be purchased on the same conditions as those imposed in the case of Bengal, the deduction to commence from the date of occupation. We are glad to hear, moreover, that Mr. Edmonstone is not unmindful of his subordinates, and has brought to the notice of the Government the fact that a suitable residence is required for the postmaster and telegraph assistant at Allaha bad. There can be no doubt as to the necessity for such accommodation, more especially with regard to the telegraph department, and we hail as a good sign for the future the report that the Viceroy in Council shares this opinion. At present the telegraph signallers are grossly inefficient because as a rule they are grossly neglected.

Want of Officers.—According to the Bengal Hurkaru, it appears that the paucity of officers eligible to hold higher grades of Staff appointments has been of late greatly felt by Government. Several officers holding Staff employments, who have already availed themselves of Sir Chas. Wood's retiring bonus, and the usual superanunation pensions, have been permitted, and, in some instances, specially requested by Government, to continue at their posts until other officers may be available to relieve them, as has been done in the instances of the Superintendent of the Kheddahs at Dacca, and the Commissioner of Khyrabad. This want has arisen from the retirement of about 300 officers during the last year.

FAITHFUL AMONG THE FAITHLESS.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of India has addressed a circular letter to all officers of regiments which mutinied in 1857, calling for a nominal and descriptive return of all the native officers and men who remained faithful to their standards and did loyal service, and for information as to what has become of them, how they have been provided for, and what promotion and other rewards they have received in recognition of their fidelity to the British Government. The circular states that the information is required for the preparation of an elaborate work about to lepublished by order of Parliament.

INDIAN JOURNALISM.—The following cool announcement appears in a Calcutta journal called the Ryot's Friend:—This time we appear two days earlier, and our readers will easily understand the cause of this early appearance. We ourselves have a mind to take a trip during the holidays, and our printers, mostly villagemen, have got to go home. Some of them have not visited their families for an entire twelvemonth; others want to enjoy the holidays like ourselves; and all are disinclined to work. Under such circumstances we have thought it best to close the office for a week.

Mr. FAGAN, it is rumoured, will succeed to the senior magistracy of Calcutta, vice Mr. James Hume, deceased, and Mr. Wilson, who has offic ated for some time as junior magistrate, will be confirmed in his present appointment. Mr. Wilson, some two years ago, "assisted," with great ability, in the editorial department of the Bengal Hurkary.

meeting of the United Service Club, held on the 26th September, was, as generally anticipated, fatal to Colonel Priestley, and the intelligence was at once communicated to him by telegram that he had ceased to be a member of the club. No military members attended, acting thus, as we consider, very wisely, as they leave Sir Hugh Rose nothing to condemn in their conduct. While holding stedfastly their own opinions on the matter, they, as under military subjection, obeyed of course the very positive order of their military head. Their having acted thus leaves his Excellency nothing to lay hold of in their conduct, whereby he might be able to turn aside public attention from the question at issue. They have not certainly improved his Excellency's position-but they have strengthened their own. There were no dissentients we believe from the general opinion of the club, except the four already known, viz., Col. Haythorne, the Adjutant-Gen.: Major Johnson, Deputy Adjutant-Gen.; Lieut. Burne, Military Secretary: and that profound legal authority, Colonel Hatch. Colonel Haythorne favoured the committee, we believe, with his opinion on the error of their proceedings in a long and elaborate letter, but his arguments being founded upon the misconceived view taken by the Military Judge Advocate general, and being opposed to what his Majesty the Emperor of the French denominates "the stern logic of facts," the document did not bear such weight as per-haps was anticipated at Simla. We understand that Lord Elgin has forwarded to the Commanderin-chief the legal opinion of the Advocate-general which does not coincide with that of the learned Judgo Advocate at Simla, and we also hear that his lordship has not hesitated to express his own opinion against the line of policy which Sir Hugh Rose has chosen to follow. This may at length open his Excellency's eyes to the very foolish and unsafe position he has taken up. He may probably have to thank the very dark lantern of legal knowledge held up to him by Col. Hatch for all the stumbling which has ensued, but the matter must now go before his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, and we shall anxiously look for his remarks. What steps will be taken by the Junior United Service Club in London, of which, we believe, Colonel Priestley is a member, remains of course to be seen, but we have no rea son to suppose that that body will form a diffe rent opinion from the almost unanimous one of their brother officers here. We may refer to this subject again if the public be not already too tired of it. In the meantime the club, a new committee of which has, we believe, been composed wholly of civilians, awaits any movement that may now take place from army head quarters, while Colonel Priestley has leisure to con template his present position and future prospects. Perhaps he may consider that if he has been unable to gain immortality, he has managed to achieve notoriety, and that there is some merit even in this. We are certain that nobody will grudge him any satisfaction be may derive from the idea .- Indian Field.

THE PILOT SERVICE .- If valuable ships and lives are to continue to be lost by wrecks on the Hooghly at the present rate, it would be well for the Government, in an economical point of view to consider whether it might not be advisable to do away with the costly and troublesome Bengal pilot service, and employ the non-commissioned officers and soldiers of H.M.'s 92nd Gordon Highlanders to go down to the Sandheads and take charge of the shipping bound for Calcutta, performing the same duty for those outward bound from this port. These gallant fellows would, we should think, gladly undertake the work; and whilst certainly doing it more cheaply, they would probably perform it as safely as the pilots. The marine authorities here have their hands inces santly full of cases anent lost ships and lives, and pilots upon their trial for negligence, or ignorance, or some other capacity for losing ships committed to their charge. These authorities have just finished their investigation into the total loss

THE PRIESTLEY SCANDAL .- The result of the | beth, alias Sultana, lost in the Gasper Channel a few days ago. This matter of successive shipwrecks and drownings in the Hooghly, after vessels have safely weathered all the perils of long sea-voyages, is really becoming most serious, and reflects deep disgrace upon the pilot service, which, as a working body of men, requires a thorough looking up by the Government authorities, and a much more stringent and penal code of rules than that which now deals with its defects and shortcomings. The pilot service is very liberally paid and remunerated; and this being the case, it is the bounden duty of the Government to protect the vast interests and valuable property committed to the care of the members of that service, in so many cases lately with the most fatal and calamitous results.—Englishman.

GAMBLING AT SINIA.—The Oudh Gazette has never heard of such gigantic gambling transactions in the army being so leniently treated as those of Simla have just been by Sir Hugh Rose. "All India," continues our contemporary, " has been for days resounding with reports of enormous losses and gains at the card-table at Simla, but no one believed that a brigadier would suffer himself to be fleeced to the tune of two and a half lakus of rupees by a beardless subaltern. Yet such has been the case, and Brigadier Christie, the gallant Commandant of Delhi, has, we hear, compounded for his heavy losses with Lieutenant or Ensign Elton, A. D. C. to the Commander-in-Chief, the winner, for £5,000. same bright youth, we hear, has also eased Captain Powell, of the Bays, of sixty thousand rupees. We can't say what portion of this money has been received, or is recoverable, but it appears Mr. Elton thinks he has, upon the whole, made quite enough to enable him to go home for a time at

THE NORTH-EASTERN FRONTIER .- According to the Englishman, his Honour the Lieutenantgovernor of Bengal is in the highest degree satisfied with the progress and prospects of the districts he has just visited. On his late tour he travelled the whole length of Assam, he visited every station, and conversed with the officers of Government, and with the principal residents of the Province, often moving freely among crowds of assembled people, and receiving personally the petitions of those who had grievances to represent. The general official opinion which his personal observation confirms is, that the people are contented and prosperous; that there is no feeling of dissatisfaction or of uneasiness or of ill-will towards the Government; and that the country is as loyal and well-affected as any other part of her Majesty's dominion in Iudia. Whatever uneasiness or excitement there may have been when the Income-tax affected all persons possessing an income of more than Rs. 200 a year, when a license tax was impending, and when rumours of further taxation were abroad, has now wholly disappeared. The disturbances on the Jynteah Hills, which are now confined to the lawless acts of a few leading rebels, who are afraid to come in for fear of personal consequences, were from the first of a purely local character. Only a portion of the Cossyah tribe was ever concerned in them, and they were sympathised with no more by the people of Assam to the north than by the people of Sylhet and Cachar to the south. The threatened inroads of the Nagas and Abors, and the insolent acts of the Bootan authorities on the frontier, are rather calculated to bind the natives of the plains in their allegiance to the Government, and to lead them to depend on it for protection, than the contrary. In short, the condition of the country, as seen by its ruler, leaves little to wish for in a political point of view.

Lalla Jotee Persad.—A private letter from Benares informs us of the re-establishment of the health of Lalla Jotee Persad, and of his return to Agra. The attack of paralysis from which has arisen is described as having been a very severe (38.

journal believes that the following is a correct version of the amount of consolidated salaries to be given for the command of the native regiments, graduated according to the rank of the officers holding the commands - Lieutenant Colonel, Rs. 1,400 a month; Major, Rs. 1,200 a month; Captain, Rs. 1,050 a month; and Lieutenant, Rs. 850 a month. Should the home authorities sanction these rates of pay, which we think is very probable, we cannot see that any commanding officer, whatever his rank may be, will have any cause to grumble.

SWINDLING AT ALLAHABAD.—We have for some days been in possession of papers relating to the great swindling transactions which lately convulsed the mercantile community of Allahabad, but feel reluctant to enter upon an examination and elucidation of the case, until the result of the appeal to the Sudder, filed by Frizzoni's securities, is known. Both the local banks seem to be involved in the business, which, as represented by the papers in our possession, seems ugly enough. We believe the intention of proceeding criminally against the agent of the Delhi Bank at Allahabad, Mr. Vaughan, has not been quite abandoned though we really think the deputed securities will be consulting their interests better by recovering their rights by civil process. However, we shall have more to say on the subject in a few days. Meanwhile, we may mention that, though the attempt lately made in the Allahabad Gazette to make the dark appear the brighter side of the picture, may help to bring the pleader in a few rupees, it cannot serve the purposes of his clients, whose conduct yet remains to be pronounced upon by public opinion, generally very wide awake in such cases .-Gazette.

DEATH OF MR. D'ROZARIO .- We had some months ago to notice the demise of the oldest lithographer of Calcutta, Mr. Black; we have today to chronicle the death of the oldest printer, Mr. D'Rozario, of Calcutta. This gentleman was, forty years ago, the printer and publisher of the Calcutta Journal, which owned James Silk Buckingham as its proprietor, and which closed shortly after his deportation. Mr. D'Rozario was after that connected with the Church Mission as their printer, and continued so till about 1837 or 1838, when he set up for himself independently as printer and publisher, and was soon enabled by the low prices of his books and attention to his business to command a large constituency, particularly among the Roman Catholic community, of whom he was a bright example. Mr. D'Rozario just before this prepared a voluminous Bengalee and English dictionary, which was long a standing publication. Mr. D'R., on commencing business made himself conspicuous by coming forward and openly asserting that booksellers' profits on imported books was upwards of one hundred per cent. He showed the example for a reform, which was quickly followed by the other members in the trade, of selling his goods at twenty-five per cent. only over London prices! It required a great deal of self-sacrifice to take such a decisive step, but Mr. D'R. was a conscientious good man, and he lost nothing by that step in the right direction.' Allahabad Gazettc.

SALE OF KHAS MAHALS .- Numerous petitions from the late Izaradars of Khas Mahals continue to reach the Government of Bengal, praying for redress of grievances under which they suffer, in consequence of the recent sale of the said Khas Mahals. The petitioners state that while those Zemindarees were in their possession by right of Izaradaree tenure, they had disbursed large sums of money on account of municipal purposes, namely, in making roads, bridges, and excavating large tanks, as well as in bringing waste lands under cultivation; but Government, however, to the detriment of the interest of the Izaradars, sold those Mahals, without granting any compen sation for the losses which they have sustained by such sales. On the recommendation of the Board of Revenue, several of those petitions have Board of Revenue, several of those petitions have already been rejected by Government. A few more have just been presented.

COMMAND OF NATIVE REGIMENTS.—A Calcutta | tion, when on the 10th September it reappeared in a bad form in the hospital of the 93rd High-landers. The regiment has been encamped for some time on their parade ground, and it has been found necessary to move the hospital under canvas also. The 21st Hussars had moved out of cantonments into the district. Detachments of Artillery, 21st Hussars, 79th and 93rd regiments are at Cheratt, enjoying the cool air of a place five thousand feet above the sea. They are relieved monthly, we understand, by detachments from the head-quarters at Peshawur and Nowshers.

> BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY .- The sale proceeds of the Banda and Kirwee prize booty amounted to forty-two lakhs of rupees, which after deducting commission of Rs. 1,12,000, paid to the auctioneers, leave a balance of forty lakhs and eighty-eight thousand rupees. The amount realised from the sale of the Bhittoor jewels, belonging to the notorious Nana, which took place a few days after the above-mentioned sale, is about four lakhs and thirty two thousand

> LIEUTENANT JACKSON is still under a European guard, and with a sentry always by his side. Nothing has been settled as to where he is to be tried, but it is expected that, after all, he will have to go down to Calcutta to be tried by the High Court. It is said that he was very much disliked in the station previous to the commission of the act for which he will be tried.

> THE VICEROY AND THE VOLUNTEERS .- Lord Elgin has notified his intention of presenting a prize or prizes to the value of Rs. 1,000 to be competed for by the Calcutta Volunteers in the cold season of 1863-64.

MADRAS.

REPORT ON THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.

We turn to the Report on the administration of the Madras Presidency during the official year 1861-62. We do not propose to take the sections of which the voluminous report before us is composed in categorical order, but simply to notice such as are likely to prove interesting to the general reader.

The portion of the report devoted to the subject of jails appears to be of this class. The new prison at Ootacamund for Europeans and Americans, sentenced under Act XXIV. of 1855. has been completed, and on the 31st of March seven-and-twenty prisoners from Calcutta and two from Madras were located in it. The system of discipline has been assimilated to that of the modern English prisons, and the dietary based on that in use at Pentonville, the cost not exceeding ten rupees per mensem per prisoner. The convicts are employed in matmaking, saddlery, and shoemsking, in all of which they have shown much skill. They are under the spiritual care of a resident clergyman, the Rev. G. A. Pope. Perhaps the good people of Madras will not object to take a hint from us of the Ditch, and seek the services of "Biblewomen," such as we have in Calcutta, whose business it is to supplement the efforts of the chaplain for advancing the moral and spiritual condition of the prisoners. The system, we have been assured, has proved beneficial to an appreciable extent in the Calcutta gaol. The Inspector-general of Prisons complains, that whilst the entire number of prisoners in the Presidency amounts to 7,000, the amount of accommodation available is hardly sufficient for 5,000. Cholera has prevailed in a great number of the gaols, and the rate of mort lity has, therefore, been unusually high.

In connection with the subject of railroads, we are told that the total length of the open portion of the Madras Railway on the 30th April was 362 miles, of which 3354 miles belonged to the southwest line, and 26% miles to the north-west line. The receipts amounted to Rs. 35,659-10-1.

We now turn to what might well be called the most interesting portion of this most elaborate report: we mean the section devoted to a narrative of political events during the past year. It sets out with a notice of Mr. Maltby's report on the administration of the territories of Travancore and Cochin, which is declared to be The efforts of the Resihighly satisfactory. dent have been ably seconded by the Rajahs and their Ministers; and the reforms which have so long been called for in the management of those States have nearly all been carried out. The salaries of judges have been increased, the proceedings in criminal trials simplified, the duties and positions of the several courts carefully defined, and the rajahs "have consented to exercise their functions, as the source of justice to their people, by the appointment, from time to time, of a Commission, composed of the Dewan and other per-Sovereigns sons approved by the resident, who will perform duties very similar to those performed by the Ju dicial Committee of her Majesty's Privy Council -the final decision resting with the rajah, and being issued in his name." We are glad to learn that measures have been commenced towards breaking down caste distinctions, and for putting a stop to the irregularities to which the dress of the Shanar women gave rise. Our readers cannot have forgotten that very lately serious disturbances arose because these unfortunate women, who are of low caste, ventured, for the sake of decency and propriety, to adopt the mode of dress peculiar to the higher cast of Soodras or Nairs, and for which they underwent much persecution and suffered many outrages. The views of the British Government in regard to such questions have been communicated to and impressed on the mind of the Rajah of Travancore, who has been urged to intimate to his people at an early date his resolution not to allow his courts to be used for the purpose of enforcing restrictions in dress, or allow private parties to take the law into their own hands. Educational measures have received the attention they deserve, and the Rajah's Free School is progressing satisfactorily. The study of the Vernacular has been encouraged, and a class has been formed for training lads for service in the Department of Public Works.

From the "educational" section we learn that there are 733 schools (with 29,194 pupils) connected with the Department of Public Instruction. It is worth noting here, that of 4,132 girls under tuition, 2,917 are the daughters of native Christians, whilst 1,006 are the daughters of Hindoos and Mahomedans. At a time when the value of the education given in mission schools has been called in question, the fact that the Church Mission School at Masulipatam is allowed by the Inspector of Public Instruction to hold the first place in the list of "aided' schools is of some value, more especially as that gentleman remarks that the "superiority of this school is evidenced in all subjects save mathematics, in which the standard has been somewhat lowered; but to compensate for this, fresh studies, such as Greek, Sanscrit, and chemistry have been introduced. Particular commendation is also given by the inspector to the English composition of the senior pupils .- Hurkaru.

COTTON CULTIVATION. - " The extraordinary change in the circumstances of the American cotton producing States during the last fifteen months invests this subject with unusual interest, and all eyes are directed towards India in the expectation that she will be enabled to take advantage of the opportunity offered to her to break the monopoly hitherto secured by America. Your Committe regret extremely that there appears little immediate prospect of any great effort being made by India to justify the expectations lavished upon her. The late period of the season when the Government prizes were offered last year precluded any extensive action being taken for 1862, but your Committee hope that there will be more numerous competitors for those of 1863. The following is the progressive advance in the cultivation of American Cotton in Dharwar.

KURRACHEE, Sept. 28 .- Our community has just been thrown into a slight ferment by the appearance in the columns of the Sindian of a letter signed by Mr. Barclay, of the firm of Barclay, Watson, and Co., in which Mr. Middleton, the Deputy Judicial Magistrate, and 1st Judge of the Court of Small Causes, is handled without gloves, for having kept Mr. Barclay, and a number of other Europeans, waiting for several hours at his Court. Mr. Barclay goes the length of styling Mr. Middleton "a snob" and "a foolish young man." It was thought the party assailed would proceed against Mr. Barelay, but as yet nothing has transpired in the matter. This affair arose out of a suit brought in the Small Cause Court to try whether the Government Promissory Notes are a legal tender in Kurrachee. It appears that Kurrachee was included in the Bombay Circle of issue by an order of the Governor, contrary to the provisions of Act XIX. of 1861, which rests in the Governor-General in Council only, the power of establishing these circles, and requires, moreover, that he should publish his notifications in the Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay Gazettes. The Bombay Governor submitted his order for the approval of the Viceroy, and it was confirmed by a notification to that effect, in the Calcutta Gazette, which would have been all right if it had been inserted in the Bombay Gazette also. Mr. Middleton decided the case accordingly, and the Com-large concourse of friends.

missioner has affirmed his judgment. ment notes are, therefore, worthless in Kurrachee, unless the formalities of the law are observed. There is evidently a prospect of rail communication being completed, sooner or later, between Kotree and Mooltan. The chief engineer of the Scind Railway starts shortly to perform the survey of a route along the river as far up as Sukkur, and then on the other bank to Mooltan. Government has not only sanctioned this survey, but volunteered to defray the cost of prosecuting it, reserving to itself the right of recovering the same from the parties who may hereafter undertake to run the projected line. It will be optional for these parties to lay a railway or simply a tram-road. I need not expatiate upon the importance and usefulness of the projected line. It will place Scinde and the Punjab in such close proximity that their amalgamation must soon follow the completion of the undertaking. The Government Indus Flotilla, after a most languishing agony, has passed for ever from Scinde and existence together. It departed this life and Kotree simultaneously, on the 18th instant. The white child at Kotree, we are informed by letter in one of our local prints, escaped from her European guardians the other night and attempted to return to the Punjabee woman with whom she was found, and who is now detained in the Kardar's Kutcherry at Kotree. It appears the girl was persuaded with difficulty to return to the family who have her in charge. The Ferozepore authorities seem very dilatory in replying to the reference made to them on the subject of this child. Our Chamber of Commerce has come out nobly in the cause of the Lancashire operatives. Nine firms, members of the Chamber, have subscribed an aggregate sum of Rs. 3,700. The Commissioner contributes Rs. 250. The amount acknowledged in the local journals already reaches Rs. 4,490. The soldiers are subscribing liberally, and it is announced to day that the sergeants of the 109th intend playing shortly for the benefit of the Relief Fund.—Delhi Gazette.

MOUNT ABOO, Sept. 27.—The weather is extremely fine up here since the cessation of the rains. The thermometer is seldom over 103 deg. in the sun, and 72 deg. in the shade, which makes it very pleasant to the poor birds of Deesa, Ahmedabad, and Nusscerabad, who, roasting under a scoreling sun at these places, endeavour to humbug their commanders of division into allowing them one or two months' leave to the hills. This is all very nice when not carried to excess, which I understand has been the case in Mahableshwur and the Nilgherries more than once, and a little snubbing has been the consequence. I hear for certain that the Governor General's Agent for Rajpootana will retire from the service, and go home as soon as he completes his next tour through the States. With regard to his successor, not as much as a whisper or hint has been given as to who the lucky individual may be. However, they will have a difficulty to find a man up to his work like General Lawrence; he is much respected both for his uprightness of character and benevolent disposition.

AGRICULTURAL PROSPECTS .- In Guzerat the crops promise to yield an abundant harvest. In the Collectorates of Poona, Sholapore, Ahmednugger, and Sattara, from one-half to four-fifths of the land usually cultivated with Khurreef, or early crops, has been left unsown. In Khandesh, removed from the rainy influence of the Western Ghauts, the prospects are bad. It has been proposed by the Executive to employ the poorer classes in the Collectorates in question, already suffering great privations, in the erection of public works. From Sind we hear that much damage has been done to the crops in the Hyderabad Collectorate in consequence of swarms of that old Egyptian nuisance—locusts.

Dr. Mead, who, as Surgeon of the European General Hospital, and in a wide private practice, has been generally known and esteemed in Bombay for many years past, died at his house at Walkeshwar on the 1st October, and the remains were followed to the grave, in the afternoon, by a BARODA, Oct. 3 .-On the 29th September, between the hours of 11 and 12 P.M., several shots were fired in the direction of the camp jail, causing a slight alarm to the residents in camp. It turned out on the day following that a gang of prisoners, upwards of twenty in number, had rushed en masse at the jail door, smashed it to atoms, and made good their escape. These prisoners were Waghurs, and had refused to work on the roads; they were consequently kept in irons in close confinement, but managed to break their chains. Three senovs of the 28th B. N. I. were on guard over these men with loaded muskets, and how they could have been surprised, had they been awake, is a matter of wonder. One sepoy was struck on the head with a chain, and lies in a precarious state in the hospital, another was wounded in the thigh with his own bayonet, and the third was beaten with a chain and nearly strangled. An inquiry was held the next day, and the native officer in charge of the guard was placed under arrest, to be tried, I hear, by a court-martial. On the 1st October new colours were presented to H. H. the Guicowar's 1st Battalion of Infantry, by his Excel-lency Bau Sahib Seenaputty, the Commander in-Chief of H. H. forces. The troops present on the occasion consisted of the 1st Troop Horse Artillery, Captain Brown's troop of cavalry, three Batteries of Field Artillery, and three Regiments of Infantry, the 1st Regiment being in the centre of the line. The new colours, of dark blue silk, richly worked with silver, were placed on drums in front of the regiment. The old colours were then placed on the drums, and the new ones handed over to the colour party, and paraded in slow time from left to right of the line-each regiment in succession saluting as the colours passed. -Times of India.

DEATH OF MR. BOSWELL.-The Bombay Gazette announces "the death, at nine o'clock on the morning of the 30th September, of Mr. Boswell, the well-known schoolmaster, and perhaps the oldest educationist in this presidency. No man enjoyed the esteem, and commanded the respect of the community in a higher degree than did the deceased. All who knew him admired the sterling qualities of his heart and mind, and no one was heard to speak of him except as the honest, truthful, benevolent Christian."

MR. JAMES HARTWIG VITTERS, who died at three o'clock P.M. on the 4th October, was interred on Sabbath morning. The very large number of mourners who followed his remains to the grave,—the unqualified testimonies to his real worth, and the affecting allusions to the loss, domestic, social, and public, caused by his death, which were heard from the pulpits of our churches during public worship yesterday, would have con-vinced any stranger that one had fallen who had been generally and highly esteemed in the community. He held the appointment of Assistant Secretary to the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bombay, and we fear his death is mainly attributable to his indefatigable labours day and night, during the recent protracted sessions of the council held in Poona. On his return to Bombay it was evident to his friends that he had overtasked himself. The reaction was speedy, disease attacked an exhausted system, the mind gave way, and his sun went down at noon-day; he died at the early age of twenty-six.—Bombay Gazette.

THE MONSOON.—The rains may now be considered over. We have had about our usual average in Bombay—viz., upwards of seventy six inches. The following is a comparative statement of the total fall of rain at Byculla, Bombay, for the years 1856-62:-

SHOLAPORE, Oct. 2.—The Governor and suite have come and gone, and Sholapore has resumed its every day routine. His Excellency came by the evening train of the 20th, and was received on the platform by Mr. Phillipps, the Collector, the Hon. Mr. Hobart, Acting Sessions' Judge here, and other gentlemen, with a numerous assembly of natives who had gathered to welcome his arrival. On Sir Bartle's alighting the band of the 8th struck up, and in a few minutes more his Excellency, with his brother, drove down to the collectorate, where every preparation was made to receive him. His Excellency's suite followed, and was composed of Major Merewether, Captain morning, in company with the collector and the Hon. E. Frere, Sir Bartle drove through a part of the town of Sholapore, the appearance of which, I am sure, must have heartily disgusted him; for the buildings are mostly of mud, and low and squalid in the extreme, and the streets narrow and crowded. On his Excellency's return he held a levee, to which all the military officers of the station were invited, and immediately after gave audience to a large assembly of native officials and non-officials anxious to pay their respects to his Excellency. At three o'clock a bustle and noise gave notice of the coming of the Raja of Akulcote to the special Durbar assembled expressly for him. His Highness was seated on a monster elephant, in a howdah of yellow silk. He was followed by several other elephants, carrying his retainers. A large con course of natives met the train proceeding, and, what with salaaming and bowing, his Highness had his time fully occupied until he entered the Governor's presence, who had come to the door to meet him. The durbar lasted half-an-hour, and after the ceremony of distributing flowers, attar, and pawn-sooparee, which the European gentlemen put into their pockets, and the native gentlemen into their mouths, the durbar broke up. The Rajah departed evidently well pleased with his Excellency. That evening Sir Bartle gave another public dinner to fifteen gentlemen. The next morning his Excellency visited the Sholapore gaol with his suite, accompanied by the honourable Mr. Hobart. The return visit of Sir Bartle Frere to the Rajah of Akulcote was made the same morning, and the three o'clock train of that day, which left this for Poona, carried his Excellency to Decksal, whence he intends visiting Baramuttee, Indapore, and Cullush, after which he will proceed to Dapooree .- Times of India.

CAPTAIN THOMAS SMALES, the bill against whom was thrown out by the grand jury, was on the 1st Oct. formally discharged by proclamation. Captain Smales is about to institute proceedings in the High Court against Colonel Crawley and General Farrel for false imprisonment.

THE BANK OF BOMEAY raised its rate two per cent. all round, on the 9th October.

Mr. George Invergrity has been appointed Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium, vice Mr. Spooner, resigned.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Cevlon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Previdency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Proxinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton. on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

ARTILLERY OFFICERS.

The following Military Letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 288 of the 14th Aug., 1862, is published for general information:

MILITARY.

India Office, London, August 14, 1862. To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor General OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

My Lord,—With your letter dated May 15, 1862, No. 179, you transmit correspondence in which the Government of Fort St. George submit an inquiry as to the terms upon which an officer of the new Indian artillery would join the staff college at Sandhurst, with regard to pay and pension, if after competing successfully for admission he should be ordered join the college.

2. On this subject I have been in communication with H.R.H the Gen. C. in C.

8. It appears to me that an officer of the new royal brigades of artillery joining the staff college, royal brigades of artillery joining the staff college, with the permission of the proper authorities, should be allowed to receive, while there, the rate of pay drawn by officers of similar rank in the original brigades of Royal Artillery whilst studying at the college, and that, as such period of service is allowed to be reckoned as service, both for pay and pension, in regard to officers of the British Forces, he should also reckon, as service for retiring pension, the period also reckon, as service for retiring pension, the period of his residence at the staff college in the proportion of one year for two years' residence; as laid down in the notification of the Government of India, dated April 10, p. 65.

4. The Gen. C. in C. has expressed his concurrence

5. H.R.H., however, remarks that, as employment on the staff in India is not open to officers whose regiments or brig des are not serving in that country, even though they have passed the staff college, he does not consider it fair to the army at large to appoint to the staff out of India any passed officers who belong to corps on the Indian establishments, but H.R.H. has no objection to officers serving in but H.K.H. has no objection to omoers serving in India competing for and entering the staff college, if they wish to do so upon this understanding.

(Signed) , CHARLES WOOD

Revenue Department. Sir, - Considerable inconvenience is found to arise Sir,—Considerable inconvenience is found to arise from the civil auditor's interpretation of the rule laid down by the Govt. of India in their letter No. 4,500, dated Aug. 13, 1858, wherein they state that when an officer had, on application for pension, been declared by the medical authorities to be unfit for further service, that officer should at once be discharged, and that if a pension was subsequently granted to him it should count from the several dates mentioned in the resolution of the Surgeon Government of the Surgeon Gove mentioned in the resolution of the Supreme Govern-ment of Feb. 21, 1856, of which those quoted in the margin apply to the pensions granted by the local Government.

2. The Civil Auditor holds that, under the above 2. The Civil Auditor holds that, under the above quoted instructions, he is at liberty to pass the salary of pensioned Officers up to the date of the medical certificate, but, inasmuch as the nature of the Medical Officer's certificate caunot be foreseen, the heads of departments are precluded from making arrangements for filling up the contemplated vacancy until it is known whether the applicant for pension has been declared by the Medical Officer fit or unfit for further active service, and it is found frequently necessary to keep him on in the performance of the duties of his office until provision can be made for filling up the situation. But this is never otherwise than a temporary arrangement, and made solely for the benefit of the public service; and it would save references to Government and correspondence were the benefit of the public service; and it would save references to Government and correspondence were the Civil Auditor directed to relax his interpretation of the instructions of the 13th August, 1858, which have already been quoted to the above extent, and to pass the salaries of pensioned Officers up to the date of their ceasing to be borne on the effective Establishment. Belgaum, Sept. 15, 1862.

Confirmed W. R. MANSFIELD, Lieut. gen., C. in C. Poona, Sept. 27, 1:62.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

This case was brought to trial in consequence of its having been represented to the C. in C., on the its having been represented to the C. in C. on the authority of the ample proceedings of a Court of Inquiry, that a most disgraceful and unexampled carouse had taken place in the native lines of the 10th N.I. at Kolapoor, at which the prisoner, he being the sonior officer present Austrather, certain native officers, and a non-commissioned officer of the 10th N.I.

Capt. Kickland has succeeded in convincing the court that he did not take any active part—that is to say, that he did not actually drink—in the comto say, that he did not actually drink—in the com-pany above alluded to.

But it is in evi-ence that the carouse took place, and that Cart. Kirkland, by his presence, singing, &c., &c., "aided and abetted" in it.

He must, however, have the benefit of the acquittal, although it is a question whether such "aiding and aletting" would not have convicted him if the case tried had involved civil criminality, instead of an offence against military discipline.

While desirous of giving full weight to the defence on the first instance of the charge, H.E. is rence on the first instance of the charge, H.E. is, therefore, unable in his own mind to absolve Capt. Kirkland of so much of it as is shown by such "aiding and abetting" by his presence, &c., &c. With respect to the 2nd instance, H.E. is at a loss to understand the finding of the Court.

It is in evidence, notwithstanding his unwilling mode of offering his testimony, that the Subedar Vard Raj considered himself insulted by the kick he had received, and remonstrated accordingly. It Vard lay considered himself insulted by the kick he had received, and remonstrated accordingly. It is not anywhere shown that the prisoner, he being the senior Officer present, took any step, official or otherwise, beyond using some words of condelence or sympathy towards the Subedar.

It is evident that the only course which Capt.

Kirkland should have pursued was to have authori-tatively broken up the party at that juncture, even if no drink was in the course of being consumed by any of the parties concerned, or any other impropricty or carousing with native officers in the hear-ing of the sepoys had not taken place. Inasmuch as there was no such exertion of authority on Capt. Kirkland's part on the occasion referred to, H.E. considers that the Court has failed in properly apprehending therein the meaning of the second instance of the charge, as otherwise it could hardly have recorded an acquittal upon it.

Of the ultimate disgraceful consequences, for which

Capt. Kirkland is not immediately responsible, fol-lowing on the carouse in the native lines, it is unnecessary to speak here, except to record H.E.'s MARESCAUX, wife of L. M., daughter, at Bombay, conviction, that they would never have taken place if Capt. Kirkland had previously appreciated either MAYLOR, wife of W., son, at Beypoor, Sept. 26.

H.E. sincerely trusts that the lesson conveyed in H.E. sincerely trusts that the lesson conveyed in the foregoing remarks will never be forgotten by him, or by any officer in this army, viz., that in military society the senior officer of a party is in one sense always on duty, always responsible for the maintenance of good order and discipline and for the repression of irregularity.

Reduction of the Golundauze Battalion.

No. 988.—Government having decided upon the reduction of two companies of the Golundauze battalion, the C. in C. directs that this reduction shall be carried out as follows:—

The 1st and 3rd companies of Golundauze will be removed to Ahmedabad, under orders which will be communicated by the quartermaster general of the

The general officers communding the northern and Poona divisions will assemble special invaliding committees, to be composed of a field officer as president, and two medical officers as members, for the examination of the men of the Golundauze battalion serving in their divisions.

All men found unfit, as also those who are desirous of receiving their pension from 14 years' service and upwards, will be pensioned according to the regula-

Men under 14 years' service found unfit will be discharged with gratuities of one month's pay for each year of service, with travelling allowance to their homes, the amount of which is to be regulated by the committee. Men who are desirous of taking their discharge will also receive gratuities at the

The remaining native officers and non-commissioned officers and men will have the option of transfer to other companies, to the Sappers and Miners, or Native Infantry Regiments, a gratuity of Rs. 15 will be paid to each man transferring his services to another regiment.

After the above orders have been carried out, the Commandant of Artillery will equalise the remaining Companies of Golundauze, which will be numbered from 1 to 4.

Commissioned and non-commissioned officers in excess of the establishment will be borne as supernumeraries, and absorbed by making one promotion for every two vacancies.

The drivers, horses, guns, equipments, &c., of Nos. 6 and 10 Light Field Butteries are to be all collected at Ahmedabad, pending the arrival of the batteries of the 14th Brigade Royal Artillery from Bengal.

ie Major-general Commanding the Northern Division will make suitable arrangements for the care of the above batteries, horses, &c.

SALE OF WASTE LANDS.

No. 2120.

From the Hon. A. EDEN, Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal, to C. B. Stewart, Esq. Fort William, Sept. 19, 1862. REVENUE.

-I am directed to forward to you the orders passed by the Lieut.-governor on each of the four questions which you have submitted to his Honour in regard to the Rules for the sale of Waste Lands, published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 17th inst.

2. I am at the same time to inform you that the Rules which provided for the redemption of prospective revenue in Grants of Waste Lands already made, do not apply to the case of allotments made under the old Darjeeling Rules, these allotments being in fact not Grants, but sales of land at an upset price of Rs. 10 per acre.-I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

A. EDEN, Officiating Secretary (Signed) to the Government of Bengal.

QUESTIONS.

1. Comparing the 6th Rule with the latter part of the 12th Rule, how is applicant to an sure that no claim of proprietorship or occupative right exists in the land he applies for? And if such claims are established, will the cost of survey required to be deposited by the applicant under Rule 6 be forfeited as set forth in Rule 12, if the application for the purchase of the lot be rejected? Answers.

1. There are two classes of waste lands :-

(a). Those which have already been surveyed by the Government, and of which a correct map is in the hands of the Collector. In this case the lands applied for can be marked off on the map and advertised for sale, and the applicant will be put to no expense.

(b). Those which have not yet been surveyed by the Government. In respect to these lands which must ultimately be regularly surveyed by the Government), if an applicant desires a preliminary survey with a view to purchase, it is but fair that he should bear the expense, and that risk of the land being adversely and successfully claimed should be borne by him. The cost of the preliminary survey (which is to be a rough survey sufficient to ascertain gross area and identify boundaries) will not be great, and the applicants, with the assistance of the Collector, who also must be satisfied (under Rule 6) that adverse claims do not exist, may easily ascertain whether such claims are likely to be made and admitted or not. It is not only when an application for waste lands is absolutely rejected that the deposit is to be forfeited; but under Rule 12 applications may be conditionally complied with and the projected law will afterwards render the sale of adverse right compulsory.

2. By the old Rules one-fourth of the whole area of a grant was permitted to be held rentfree in perpetuity as an allowance for unculturable. I presume under the 17th Rule of the Notification no such deduction will be allowed?

3. What interpretation does the 19th Rule bear as regards holders of old Grants in Bengal?

I apprehend that the redemption of the Land Revenue of such old Grants will be regulated on the principle upon which deferred annuities are calculated.

Will the amount of purchase money or price of redemption be ascertained on the calculation of the interest that would accrue from the amount paid up equalling the rate of assessment during a period of twenty years, or how?

4. With reference to the 22nd Rule, how will it apply in the following panies or Individuals who tion of their Grants under

2. No deduction will be made on account of unculturable land.

3. The redemption of future payments of revenue will be calculated precisely as an actuary would calculate the present value of a deferred annuity, with interest at 5 per cent. Thus—if a beegah of land is held rent-free for twenty years, at 4 as. a year for the next twenty years. 8 as. a year for the next twenty years, and at 12 as. a year thereafter in perpetuity, the amount for which all future payments may be redeemed at once would be calculated thus ;-

Present value at 5 per cent. of a de-ferred annuity of 4 as, from the 21st to the 40th year... 000 Do. do. of 8 as. from the 41st to the 60th year ... ... Do. do. of 12 as. 000 from the 61st year ... 000 for ever ...

> Total ... 000

The amount will be found to be very small. 4. 1st Case.-Registration is enough to bring these applications under the Resolution of 17th October, 1861. Return deposit makes no difference.

2nd Case.—The same registration alone is sufficient. But it will be found that the terms of the New Rules are more favourable than those given by the Resolution. 3rd Case.—Those who applied under the Resolution, but whose applications were not received registered, had claim to receive lands under the Resolution of 17th October. The Re-solution neither authorised persons to apply, nor warranted Collectors in receiving and registering applications till rules should be issued by the Local Government, and no such Rules ever were issued. Still, where an applicant has been led to expect by the act of a Collector that his application would be complied with in terms of the Resolution, he is not to be disap-pointed. Grants under pointed. Grants under the old Rules may be commuted under Rule 19.

THE BENGAL NOVICIATE.

If young men are ever induced to study, or restrained from vice and idleness by the hope and the development of the natural resources of reward and the fear of punishment, the most sanguine expectations might fairly be entertained as to the fruits likely to be gathered in due season from the new rules presented for Bengal civilians during their period of probation. Past experience, however, is opposed to any ardent anticipations of great results from any code of instructions, however carefully framed and drawn up. In the olden time most excellent regulations were composed for the benefit of the future administrators of India, and nothing was omitted on paper—to prepare the young "writers for the honourable career open before them. And yet, despite the fatherly admonitions of the Directors at home, and the well-meant surveillance of the local authorities, the normal state of these embryo rulers was one of irretrievable indebtedness. It was no very uncommon thing for a youth to have "turned the corner," as it was pleasantly termed-that is, to have contracted debts to the amount of 10,000 rupees—before he had qualified for service. The usurious interest he was compelled to pay to native lenders for this "accommodation," inevitably increased his burden year by year to such an extent that the only hope of extrication was the attainment of high office after perhaps twenty years of servitude in a penal climate. Habits of extravagance and ostentation were also acquired, and Government servants in posts of grave responsibility indulged in barbaric pomp more suited to an Oriental satrap than to an English citizen. A better feeling, a more sensible appreciation of their true position in India, has, however, for some years past been decidedly perceptible in the younger members of the service. The improved tone of society at home has naturally extended its beneficial influence to every region of the globe where Englishmen pursue their respective callings. The searching experience of the Bengal mutiny likewise tended to impart a more serious and earnest demeanour to all classes of Europeans resident in India, but especially to that which was charged with the duties of government. It is therefore not unreasonable to hope that the denunciation of indebtedness contained in the new code will be accepted in a proper spirit, to the infinite advantage of the young men placed in a novel position and exposed to many temptations. The prohibition to contract debt may possibly prove to a certain extent nugatory, but it is very unlikely that that the climate of Calcutta is not unsuitable any one will persist in habits of prodigality for the Cinchona Succirubra, the most useful irregularities and breaches of decorum must of course be expected from high-spirited youths thrown for the first time upon their own resources and liberated from the moral control of those whom they had hitherto been accustomed to revere. But escapades involving no real turpitude will be lightly enough visited, nor is it probable that young civilians will have much ground to complain of the dulness and inhospitality of Calcutta society. At the same time they will do well for their own sake to get clear of its expenses and temptations with the least possible delay.

THE CINCHONA IN BRITISH SIKKIM. WHEN Indian reformers attack the Government for neglecting to encourage enterprise of the country, they must surely be labouring under a wilful or a judicial blindness. Can they be ignorant, or forgetful, that the introduction of the tea-plant was entirely due to the Government initiative? Has it not reached their ears what large sums have been expended in searching for coal and other minerals, and in the establishment of iron foundries? At this very moment a tedious and costly experiment is being conducted at the charge of the Government and under the direct supervision of its officers. At no trifling cost, and in the face of disappointments that would have effectually checked individual enterprise, the most strenuous and persevering efforts are being made to acclimatise the cinchona-plant, in order to render India independent of the Andes for the supply of quinine. After many disheartening failures success appears to have been assured on the Neilgherries, and there is now fair reason to hope that the neighbourhood of Darjeeling will prove not less favourable to the growth of that valuable plant. In the outset several disasters were encountered in conveying the young seedlings and cuttings from Calcutta to the Hills. The stumbling of a coolie caused a whole case to be so shaken that the plants were all uprooted, and notwithstanding the most careful treatment withered away. Others, again, were sorely tried by being exposed for hours to the burning heat of the sun, in consequence of their carriers being overcome by fatigue and lying down by the roadside. Strangely enough, the plants brought from Java were found to be much hardier than those from Ootacamund. fifty-nine of the former only one died, to thirty out of one hundred and seventy of the latter. "This difference," as Dr. Anderson justly remarks, "in the healthiness of the plants from the two places becomes more striking when it is known that the plants from Java were brought by coolies from the mountains in the interior of that island to Batavia, and thence by steamer to Calcutta; while those from Ootacamund were transported in twelve hours by railway over most of the land journey, and the sea voyage only lasted three days. The plants from Java were in addition exposed for two months longer than the others to the confinement of small pots and Wardian cases, as they arrived in Calcutta two months before them." And it also appears employment of trust and confidence. Trifling | Botanic-garden in March were flourishing and vigorous at the end of July, "one of them being then eighteen inches in height, and the stem immediately above the ground one inch and six-tenths in thickness, while the leaves averaged six to ten inches in length and from five to seven inches in breadth." At Darieeling itself the experiment was so far successful that whereas on the 27th of May there were only 211 plants in the nursery, by the 1st of August the number had increased to 1,611, and would soon be augmented, as "in periods varying from three to six weeks the new plants are ready to be artificially propagated in their turn, while the many shoots made by the plants that have already yielded new plants are likewise available for layers or cuttings."

THE PERMANENT SETTLEMENT.

An able writer in the current number of Blackwood discusses, with ample knowledge of the subject he has taken in hand, the question of a permanent settlement of the land revenue of India. That such a measure would be popular he does not deny, though much given to doubt its ultimate beneficial results to the people at large. Individual landholders would, of course, derive considerable advantage from a fixed demand, while the value of all kinds of produce is steadily on the increase. It is something even to escape the annoyance of periodical surveys and assessments, and to know once for all how much is due to the State before the fruits of the earth can be fairly regarded as private and alienable property. But, on the other hand, the experience of the working of the permanent settlement in Bengal abundantly shows how little the native zemindars understand their duty to the public. While left to themselves, they paid not the slightest attention to drainage, irrigation, or the making of roads. In those provinces, however, where the revenue was not fixed in perpetuity, and in the prosperity of which the Government was directly interested, works of the greatest public utility have been constructed at the expense of the State. In other words, the share of the aggregate population in the surplus produce of the land is laid out by the head men of the commonwealth in such a manner as to insure the greatest benefit to the greatest number. Whereas, if a permanent limit be assigned to the State's share of the fruits of the earth, "a class of idle squireens and cottiers, a minority in every way undeserving of sympathy, would be enriched at the expense of the community. who would have to make good the sums presented to the landholders, by sustaining the burdens of 'other forms of taxation.' For," continues the writer in Blackwood, "Sir C. Wood, in paragraph 42, defines the land revenue to be the result of 'a kind of joint ownership in the soil or its produce, between the ostensible proprietors and the State.' But who are those parties so characterised, and whose partnership it is now proposed to dissolve, so greatly to the benefit of one alone? The 'ostensible proprietors' are of two chief kinds; either a corporation of peasants; or-what is becoming more and more common-an individual or family of hereditary influence or acquired wealth." Obviously, no improvements on a that are held to be disqualifications for any variety of all. Two small plants left in the large scale are to be expected from a body of peasants living from hand to mouth, and, as | already stated, past experience is opposed to entertaining any "great expectations" from the public spirit and enterprise of native zemindars, however wealthy and influential. The only alternative is the continuance of the State's stewardship of the common funds, and consequently the postponement to a very distant date of a fixity of revenue. It is admitted by the natives themselves that the assessments in the Upper Provinces are just and reasonable. They make no complaint of the land-tax, or tribute, as arbitrary, capricious, or excessive. The agrarian disturbances that took place in 1857 had nothing to do with "the periodicity of the Government leases." "The leading feature of the outbreak was an attempt to displace the moneyed men who had succeeded to the old hereditary occupants of the land in the course of civilisation." Why, then, should we persist in this most pernicious system of unsettling the native mind with such perpetual changes and innovations? There is nothing that so shakes their confidence in the British Government as its passion for fidgetty, nervous, spasmodic, tentative legislation. All they ask for is to be let alone, without these constant effusions of philanthropy which they neither covet nor understand. Let the next assessment be for thirty, forty, or fifty years, as may be deemed advisable, and by all means let it press as lightly as possible upon the land. There can be no advantage either to the rulers or the ruled in a revenue much beyond the requirements of the State, but there is positive injury to both in depriving the Government of a fair share of the surplus produce belonging to the commonwealth. It is easy to talk of supplementing any future deficiency by other forms of taxation, but the reception given to the taxes on income and licences illustrates the difficulty of opening up new sources of revenue. In conclusion, we commend to the serious consideration of our readers the article already alluded to, and to which we are indebted for suggesting the foregoing remarks.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The directors of this company state in their report that in the Bengal division, besides the completion of the Soane-bridge, thirty-eight and three-quarter additional miles have been opened for public traffic-namely, from Bhaugulpore to Monghyr; and in the North-West Provinces a further length of thirty six miles from Shekoabad to Agra has been completed. The works on the Jubbulpore line have been let to Messrs. Waring (Brothers) and Hunt, to be completed in four years from this time. The total number of miles open on the 30th of June last was 639. Bengal division the average length of line in operation during the past half-year was 3484 miles. The permanent way and works have been maintained in efficient order during that time at a cost of 9 d. per train mile, including the expense of repairing the passenger jetties, coal staiths, and other similar works at Howrah. The working expenses have been 48.85 per cent. of the receipts. The number of passengers carried during the past half year has been 1,035,765, of which 984,123 are third-class, 39,155 second-class, and 12,487 first-class. The tonnage in goods and minerals has been 220,824 tons. The amount of railway materials included in the traffic returns of the past half-year is about 12 per cent. The gross traffic receipts for the half-year ended the 30th of June last amount to £218,773, against £174,675 in the preceding half-year, and the net receipts to £111,884, against £80,200 in the preceding half-year. The net traffic receipts from for by the postman; but, with respect to a stamped lishment.

have been £799,710. The locomotives and rolling-stock are in good order. In the North-West Provinces division the average length of line in operation during the half-year ended the 30th of June last was 262 miles. The permanent way and works have been maintained in efficient order at a cost of 10d. per train mile. The working expenses have been 54.91 per cent. of the receipts. Of 194,908 passengers carried on this division during the past half-year, 188,947 were third-class, 3,871 second-class, and 2,088 first-class. tonnage in goods and minerals has been 57,217 tons. The amount of railway materials included in the traffic returns of the past half-year is about 46 per cent. The gross traffic receipts for the half-year ended the 30th of June last have been £80,430, against £70,324 in the preceding halfyear; and the net receipts £30,271, against £49,730. The net traffic receipts since the opening of the line for public traffic have been £165,194. The general result of the half-year's working on the two divisions of the line, as compared with the preceding half-year, shows an increase in the traffic of 181,307 passengers, 43,805 tons of goods and minerals, and of £18,226 in the net earnings.

MISCLLLANEOUS.

DRAFTS ON INDIA.—As a portion of the India Debenture loan will become payable in 1863 it is thought that the resolution advertised by the India Council that bills are, until further notice, to be drawn on India to the increased total of £500,000 per month has probably been adopted in order to provide for the discharge of some part of the debenture debt,-a course which the largeness of the amount of the cash balances in the Indian Treasury appears to warrant.

MAURITIUS .- (Downing-street, October 25.)-Notice is given, that Edward Bullock Andrews Esq., collector of internal revenues in Mauritius, has been appointed by the Secretary of State for the Colonies to sign in London, on behalf of the Government of Mauritius, debentures to be issued for the construction of railways in the colony, to the extent of £200,000, instead of the secretary and treasurer of the Government of Mauritius.

According to the last advices from the Cape of Good Hope, four of the new French Indo-Chinese mail packets arrived out there after a thirtythree days' voyage on their way to India and China.

THE auxiliary screw steamer Queen of the South, 2,221 tons, T. Thornhill, commander, passed Plymouth, the 29th ult., at one P.M., bound for the Cape of Good Hope, Madras, and Calcutta. She had a full general cargo, and about 120 firstclass passengers, a list of whom will be found in another place. This vessel, one of the Indian monthly line of steamers belonging to the East India and London Shipping Company, left Graves end on the usual date, the 15th of the month, but having encountered the severe gales which have been so destructive to shipping in general in the Channel, was enabled, by means of her steam power, to put back in safety; in accomplishing this she, however, injured some portion of her machinery, which necessitated the delay of a few days for repairs, and on their completion again sailed on the 28th ult., and has made a most satisfactory run down Channel.

THE POST OFFICE OF INDIA .- Our Indian fellowsubjects have, like ourselves, cheap and uniform postage, but in India, as in England, there is a want of faith in the letter carrying. In India the result is that a very large proportion of the letters of the native population are posted unpaid. It is commonly believed by them, "and not without reason," says the Director-general of the Postoffice, in the annual report recently published, that an unpaid letter is more secure and more speedily delivered than a paid letter. He says there is no doubt that the native postmen occasionally delay the delivery of, or from sheer indolence altogether fail to deliver, paid letters. Unpaid letters must be delivered or brought back to the post-office, as the postage must be accounted the opening of the line to the 30th of June last | letter, even if a complaint should be made of its non-delivery, the posting, transit, and receipt of it can seldom or never be proved. Being thus driven to an expedient which taxes them with double postage, the people of India endeavour to give themselves redress by not unfrequently writing outside their unpaid letters the object of the communication, so that the persons to whom they are addressed may get the benefit of them and yet refuse to take them in. 260,000 unpaid letters were refused in the year 1860-61, and half of them "could not be disposed of" by a return to the senders. This Post office report for India adverts also to another subject, not without its interest here—the needless bulk of official correspondence, with the enclosures and annexures. The Director-general states plainly that there would be no such waste of stationery and clerical labour if the correspondence were conducted on the principles by which banking and mercantile firms are regulated in such matters, and he actually inclines to the opinion that the service of Government would be equally well performed if more than half the quantity of stationery heretofore authorised for correspondence were withheld. In India this is a matter of the more consequence, because, of the 43,570 miles of post-roads, the mails are carried over 32,448 on the backs of men. This functionary is bold enough to propose a series of rules for curing the abuse; among them, that a sheet of paper be not used when half-a-sheet will suffice; that the writing be closer and more condensed, and "that no compliments be permitted." The hand of the reformer is wanted in other public offices besides those of India .- Times.

An Indian Prince a Gloucestershire Land-LORD .- His Highness the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh has become the proprietor of Hatherop Castle and estate, situate on the Cotswold Hills, about two miles from the pretty little town of Fairford, and nine miles from Cirencester, in East Gloucestershire. The estate comprises nearly 5,400 acres, with a rental (exclusive of the mansion, woods, and lands in hand) of about £7,000 per annum. The property anciently belonged to the nunnery of Laycock, in Wiltshire, founded by Ela, wife of William Longspee, natural son to Henry II. by Fair Rosamond. At the suppression it was granted to Sir William Sherrington, who soon afterwards sold it to Mr. John Blomer. of Cowley, in the county of Gloucester. A female descendant of this gentleman married Sir John Webb, Bart. (the second baronet of that name), of Canford, Dorsetshire, in whose family the Hatherop property continued until the death of the fifth baronet in 1796, when his daughter and heiress, married to Anthony, fifth Earl of Shaftesbury, succeeded. The Countess of Shaftesbury left an only daughter and heiress, Lady Barbara Ashley Cooper, who was married to the Hon. William Francis Ponsonby, afterwards elevated to the peerage as Baron de Mauley. The old manorhouse, situate above the river Colne, and built by Mr. John Blomer, early in the reign of Elizabeth, having fallen into decay, Lord de Mauley some few years since, at a cost of many thousand pounds, built upon its site a noble baronial mansion, in the Elizabethan style of architecture, called "Hatherop Castle." His Lordship also rebuilt the parish church, which is close to the mansion, and with a beautiful mortuary chapel annexed. On the decease of Lord de Mauley the property descended to his Lordship's second son, the Hon. Ashley George John Ponsonby, M.P. for Cirencester. Mr. Ponsonby having left the neighbourhood, he determined to sell the estate, and it was advertised to be sold at the Mart, London, on Oct. 24. However, on the previous evening his Highness the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh became the owner of the property, by private contract, at the price, it is said, of £225,000. The Maharajah is well known to be passionately fond of field sports, and he could not have chosen a more celebrated hunting or shooting country in which to take up his residence. It is said at Cirencester that Hatherop Castle, spacious as it is now, is to be considerably enlarged, and that his Highness intends to maintain a large estab-

APPOINTMENT .- MAURITIUS .- ( Whitehall, Octo- | ber 31.)-The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Knight of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto Gabriel Pierre Jules Fropier, of the island of Mauritius, Esq.

TRADE OF JEDDAH. --- Among the places from which reports of British consuls have been received at the Foreign-office, and published this year, is Jeddah, which is built on the edge of the Red Sea, in a sterile district, where occasionally several years pass without rain. There are few inhabited districts so completely dependent on other countries for their existence. It is difficult to obtain correct trade accounts from the customs officers, partly from the hatred of the natives towards Christians, and their desire to exclude them altogether from what they consider the Holy Land; but the consul, confining himself to the trade as deduced by himself from the manifests of the square-rigged vessels, nearly all British, reports that in 1861 they brought goods of the value of £672,657; among them English cotton goods of the value of $868,000, and India cotton goods of the value of $320,000. The imports from Great Britain and her dependencies are greater than from all other nations put together. Of the articles imported four-fifths are sent inland, and dispersed over the peninsula. Barley, which is imported from Egypt, is cheaper here than there; the Government import it for the troops, who sell it. There is no fixed tariff for goods; they are valued at such sum as the official thinks fit to demand and the merchant to pay, but the amount is rarely settled without a dispute. The coffee-growing country is in the Yeman, 300 miles to the south, but very little genuine Yeman coffee is procurable in Europe. The industry of Jeddah consists of dyeing English cotton manufactures, fishing, diving for black coral, and fashioning it into beads and mouthpieces for cigars. There are no banks in the country; those who save money usually conceal it in some secret place, and sometimes die without having disclosed the spot. Jeddah has a population of about 18,000, of whom 1,000 are British Indian subjects; and during the four months of the pilgrimage the number is increased to 40,000, at times to 60,000, of whom at least 12,000 are British subjects. At Mecca and Medina there are always about 2,000 British subjects, most of them pilgrims who have spent all their money and cannot return to It would save much misery were they obliged, like the French and Dutch Mussulman subjects, to prove that they have sufficient money to enable them to perform the pilgrimage and return. There is no employment for them at Jeddah; the private buildings are executed by slaves of the master masons, and there are no public works, or even repairs, for everything is allowed to go to ruin. The importation of fresh slaves into Jeddah is now forbidden; but almost as many arrive as formerly, and they are sold publicly every morning. They are landed at night along shore, and enter Jeddah in the morning through gates guarded by soldiers, who could re-cognise and stop them with ease. The climate of Jeddah is trying to Europeans on account of its great heat; the temperature rose to 132 deg in 1859, and many camels died. In August, 1860, * was from 100 deg. to 110 deg. day and night for a fortnight. But though the mortality is great, it is due not so much to climate as to neglect of sanitary measures. There are no roads, further than as the constant track of camels has made them; but the advanced Mussulmans talk of a railway to Mecca. The great opposition would be from the Bedouin camel men, but the prejudices of the Arabs could be overcome were the Sheikhs given to understand that a yearly payment would make it to their interest to prevent the line being damaged. The gates of Jeddah are shut for half an hour on gates of Jeddah are shut for half an hour on Fridays during midday prayer, from a tradition that the Christians might take advantage of the men being in the mosques to seize the town—a custom rather flattering to the prowess of the twelve Christians at Jeddah. The sea on this coast is gradually receding, owing to the formation of coral reefs. There is a corn depot at } Jeddah, not 200 years old, with a gate flanked by two towers, which evidently defended the quay, but it is now 300 yards from the sea .- Times.

A HOME FOR THE SONS OF PARENTS
A RE-IDING IN INDIA AND THE BRITISH COLONIES.—There are Vacancies for the Sons of Gentlemen under fifteen years of age in a first-class School, conducted upon Unsectarian Evangelical Principles. Experienced Tutors, Graduates of Oxford and Cambridge, assisted by Foreign Professors, and a Civil Engineer, prepare the Pupils for the Public Schools, the Universities, and for the various Naval and Military Examinations. Pupils from this School have successfully entered Rugby, Harrow, and Eton, have matriculated at the Universities, have passed with great credit the examination for Naval Cadetship, for Sandhurst, for Direct Commissions in the Army, and also the Competitive Examination for Woolwich, and for the Indian Civil Service.

The religious instruction and the moral and physical wellbeing of the Pupils are objects of the Principal's continued
solicitude, and his experience of upwards of twenty years devoted to educational training is brought to bear upon the daily school life and occupation of those committed to his care, in repressing and counteracting the evil, and in developing and bringing into healthful action the good, discoverable in individual character and habit.

The manson, the grounds, and park, situated in one of the healthiest western districts of Middlesex, are unexceptionable
as to locality, soil, and water, and are fitted with every apparatus and appliance calculated to strengthen the constitution by promoting healthful out and in-door exercise.

The sons of parents residing in India and and the Colonies, who are placed entirely under the guardianship of the Principal,
find a home in his family circle, are treated in every respect as his own children, and joln his holiday party in its annual excursion to the Continent.

The highest testimonials from parents of pupils, and from late pupils,—many of whom are now officers and civillans in the Indian Presidences—are offered as guarantees for a conscientious discharge of the responsibility assumed.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £3; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided. has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £3; or, on cloth in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with collers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN AND CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE, LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo. eloth, 15s.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked Positivism of which M. Conate is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confideatly say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. "Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English men and women. Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution towards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites: and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to mankind, of the Quixotes', Gullivers', and other human foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to ou shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old overflowing with wit, fun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of nationa thanks, we undertake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from Load/m as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 36th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 37th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE budget of news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 8th October has been reduced to a minimum in consequence of the celebration of the great annual festival known as the Doorga Poojah. Commencing on the 25th September and terminating on the 8th October, these holidays, however idolatrous the nature of their origin, afford an agreeable rest and period of recreation for men of all classes, colours, and creeds. But though business is at a stand-still, scandal is as rife and lively as ever. Thus we learn that the Priestley affair has entered upon a new phase. An assertion, it seems, had been made-apparently by Colonel Priestley-to the effect that the "suggestions or wishes of the Commander-in-Chief upon the commissariat question were received with discourtesy or disrespect by the Commission." This allegation is indignantly denied by Colonel Huyshe, the president, in a formal communication to the Supreme Government, and Colonel Priestley is once more placed in a moral pillory.

The disgraceful affair at Dinapore is also on the point of being thoroughly investigated, as General Showers was about to proceed to that station to inquire into the relative truth of the various statements that have been made.

The Governor-general has for the present abandoned his intention of proceeding to the Neilgherries, his Excellency's health having greatly improved of late. And as Lady Elgin is expected in Calcutta in the first week in January, the Viceregal progress up-country will be postponed for a short time.

The Commander in-Chief has decided upon forming a great camp at Lucknow on the conclusion of his tour through Central India. As Sir Hugh happens for the moment to be the most unpopular man in India-with the exception, perhaps, of Sir William Denison and Colonel Priestley - this project is denounced as ostentatious and uselessly expensive.

There is now very little doubt of a considerable supply of cotton being obtainable from India. The news of the high prices prevailing in Liverpool has at last found its way into the interior, and not only native princes but the ryots also have acquired a certain degree of faith in the permanency of the demand. A large breadth of land will, consequently, be cultivated with cotton during the ensuing year, and even now a more than ordinary quantity is gradually tending towards the sea-coast.

Colonel Phayre, the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, left Rangoon on the 16th September for Mandalay, on an embassy to the King of Ava. The acceleration or retardation of the third Burmese war probably depends on the Envoy's tact, firmness, and diplomatic ability.

At Madras a public meeting has been convened, through a requisition to the Sheriff, for the purpose of paying a farewell tribute of respect to the Hon. Mr. Morehead, Senior Member of Council, on his retirement from the public service. It was unanimously resolved to present Mr. Morehead with a handsome piece of plate, and to found a Law Scholarship, to be called after his name, in connection with the Presidency College. The sum of Rs. 4,740 was subscribed in the room.

For the first time a native lawyer has been appointed a Judge of the High Court of Calcutta. The gentleman upon whom this high distinction has been conferred is Baboo Sumbhoo Nath Pundit, a lawyer of the highest reputation at the Calcutta Bar.

The latest accounts from China refer to the discovery of a conspiracy at Canton to seize upon the city during the literary examinations. Several of the chief conspirators being apprehended were beheaded without delay, and extraordinary precautions taken to preserve order and tranquillity.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked Positivism of which M. Conate is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confideatly say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1863.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. His own language throughout is moderate and lopical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. MAILS TO INDIA.	chad

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—These for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 12th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mult. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterrancan and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterrancan, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE budget of news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 8th October has been reduced to a minimum in consequence of the celebration of the great annual festival known as the Doorga Poojah. Commencing on the 25th September and terminating on the 8th October, these holidays, however idolatrous the nature of their origin, afford an agreeable rest and period of recreation for men of all classes, colours, and creeds. But though business is at a stand-still, scandal is as rife and lively as ever. Thus we learn that the Priestley affair has entered upon a new phase. An assertion, it seems, had been made-apparently by Colonel Priestley—to the effect that the "suggestions or wishes of the Commander-in-Chief upon the commissariat question were received with discourtesy or disrespect by the Commission." This allegation is indignantly denied by Colonel Huyshe, the president, in a formal communication to the Supreme Government, and Colonel Priestley is once more placed in a moral pillory.

The disgraceful affair at Dinapore is also on the point of being thoroughly investigated, as General Showers was about to proceed to that station to inquire into the relative truth of the various statements that have been made.

The Governor-general has for the present abandoned his intention of proceeding to the Neilgherries, his Excellency's health having greatly improved of late. And as Lady Elgin is expected in Calcutta in the first week in January, the Viceregal progress up-country will be postponed for a short time.

The Commander in-Chief has decided upon forming a great camp at Lucknow on the conclusion of his tour through Central India. As Sir Hugh happens for the moment to be the most unpopular man in India-with the exception, perhaps, of Sir William Denison and Colonel Priestley - this project is denounced as ostentatious and uselessly expensive.

There is now very little doubt of a considerable supply of cotton being obtainable from India. The news of the high prices prevailing in Liverpool has at last found its way into the interior, and not only native princes but the ryots also have acquired a certain degree of faith in the permanency of the demand. A large breadth of land will, consequently, be cultivated with cotton during the ensuing year, and even now a more than ordinary quantity is gradually tending towards the sea-coast.

Colonel Phayre, the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, left Rangoon on the 16th September for Mandalay, on an embassy to the King of Ava. The acceleration or retardation of the third Burmese war probably depends on the Envoy's tact, firmness, and diplomatic ability.

At Madras a public meeting has been convened, through a requisition to the Sheriff, for the purpose of paying a farewell tribute of respect to the Hon. Mr. Morehead, Senior Member of Council, on his retirement from the public service. It was unanimously resolved to present Mr. Morehead with a handsome piece of plate, and to found a Law Scholarship, to be called after his name, in connection with the Presidency College. The sum of Rs. 4,740 was subscribed in the room.

For the first time a native lawyer has been appointed a Judge of the High Court of Calcutta. The gentleman upon whom this high distinction has been conferred is Baboo Sumbhoo Nath Pundit, a lawyer of the highest reputation at the Calcutta Bar.

The latest accounts from China refer to the discovery of a conspiracy at Canton to seize upon the city during the literary examinations. Several of the chief conspirators being appre-hended were beheaded without delay, and extraordinary precautions taken to preserve order and tranquillity.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE, LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Conate is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confideably say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1863.

Press, August 16, 1863.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and lopical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of arrument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of netaphysics theelf, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1862.

A SHORT TRIP in HUNGARY and TRANSYLVANIA in the SPRING of 1862. By Professor D. T. ARSTED. Post 8vo., cloth, 8s. 6d.

"Professor Ansted's descriptions are written with a neatness attesting the accuracy of a scientific observer's eyes. His volume is one both of value and entertainment: a book calculated to turn the thoughts of tourists down the Danube."—Athenseum, Aug. 16, 1863.

"Many a travisit this continuation."

"Many a tourist this autumn will have cause to thank Professor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . . . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a tour than the author of this interesting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1862.

MEMORABLE EVENTS of MODERN HISTORY. By J. G. EDGAR. Author of the "Boylood of Great Men," &c., &c. With Illustrations. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"A practical writer, with a high sense of his obligations as an instructor of children. Mr. J. G. We can conscientiously recommend it ("Memorable Events") as a work at the samtime entertaining and useful."—Athenseum, March 6, 1862.

time entertaining and useful."—Athenseum, March 6, 1862.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unafected, and from the first page to the last the render is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the envisible talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-beards, and of so describing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. His last ('Memorable Events') is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agreeable, high-minded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and failures."—Spectator.

By Durican Forders, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes atout fight f.r the Hindoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than chessplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative y mology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the title-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but eshiy, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Herald.

No are these qualities wanting in the work which we are reviewing.

Considering the difficulty of the task which Mr. Young has undertaken to discharge, and the extent of useful knowledge he has succeeded in imparting accurately and lacidly in so small a compass, we can without hesitation comend this work to the public as by far the best elementary course of mathematics in our language."—The London Review, April 6, 1861.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE budget of news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 8th October has been reduced to a minimum in consequence of the celebration of the great annual festival known as the Doorga Poojah. Commencing on the 25th September and terminating on the 8th October, these holidays, however idolatrous the nature of their origin, afford an agreeable rest and period of recreation for men of all classes, colours, and creeds. But though business is at a stand-still, scandal is as rife and lively as ever. Thus we learn that the Priestley affair has entered upon a new phase. An assertion, it seems, had been made-apparently by Colonel Priestley—to the effect that the "suggestions or wishes of the Commander-in-Chief upon the commissariat question were received with discourtesy or disrespect by the Commission." This allegation is indignantly denied by Colonel Huyshe, the president, in a formal communication to the Supreme Government, and Colonel Priestley is once more placed in a moral pillory.

The disgraceful affair at Dinapore is also on the point of being thoroughly investigated, as General Showers was about to proceed to that station to inquire into the relative truth of the various statements that have been made.

The Governor-general has for the present abandoned his intention of proceeding to the Neilgherries, his Excellency's health having greatly improved of late. And as Lady Elgin is expected in Calcutta in the first week in January, the Viceregal progress up-country will be postponed for a short time.

The Commander in-Chief has decided upon forming a great camp at Lucknow on the conclusion of his tour through Central India. As Sir Hugh happens for the moment to be the most unpopular man in India-with the exception, perhaps, of Sir William Denison and Colonel Priestley - this project is denonnced as ostentatious and uselessly expensive.

There is now very little doubt of a considerable supply of cotton being obtainable from India. The news of the high prices prevailing in Liverpool has at last found its way into the interior, and not only native princes but the ryots also have acquired a certain degree of faith in the permanency of the demand. A large breadth of land will, consequently, be cultivated with cotton during the ensuing year, and even now a more than ordinary quantity is gradually tending towards the sea-coast.

Colonel Phayre, the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, left Rangoon on the 16th September for Mandalay, on an embassy to the King of Ava. The acceleration or retardation of the third Burmese war probably depends on the Envoy's tact, firmness, and diplomatic ability.

At Madras a public meeting has been convened, through a requisition to the Sheriff, for the purpose of paying a farewell tribute of respect to the Hon. Mr. Morehead, Senior Member of Council, on his retirement from the public service. It was unanimously resolved to present Mr. Morehead with a handsome piece of plate, and to found a Law Scholarship, to be called after his name, in connection with the Presidency College. The sum of Rs. 4,740 was subscribed in the room.

For the first time a native lawyer has been appointed a Judge of the High Court of Calcutta. The gentleman upon whom this high distinction has been conferred is Baboo Sumbhoo Nath Pundit, a lawyer of the highest reputation at the Calcutta Bar.

The latest accounts from China refer to the discovery of a conspiracy at Canton to seize upon the city during the literary examinations. Several of the chief conspirators being apprehended were beheaded without delay, and extraordinary precautions taken to preserve order and tranquillity.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE, LAW, WILL with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo. aloth, 15s.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Conate is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of arrument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics tiself, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1863.

A SHORT TRIP in HUNGARY and TRANSYLVANIA in the SPRING of 1862. By Professor D. T. ANSTED. Post 8vo., cloth, 8s. 6d.

"Professor Ansted's descriptions are written with a nemess attesting the accuracy of a scientific observer's eyes. It volume is one both of value and entertainment: a book calc lated to turn the thoughts of tourists down the Danube." Athenseum, Aug. 16, 1863.

"Many as tourist this autumn will have cause to thank Pro-fessor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . . . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a tour than the author of this inte-resting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1863.

THE SCIENCE of HOME LIFE. By ALBERT J. BERNATS, Professor of Chemistry and Natural Philosophy, and of Practical Chemistry at St. Thomas's Hospital Medical and Surgical College (late Lecturer on Chemistry and Practical Chemistry at St. Mary's Hospital), &c., &c. MEMORABLE EVENTS of MODERN HISTORY. By J. G. EDGAR. Author of the "Boy-bood of Great Men," &c., &c. With Illustrations. Post 8vo., cloth, &c. &c.

"A practical writer, with a high sense of his obligations as an instructor of children. Mr. J. G. Edgar never makes a contribution to juvenile literature that does not deserve a certain measure of commendation. We can conscientiously recommend it ('Memorable Eventa') as a work at the same time entertaining and useful."—Athensoum, March 6, 1863.

time entertaining and useful."—Athensum, March 6, 1863.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaffected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enviable talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-beards, and of so describing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. His last ("Memorable Events") is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agrecable, high-minded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and failures."—Spectator.

By Durgan Forders, LLD., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes atout fight f.r the Hindoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than chessplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative y-mology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the title-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but easily, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Hersid.

SIN: its Causes and Consequences. An Attempt to Investigate the Origin, Nature, Extent, and Results of Moral Evil. A Series of Lent Lectures. By the Rev. Henry Christmas, M.A., F.R.S. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"These lectures are learned, eloquent, and earnest, and though they approach the 'limits of religious thought,' they do not transgress those limits; and they present the reader with a comprehensive review, based upon revelation, of the nature, extent, and consequences of moral evil or sin, both in this world and in the world to come."—Civil Service Ga-

"Mr. Young is well-known as the author of undoubtedly the best trentse on the 'Theory of Equations' which is to be found in our language—a treatise distinguished by originality of thought, great learning, and admirable perspicuity. Nor are these qualities wanting in the work which we are reviewing.

Considering the difficulty of the task which Mr. Young has undertaken to discharge, and the extent of useful knowledge he has succeeded in imparting accurately and lacidly in so small a compass, we can without hesitation comend this work to the public as by far the best elementary course of mathematics in our language."—The London Review, April 6, 1861.

"It is a book that we can sincerely recommend, not only to those who are desirous of abundant and reliable information respecting the social economy of the Russian people, but to those who seek an entertaining volume, that may be perued in any part with both profit and amusement."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

"This is not only one of the most amusing books that we have read for a long time, but also the best and most reliable account of Russian life and manners which has thierto been given to the public."—Spectator.

"The tone is so genial the descriptions are so vigorously touched, and the author's perfect acquaintance with his subject is so marked throughout, that his sketches are sure to delight any one into whose hands they may fall."—Literary Gazette.

Translated from the German of C. M. von Wieland. By the Rev. H. CHRISTMAS. 2 vols., post 8vo., cloth, 18s.

"As a proce satire, 'The History of the Abderites' yields only in breadth of humour, and pungency of wit, to Dean Swift's immortal travels of Captain Lemuel Gulliver; and of works of that class we know of none in any language that can compare with either of the two."—Observer.

works of that class we show of more in any singuage tast can compare with either of the two."—Observer.

"Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many and women. Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution to-departed this life without having made any contribution to-wards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites: and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to maximd, of the Quixotes', Gullivers', and other Luman foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to ou shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old overflowing with wit, fun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of nationa thanks, we undertake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE budget of news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 8th October has been reduced to a minimum in consequence of the celebration of the great annual festival known as the Doorga Poojah. Commencing on the 25th September and terminating on the 8th October, these holidays, however idolatrous the nature of their origin, afford an agreeable rest and period of recreation for men of all classes, colours, and creeds. But though business is at a stand-still, scandal is as rife and lively as ever. Thus we learn that the Priestley affair has entered upon a new phase. An assertion, it seems, had been made—apparently by Colonel Priestley-to the effect that the "suggestions or wishes of the Commander-in-Chief upon the commissariat question were received with discourtesy or disrespect by the Commission." This allegation is indignantly denied by Colonel Huyshe, the president, in a formal communication to the Supreme Government, and Colonel Priestley is once more placed in a moral pillory.

The disgraceful affair at Dinapore is also on the point of being thoroughly investigated, as General Showers was about to proceed to that station to inquire into the relative truth of the various statements that have been made.

The Governor-general has for the present abandoned his intention of proceeding to the Neilgherries, his Excellency's health having greatly improved of late. And as Lady Elgin is expected in Calcutta in the first week in January, the Viceregal progress up-country will be postponed for a short time.

The Commander in-Chief has decided upon forming a great camp at Lucknow on the conclusion of his tour through Central India. As Sir Hugh happens for the moment to be the most unpopular man in India-with the exception, perhaps, of Sir William Denison and Colonel Priestley - this project is denounced as ostentatious and uselessly expensive.

There is now very little doubt of a considerable supply of cotton being obtainable from India. The news of the high prices prevailing in Liverpool has at last found its way into the interior, and not only native princes but the ryots also have acquired a certain degree of faith in the permanency of the demand. A large breadth of land will, consequently, be cultivated with cotton during the ensuing year, and even now a more than ordinary quantity is gradually tending towards the sea-coast.

Colonel Phayre, the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, left Rangoon on the 16th September for Mandalay, on an embassy to the King of Ava. The acceleration or retardation of the third Burmese war probably depends on the Envoy's tact, firmness, and diplomatic ability.

At Madras a public meeting has been convened, through a requisition to the Sheriff, for the purpose of paying a farewell tribute of respect to the Hon. Mr. Morehead, Senior Member of Council, on his retirement from the public service. It was unanimously resolved to present Mr. Morehead with a hand-some piece of plate, and to found a Law Scholarship, to be called after his name, in connection with the Presidency College. The sum of Rs. 4,740 was subscribed in the room.

For the first time a native lawyer has been appointed a Judge of the High Court of Calcutta. The gentleman upon whom this high distinction has been conferred is Baboo Sumbhoo Nath Pundit, a lawyer of the highest reputation at the Calcutta Bar.

The latest accounts from China refer to the discovery of a conspiracy at Canton to seize upon the city during the literary examinations. Several of the chief conspirators being apprehended were beheaded without delay, and extraordinary precautions taken to preserve order and tranquillity.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE, LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo. eloth, 15s.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Comte is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty reatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1863.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of netaphysics taelf, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1862.

A SHORT TRIP in HUNGARY and TRANSYLVANIA in the SPRING of 1862. By Professor D. T. Ansted. Post 8vo., cloth, 8s. 6d.

"Professor Ansted's descriptions are written with a neatness attesting the accuracy of a scientific observer's eyes. His volume is one both of value and entertainment: a book calculated to turn the thoughts of tourists down the Danube."—Athenæum, Aug. 16, 1863.

"Many a tourist this autumn will have cause to thank Professor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a four than the author of this interesting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1862.

MEMORABLE EVENTS of MODERN HISTORY. By J. G. EDGAR. Author of the "Boy-hood of Great Men," &c., &c. With Illustrations. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"A practical writer, with a high sense of his obligations as an instructor of children. Mr. J. G. We can conscientiously recommend it ('Memorable Events') as a work at the same time entertaining and useful."—Athenseum, March 6, 1862.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaftected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enviable talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-beards, and of so describing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. His last ('Memorable Events') is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an carnest, agreeable, high-minded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and failures."—Spectator.

By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes a stout fight for the Hindoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He ahows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than chessplaying, for it wolves dissertations on ethnology, comparative y mology; it wolves dissertations on ethnology, comparative y-mology; the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the title-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but easily, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Herald.

Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution towards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites: and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to mankind, of the Quixotes', Gullivers', and other Luman foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to ou shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old overflowing with wit, fun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of nationa thanks, we undertake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."—London Review. fearing only lest v —London Review.

THE TELEGRAPH THROUGH PERSIA. It will not be forgotten that on the re-organisation of the Indian Electric Telegraph Department Major Patrick Stewart was deputed to Persia, with what was at the time considered an efficient staff, for the purpose of surveying the proposed line from Kurrachee to Bagdad. Major Stewart took his departure from Bombay in due course and sailed, believing that he had no difficulties to overcome but those arising from the nature of the countries through which his operations were to be carried. These difficulties, great as they promised to be, were far from being viewed as insurmountable; they were those which in all countries remote from civilisation have to be contended with-the ignorance, bigotry, and aversion to innovation of the people; the absence of all desire on their part to facilitate operations, and the presence of a decidedly hostile feeling actuating all their intercourse with foreigners. Out of such feelings many obstacles to success on the part of Major Stewart and his party were not unreasonably anticipated. It was foreseen that difficulties would arise in procuring the means of transport for the telegraphic wires and posts, if not also for the conveyance of such necessaries as are indispensable to the exploring party. Apart, too, from such incidental obstacles to success, it was felt that among nations bordering on our possessions in Scinde, and in those countries penetrated by our troops in the recent military expedition to Persia, a decidedly hostile feeling would be entertained towards those who, according to Eastern notions, enter a land in the pursuit of peaceful callings, and end by a recourse to the sword in order to avenge real or imaginary insults or wrongs, a recourse which results in the overthrow of the existent govern ment, and the ultimate annexation of the country to the possessions of the British Crown. These were certainly no light obstacles to be overcome, and their importance was doubtless duly felt and weighed by Major Stewart. Undaunted, however, by what would have deterred less enterprising and energetic spirits, he embarked with his small staff full of anticipations of ultimate success. To give importance to Major Stewart's mission he was appointed assistant to the British Diplo matic Agent at the Court of Teheran, this appointment being calculated not only to cause his being treated with respect by the people through whose territories he was to pass but likewise from his bearing letters accrediting him to the Shah of Persia, to insure his requirements being met, so far as might prove feasible, by the local authorities. Major Stewart at once found it necessary to place himself in communication with the British Envoy at the Persian Court, and on doing so found that difficulties had arisen which promised to put a stop to the work he had left India to carry out. It had been intended to carry the line of telegraph wires from Bagdad to Kurrachee, through Ispahan, Teheran, and Shiraz to the entrance to the Persian Gulf, and thence along the sea coast of Beloochistan to its destination on British ter-The work involved considerable outlay and much labour. The jealousy of the Persian Government of the introduction of European officers, even as a temporary measure, on "the soil of Iran" was in itself a bar of no ordinary difficulty to overcome. At one time it was confidently hoped that the opposition of a bigoted clique about the person of the Persian monarch would be defeated, or, at any rate, that it might be overcome by means only employed in Eastern courts; but after considerable alternation of hope and fear, so many obstacles were thrown in the way of success, and so much valuable time was being lost, that the British representatives at Teheran decided on seeking for the accomplishment of their purpose in some other direction. On the arrival of Major Stewart at the Persian Court, he found that the proposed route through Persia and Beloochistan was both diplomatically

the opposition of the Persian government to the | has been selected to bring order out of chaos in continuation of the line from Bagdad to Kurrachee through Persia promises to continue indefinitely, a new route shall be sought along the Southern shore of the Persian Gulf till it strikes the Arabian Sea at Ras-al-had, from whence it shall be continued by a cable laid well within sound-In the first place, therefore, from Bagdad the line will have to diverge to Ali, which is to the west of the Euphrates, and on the borders of Arabia, and thence be carried through friendly territories to the Arabian Sea. The cable, from the point on the coast selected for its departure, will cross the entrance to the Gulf, and thence be carried well within soundings along the coast of Beloochistan, terminating on the Scinde coast either above or at Kurrachee. In furtherance of this object Major Stewart is now in England; but recent advices lead us to believe that he will speedily take his departure for Bagdad and the Euphrates Valley, armed with full authority to carry out the scheme as now proposed. It is greatly to be regretted that any difficulty should have arisen between England and Persia on a subject of so much importance to both countries,—of importance to England, as it promised to place her in speedy and in prompt communication with all her possessions east of the Cape; and to Persia, inasmuch as it could not fail to bring about that enlightenment which is the precursor of civilisation, without which she can never rise in the scale of nations. -Englishman.

OUR FEUDATORIES-REWAH.

So far as India proper is concerned, what is popularly called the policy of annexation may be considered at an end. In all our eastern empire there is neither king nor sovereign prince. last of the Great Moguls staked his shadowy title upon a rebellion, and lost it. The only king in the country, whom we ourselves had elevated to that dignity from being a mere Nawab-Wuzeer, or chief-commissioner of the Delhi potentate, wiped out his sovereignty in prolonged anarchy. Great nobles, whose fathers derived their power from and pledged their allegiance to such con-querors as the Moguls, the Peishwas and the Dourani monarchs, have become the feudatories of a Sovereign on whose empire the sun never sets. So long as they are faithful; so long as, unlike the Nizam, they abstain from attempting to dishonour that Sovereign and her representatives; or, unlike Holkar, from reviving a course of oppression which must end in anarchy, their feudatory rights are as secure as the stability of their Sovereign's throne. Gross and continued misgovernment, deliberate and open disloyalty alone, will revive the policy of annexation.

Ours is now the more pleasant task of encouraging our feudatories to improve their vast estates, to make their numerous tenantry happy and enrich themselves. The noble who now secures an annual revenue of a quarter of a million sterling by acts which ruin his people and dry up the resources of his property, must be taught by our influence and example how to double that income not only without oppression, but while he trebles the wealth and happiness of his people. This duty of indirectly improving what are called the Native States can best be discharged not by the Government of India alone, but by the Residents and Political Agents at native courts. keystone of our success and prestige in India is the influence of individual officers, not of systems of administration. And as we look over the list of officers entrusted with the vast power for evil or good which a Political Agent possesses, we are glad to be able to believe that the honour and duty of England in the matter of her Indian In the Punfeudatories are in safe keeping. jab nothing could be more gratifying than the progress in enlightenment made by chiefs like Kupporthulla, Puttialla, Nabha, and Jheend. In Rajpootana Brigadier Lawrence plays his part well with nobles who are the great representatives of Hindoo power. In Central India Major Meade proves himself fit for his important posi-

Kattvawar. We wait to see whether Mr. Bowring will justify Lord Canning's selection of him for Mysore, the aged Rajah of which must soon allow this garden of India to be governed like the rest of the empire. The regret expressed by all classes at the necessity which forced Mr. Maltby to leave Travancore and Cochin will be lessened only if Mr. Fisher, his successor, continues in the same path. Hyderabad alone waits the appointment of an officer who will make the Nizam's administration at least as enlightened and as susceptible to Western influences as the Porte. For the Nizam's country is to the rest of our empire even more than Turkey is to Europe-its "sick man," its danger, its reproach.

One of the first of the Native States in this new era of progress which has begun to dawn is Rewah, and the fact is the more remarkable that its Rajah is afflicted with a wasting disease which might be supposed to damp his energy. Shut in by Mirzapore, Allahabad and the Saugor territory, consisting chiefly of such ranges of hills as the Bindachal, the Punnah and the Kymore, and destitute of navigable rivers, Rewah is yet a very mine of wealth some ten thousand square miles in area. Its diamonds have glittered on the dusky forms of the beauties of the harem; the cotton grown on its higher regions was at one time unsurpassed for fineness of fibre, and was preferred by the brocaders of Benares; and its densely wooded forests are now yielding to the axe of the railway contractor. The day cannot be far distant when its coal and its copper will prove richer sources of wealth than all the diamonds of Punsh, and its cotton be exported to Calcutta in large quantities. Here, too, we see the influence of a Political Agent. In 1856 there was the greatest dislike to our Government existing anywhere. Captain W Osborne accompanied the Rajah with a camp of about 6,000 men to Pooree, and was fortunate enough to obtain his full confidence and the respect of his nobles, which in 1857 stood us in good turn, for it was through the Rajah placing his troops at the agent's disposal, and permitting us to recruit in his country, that we were enabled to re-open the Great Deccan Road, and restore order in the Myhew and Bijirassagurh districts. When the agent first went he found the country badly managed, for the minister was ignorant and corrupt. Now the minister is a clever, honest man, and the Rajah works himself instead of leaving everything to others. He has established a public hospital, which is attended by the residency surgeon. Despite the rebellion which prevented any improvements from being effected the progress made by Rewah has been great. Many of the old and severe laws have been abolished, such as death for adultery, and justice is now much better administered.

Rewah, in 1856 the most hostile of all native States to the British Government, detesting in novations and changes, in 1862 has given the land required for the railway, and was the first to abolish the heavy transit duties on cotton. Its south-east and north-west portions abound in Saul and Teak, warranted with care to last for ever. The Rajah is about to apply to Government for an officer to be appointed forest ranger, another step towards the opening out of the country. He is also about to obtain a steam saw mill from England, so that the railway requirements will all be met. He is about to rent his coal fields to the railway company, a fixed royalty to be paid by them, and he pays half of the cost of the construction of a road to the fields. Iron of first-rate quality exists all around the coal, and will be speedily worked. Copper, too, has been lately found near the coal mines. The coal fields in Schajpore and Marwar were discovered by the agent, the geological survey was then sent down, the coal was tried by the railway company and found excellent. In a few years we hope to see Rewah with large iron and copper works on foot, the coal mines fully wrought, and the country in every way much improved. American cottonseed grows well, and though, owing to the imand officially closed, and negotiations virtually tion. We should regret that Gwalior has been mense quantity of rain, the indigenous cotton suspended. It has since been proposed that, as deprived of Major Keatinge were it not that he has suffered severely, the American has such ceeded. The mares of the Rewah territory have always been noted; the Rajah is now improving the breed, having some first-rate Arab stallions for the purpose.

Rewah is on the high road to Central India and Bombay, and as the jealousy of the chief disappears before our good faith and wise manage ment, we may expect to see it still more opened up by roads. It will partake, too, of the prosperity of the central provinces around it, and may find another outlet, besides the Ganges and the railway, by the Mahanuddy, the navigation of which is almost as important as that of the Go-The present chief, Baba Ragho Raj davery. Singh, is the representative, though not the descendant, of the dynasty which raised Rewah to such splendour as to attract the Nubian geographer Edrisi who visited it. Then the chief was a Buddhist; may we hope that when Rewah attains more than its former prosperity its ruler will be a Christian.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW TRANSIT UP-COUNTRY. - Officers and soldiers who in future may have to proceed upcountry to join their regiments, or who may be bound from the North-west for the presidency or the lower military stations, will be glad to learn that the semi-barbarous institution known as the government bullock-train, for the conveyance of troops, by the Grand Trunk Road to the Upper Provinces, is now a thing of the past, and will ply no more. Instead of, as heretofore, creeping along the road at an average rate of about twenty miles a day, all troops moving up or down country will travel a hundred miles a-day by the East Indian Railway; and the Commander-in-Chief has sanctioned the division of the route as follows, from the Presidency up, and from Benares down :- The first day's halt from Calcutta will be Sinthia; second day Bhaugulpore; third Dinapore; fourth Benares; and the reverse in coming down. At the intermediate stations on the line will be resting-places, with a medical officer, hospital. &c., for each, so as to receive and treat the sick of detachments not accompanied by a surgeon, or those whom it may be necessary to leave behind on account of more serious and prolonged illness. For the present, the terminus of the railway route will be Bhaugulpore, the line not being open to Benares; but before the end of the coming cold season, the entire length to that city will be traversible for the troops. Until this shall have been accomplished, detachments going up-country will embark on board river steamers at Bhaugulpore, and proceed thence by water to Benares. The advantages of this new transit, and of the abolition of the crawling bullock-train for the conveyance of troops upcountry, cannot be over-rated; suffice it to say, that twenty days' journey are reduced to four, and will eventually be further abbreviated. The first detachment of troops for the Upper Provinces by the new route will start from Chinsurah on the 15th of this month.

SLEEPERS .- Every wooden sleeper on an Indian Railway costs from three to four rupees. The supply of wood is fast becoming exhausted, while sleepers require to be renewed every six years, and according to Mr. Turnbull, the chief engineer, such renewal will cost twelve and a half lakhs of runees annually on the East Indian line alone. These facts invest the question of sleepers with a serious interest for the Indian public. The difficulty of finding wood, at once cheap, durable, and in sufficient quantity, has led to experiments with iron sleepers, the rails being laid above iron supports like inverted saucers, but these are far from satisfactory. There being objections to wood and iron, why not try stone? The earliest railways in England were laid down on stone blocks by the Stephensons, but wood was soon found to be so much more elastic, that stone was not persevered with. But there is no reason why the rigidity and other objections to stone sleepers should not be overcome when such vast interests are at stake. If stone can be made into good sleepers there is no limit to the quantity that may be stones are as rare and almost as precious as diamonds. We are accordingly glad to see in the Gazette that Mr. Lackland, a civil engineer, has taken out a patent for certain improvements to the ordinary railway chair and to the rail joint, whereby, as the specification describes, "the rail is held firmly in its position without the use of wooden keys: also the objections existing hitherto against stone block sleepers are entirely obviated, rendering the railroad with stone block sleepers more smooth and pleasant than the railroad with wood sleepers. The form of the rail joint is so altered that in conjunction with the improved chair the ends of the two rails at the joint are held always in the same plane without the use of flishing plates and bolts as at present used." We need not describe the "chair," but for stone block sleepers, the plinth at that part upon which the rail rests is made for the insertion of a cushion of lead, or other substance equally tenacious and elastic, whereby the contact between the underside of the rail and the upper part of the chair is prevented. At curves and other places tie rods would be required, and provision is made for them. The rails would thus rest on blocks of stone thirty by eighteen inches and one foot thick, placed on good ballast or concrete. Much of what is called "packing" would be unnecessary, and the rail would be held more firmly in its position while plates and bolts would be dispensed with. Thus the matter of sleepers is so important, that a trial of the stone blocks should be made sufficiently long and extensive to test the value of the new patent,-Friend of India.

COMMUNICATION WITH THIRET .- We ( Friend of India) are glad to learn from the spot that the work on the Thibet Road is progressing rapidly. The men of the Pioneers work well, and the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab is satisfied. Colonel Torrens, in his interesting book on Ladak, directs attention to the Chandra river at Koksar as so serious an obstacle to the trade in wool between the Hills and Umritsur that merchants take their produce to Kashmere and pay heavy dues rather than face the passage of the river. Our Government has often been urged to make a bridge here, but in vain. Hence the pushm wool used in Umritsur for shawls is inferior, the merchants being dependent on the small quantities smuggled from the Chinese frontier through Kunawar. Besides the Thibet Road, planned by Lord Dalhousie, the transit from the wool-producing countries via Koksar should be facilitated. The Governments of Kashmir and China appear to play into each other's hands, the Chinese prohibiting all traffic from their territory save through Ladak, thus enabling the Kashmere ruler to monopolize almost the entire trade, in which he is virtually assisted by the Indian Government.

QUIS CUSTODIET IPSOS CUSTODES?—So little is the schoolmaster abroad, even among native schoolmasters themselves, that one of the latter was lately deluded into giving 60 rupees to a pretended alchemist who promised to convert them into 500. Clay and cotton were the materials necessary for the transmutation. These the deluded schoolmaster bought and beat up into a mass, which he handed to the alchemist. But as days passed on and no silver was forthcoming the swindler was made over to the police. Yet it is to men of the type of this teacher that Government would entrust the vernacular education of the people.

Good Conduct Rewarded.—On Thursday, Oct. 2, Brigadier Showers visited Barrackpore, and presented a medal and the usual gratuity of £15, for good conduct and long service, to Quartermaster-sergeant Newman, H.M.'s 43rd L.I. The General congratulated the sergeant on his good fortune, and called upon the other men on parade to emulate his example, as one sure to meet with reward. The Quartermaster-sergeant has served twenty-five years—seventeen as a non-commissioned officer, and eight as quartermaster-sergeant.

stake. If stone can be made into good sleepers there is no limit to the quantity that may be produced, and forwarded to the most obscure under the Civil, Criminal and Police Codes.

CENTRAL ASIA.—The effect of the American war on Russia has been to drain Central Asia of its cotton, which has been purchased at Bokhara and Khiva, for the Russian manufacturers, at a high price. A letter dated the 31st of July, from St. Petersburg, says that at this moment there are 2,000 horses laden with cotton on the road from Khiva to Orenburg. It is a curious fact that the slave population in America have sent a deputation to Siberia to seek for favourable position on the Amoor river, to establish a colony. The coloured inhabitants of North America would emigrate in a body if they could find ground on the banks of the river. The Russian Govern-ment is favourable to the plan. It has offered to grant lands to the colonists without any remuneration, and to suffer them to live there free of taxes for twenty years. It further offers a grant of money to enable the colonists to establish themselves on the lands. The Imperial Council have authorised the Minister of Finance to issue small coin to the amount of 6,000,000 roubles, nearly £1,000,000 sterling.
PIND DADUN KHAN, Sept. 22.—This is one of the oldest towns of the Punjab, and is situated on the northern bank of the river Jhelum. It is about ten days' journey from Cashmere, and is gradually rising into importance. The river which runs from Mooltan being navigable during all seasons of the year, has made it a capital mart for trade. Goods are generally imported from Bombay, Kurrachee, Mooltan, &c., and are exported up to Peshawur, Hazara, Rawul Pindee, Hazro, &c. Besides which, the salt trade, which is a Government monopoly, and for which this place is remarkable, is progressing admirably. There are several depots of salt, of which Kheura appears to be one of the largest, and is situated about four miles from this town. This mine or depot alone produces salt worth about fifteen lakhs of rupees a year. The merchants who come up here generally bring with them various commodities for sale, and when they return purchase large quantities of salt. But I regret much to say that the want of a sufficient number of roads, and the proper means of carriage have greatly interfered with the growing trade of this distant station. It is true that we have the Great Trunkroad, but a few minor ones are absolutely necessary to promote the commercial interests of this place. The means of carriage generally resorted to by these native merchants are camels. But complaints have not unfrequently been made that when Government require carriage or transports for military stores, all sorts of conveyances are impressed by the police officers, and these animals are carried off by them, throwing away the valuable loads which they had on their backs, and giving no heed to the remonstrances of the merchants. The law, as it is here administered, appears to be powerless to protect the aggrieved in such cases.—Hurkarn.

LIEUTENANT H. J. WILKIN, of the 7th Hussars, has been appointed aide-de-camp to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief vice Lieut. J. F. Elton, who, it will be remembered, was superseded for his connection with the late gambling transactions at Simla.

THE ETAWAH VOLUNTEER RIFLES .- The Lieutenant-Governor of the N. W. Provinces has sanctioned the formation of a Volunteer Corps at Etawah, to be designated "the Etawah Volunteer Rifles." The strength of the Corps consists at present of fifty-three members, chiefly railway employes. The uniform and appointments are, for the hot season, "khakee" blouse without facings, "khakee" pantaloons, "solah topee," waist belt and pouch of black leather; for the cold weather, a "khakee" padded tunic, pantaloon of the same colour, and cap with "khakee' There are two parade days a week. Captain M. F. Ewatt is Commandant, Captain H. E. Whish second in command, and Mr. W. C. Howard Lieutenant and Adjutant.

THE CALCUTTA COURT OF SMALL CAUSES heard a daily average of 128 cases in the year 1861-62 The number instituted was 33,224. The profit of the Court to the revenue was so much as Rs. 51,986, or nearly twice the amount last year. The Court is so much valued that the time has come to extend its jurisdiction to Rs. 1,000 and upwards, with consent, as in Bombay. During the nine months' existence of the fifteen Mosussil Courts in Bengal 28,049 suits were instituted, 25,416 decided, and the receipts amounted to Rs. 2,16,185. The time has come when the judges should be confined to Small Causes only.

THE VICEROY'S CAMP .- The formation of his Excellency the Viceroy's Camp has been postponed from the 15th January, 1863 (the date originally fixed), to the first week of February next. His Lordship's escort will consist of a Regiment of European Infantry, viz., the 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade from Bareilly, a squadron of the 2nd Dragoon Guards, Bays, from Cawnpore, the B. Battery 2nd Royal Horse Brigade, from Gwalior, a Regiment of Native Infantry, the 31st, we believe, from Morar, Gwalior, and the 10th Bengal Cavalry from Bareilly. The camp will form at Agra or in its neighbourhood. His Lordship proceeds by train, river, and coach to Agra, from which place the camp will march via Muttra, Delhi, Meerut, Roorkhee, Umballah, and Kalka, to Simlah, where, as has already been stated by some of our up country contemporaries, houses have been secured for his Lordship and OFFICIAL BUILDINGS AT ALLAHABAD. - The Lieutenant Governor of the N. W. Provinces has, we hear, applied to the Supreme Government for some manifestation of its intentions with regard to a suitable residence at Allahabad. In making this application, Mr. Edmonstone dis-claims all regard for his own interest, and adds, that in requesting the information he is anxious, above all things, to have the matter so arranged as to fall in with the lately propounded scheme, that all public offices should be concentrated within a convenient distance of the gubernatorial residence. Of the excellence of this scheme there can be no doubt, and there can be, we should think, no objection to a similar course to that followed some years ago in the case of the Bengal Government being pursued now. In 1854 a house was purchased for the Lieutenant Governor of that province, at a cost, including outlay for alteration, &c., of Rs. 100,000, and to meet this a deduction of Rs. 500 per mensem was made from the Rs.11,000 allowed to the Lieutenant-governor for house-rent and establishment. This view has, we understand, been taken by the Government of India, and Mr. Edmonstone has been informed that a residence will be purchased on the same conditions as those imposed in the case of Bengal, the deduction to commence from the date of occupation. We are glad to hear, moreover, that Mr. Edmonstone is not unmindful of his subordinates, and has brought to the notice of the Government the fact that a suitable residence is required for the postmaster and telegraph assistant at Allahabad. There can be no doubt as to the necessity for such accommodation, more especially with regard to the telegraph department, and we hail as a good sign for the future the report that the Viceroy in Council shares this opinion. At present the telegraph signalers are grossly inefficient, because, as a rule, they are grossly neglected.—Englishman.

ABATEMENT OF CHOLERA .- The Lahore Chronicle reports the entire disappearance of cholera, both at Anarkullie and Meean Meer; and the return of the troops to their quarters, which had been thoroughly purified and cleansed during their sojourn in camp. The number of men attacked amounted to 150, of which 70 cases terminated fatally.

COTTON FROM ALLAHABAD .- The Allahabad Gazette says that a large quantity of cotton is now finding its way down from the Upper Provinces through Allahabad to Calcutta. Carts, railway waggons, and boats are each and all laden with the commodity, and the transit appears daily increasing. Piles of cotton are to be seen near the Fort of Allahabad waiting shipment.

SIR CHARLES JACKSON, who left Calcutta at the commencement of the holidays, for a tour in the Upper Provinces, has been compelled to remain at Delhi in consequence of a rather serious attack of fever, which at one time threatened serious results. A telegram received from his Lordship announces his convalescence, and his intention to return at once to Calcutta per steamer. On his arrival it is probable that he will take a short sea-trip, in order to recruit his health.

WRECK OF THE "SOUTH SEA."-The ship South Sea, 953 tons, from hence to London, with a general cargo, left this on Sunday, the 28th of September, in tow of the steam tug Hercules, and arrived at Saugor on Tuesday afternoon, in company with several other ships towed by steam. It appears to have been arranged between the tug and pilot of the ship that they were to leave Saugor at two A.M. the following morning. The ship was taken in tow, and, by some mismanagement in veering her to the eastward, she struck on the Middleton Sand and has become a total wreck; the other tugs and ships started at day-light, and got safely out to sea. This is the sixth ship lost in the Hooghly in six months, four of these below Saugor, where the Channel is three to four miles in width, and on a rough calculation twenty lacs of rupees will scarcely cover the loss.

THE BISHOP'S SCHOOL for Christian children in Howrah has now passed the first year of its existence successfully. It receives a grant in aid of Rs. 130 a month. The average attendance is thirty-seven. We would warn the Bishop of the danger his educational scheme runs of being injured by bigotry. We are informed that one of the Allahabad chaplains has issued an order that every child who attends the Bishop's day school there must attend the episcopal Sunday-school, or forego the advantages of the former. Thus the Presbyterian Sabbath-school has been nearly emptied. We are sure the Bishop will be the last to allow such bigotry. His schools are supported by public money on the understanding that their secular benefits will be open to all the public. If this is continued in Allahabad it will lead to the establishment of an opposition school, and neither will be well conducted.

THE STORY OF A MUTINY.

So long ago as 7th July a strange occurrence took place in Shwaygheen, regarding which the local journals have been singularly reticent, and it is very difficult to discover the exact truth. In default of facts we have hitherto abstained from noticing it, but we are now able to put our readers in possession of the official side of the Sept. 27. Calabar, Thomson, Mauritius; Hindostan, Renaulsand, Belle Isle; Tres Hermans, Calderon, Mauritius.—

29. Fairy, Wallace, Melbourne and Colombo; Juanita, Wil
British Burmah, and has always been considered a place of some military importance. There was, till very lately, a European detachment stationed there, but owing to the extreme unhealthiness of the climate the Europeans were withdrawn, and the Pegu sapper battalion was left alone to guard the station. Eventually the headquarters of the battalion was moved to Moulmein, and only four companies were left at Shwaygheen. The European officers of the battalion consisted of only a commandant, an adjutant, and a quartermaster, so that a European officer had to be detailed from another corps to take command of the four companies left at Shwaygheen. All went on well as long as there was a European officer, but unfortunately he had to go away from ill health, and the command devolved upon a duffadar, that is, a native officer without a commission. Fortunately the duffadar, by name Veeraswamy, who succeeded to the command, went on very steadily from March to the end of June last, at which date the story opens.

There were at this time only three European officers in the station, the assistant-commissioner, Lieutenant Watson; the superintendent of police. Lieutenant Hill; and the civil surgeon, Dr. Kearney. Duffadar Veeraswamy had received strict orders not to leave Shwaygheen on any account, till relieved by an European officer; notwithstanding, hearing that his commanding officer, Col. Blake, with whom he was a great favourite, was likely to die, he went off to Moulmein, leaving the next senior duffadar, one Rungiah, in com mand. Before going, however, Veeraswamy told Dr. Kearney that Duffadar Rungiah was not to be depended upon, and that he was afraid there would be some "row" during his absence. Rungiah took to bhang, marched his detachment through the town, and went through the platoon exercise in the middle of the bazaar. He allowed his men, during the Mohurrum, to parade about with flags flying and tom toms, in direct defiance of the orders of the civil authorities, and so alarmed the quiet Burmese that they held themselves in readiness to fly at a moment's notice. To crown all, he assembled a Court-Martial composed of duffadars, all non-commissioned officers, to try the Civil Surgeon, and ordered him to attend the court. The doctor, of course, refused, and the duffadar threatened to put him in arrest. At this point the European officers at the station interfere. They come to the conclusion that it is unsafe to leave the man in command, since the doctor pronounces him insane. They call upon the second in command, a duffadar named Bungarooswamy, to put Rungiah in restraint and assume command. This, it appears, Bungarooswamy is unable to do, not having sufficient influence over the men. At last Rungiah on the 7th July agrees to go to hospital. About an hour aftewards, Bungarooswamy reports that Rungiah has changed his mind and begs the three officers to come down. They go again about 74 P.M., and after reasoning with the lunatic duffadar, Lieut, Hill links his arm in his and says. "Come along," upon which, as if by a preconcerted plan, Rungiah gives a shrill cry, the bugles sound the assembly from three different quarters, and the men of the detachment assemble in a high state of excitement. The Europeans turn to leave the spot, but Rungiah yells out to put them in the Guard. Twenty or thirty men rush forward, and they are lodged in the barrack guardroom. They were wet, for there had been a drizzling rain, but the men would not allow them to change their clothes nor to have anything to eat, nor would they permit any one to come near them.

There the English officers remained till next morning. Meanwhile the sepoys had not been idle. Headed by their havildar major, a son of Duffadar Veeraswamy, they had gone to the magazine and served out ball ammunition to all the men, and posted pickets all round the barracks to prevent a release. Duffadar Rungiah had sent a telegram for despatch to the adjutant general at Rangoon to the effect that "the three European officers were drunk and had come to his quarters and assaulted him, and that he had been obliged to put them in the guard." This message he afterwards tried to recover from the telegraph office. Fortunately the three prisoners in the morn- | being generally considered exactions, or if too its execution-but without executing it himself, ing were able to hail an engineer sergeant who was passing, and at the same time told the sepoys that if they were not released and Duffadar Rungiah put in arrest a telegram would be sent to Tonghoo for European troops. Rungiah was then forcibly deprived of his sword and took the place of the officers. Meanwhile, Bungarooswamy assumed the command, and the officers telegraphed to Tonghoo for a European officer to take the command, as the men were in a state of "semimutiny," whatever that may be. This phrase was used out of deference, they say, to Colonel Blake, the Commandant. But the end was not yet. In the course of two days the four companies demanded the release of Rungiah, but Bungarooswamy resisted. Just as they were expected to free him by force Lieutenant Dickey arrived and assumed command. In four days Colonel Blake came from Moulmein, and received permission from the General of the Division to settle the affair, if it were not mutiny. Colonel, pitying "the poor fellows," who had only obeyed their superior officer, and be-lieving that Dr. Kearney ought to have submitted to a court-martial of duffadars, declared it not to be mutiny. He then discharges all the duffadars, even Bungarooswamy, who throughout did his best to help the Europeans. He reduces the havildar major to private. He orders one private who abused the Europeans to their faces to receive two dozen cuts with a rattan, which were given with all his clothes on. The Colonel turned his back that he might not witness the punishment of a man who had been his orderly. No court of inquiry is held, and Duffadar Veeraswamy, who left his post contrary to orders and in expectation that a "row" would follow, is not even reprimanded. To complete the strange narrative we must add that Government has sanctioned rewards of money to some of the men who remained faithful and gave information.

Such is the story as it is officially told, and we confess that it is so utterly incredible in some points, as to require further elucidation. The Pegu Sapper Battalion we know to be the very worst in the army. Raised in 1858, it was composed of volunteers from the fifty-two regular regiments. Men of bad character, who could not get on in their own regiments, and were glad of an opportunity to begin afresh, flocked into this corps, and the balance was made up by recruits taken from the scum of Madras and Palaveram, and a few Lucknow sepoys. Though called Sappers, they never did sapper work, and two hundred of them were refused by the Telegraph Department lest they should strike work. And, in spite of all this, is it, we may ask, the custom of the military suthorities of British Burmah or the Madras Army to leave four companies of a regiment at an important frontier station commanded by a duffadar? Then what is the story of the Courtmartial; why should Dr. Kearney have been summoned to attend it and been blamed by an English colonel for not doing so? What had the regiment to do with the civil authorities? Is it possible that a general of division could be so ignorant of his duty as not to go to the spot himself; and that there is an officer in the army who could behave as Colonel Blake is represented to have done? Either this is one of the most disgraceful mutinies on record or a hideous nightmare. We confess it seems to us to be the comedy of a mutiny. We would not believe that such occurrences could have taken place but for the source of our information.-Friend of India.

HYDERABAD, Sept. 17 .- The delay of the British Government in appointing a Resident to Hyderabad indicates that the office is considered important. And so it is, but not in the sense in which, I take it, the Government consider it to be It requires no accomplished diplomatist to conduct the affairs here. The English Government has only to issue its mandate to the Nizam, and it will be obeyed even if it be unpalatable, and that all its requisitions are so, its demands trifling for notice as containing some latent sinister purpose, is notorious to all. Whatavar movement the English Government may make will, whether understood or not, be unacceptable to the people at large and believed to be progres. sive towards the end of breaking up the Nizam's Government bit by bit. It is not within the power of diplomacy to correct this deep-rooted prejudice: all that a diplomatist can do is to avoid giving offence, and to move in the affair in which he may be employed with amenity towards the Nizam, so as to satisfy him, if practicable, of the fairness and real views of his Government in any depending negotiation. require no pre-eminent abilities here for the preservation of English interests. We rather require a man of judgment and temper, who will not be guilty of the ebullition that may offend, of high honour that shall not fail to make itself understood even to the natives; a man above all meanness, shuffling, and disingenuousness, without any wants for himself from the Nizam's Government, this of course, but also without any wants for others, and, above all, we want a man to act here more as a detective officer, a Fouché, than an able diplomatist, a Coulaincourt. We want to guarp against a rebellion, which, against which soever of the two parties, the English or the Nizam, it may be directed, will involve both in its consequences, and against those who hate us obtaining power to counteract the measures and the influence of the minister in the State, on whom alone I believe we place unalloyed confidence. Our principal want here, in the present temper of India and its people, is to be watchful of hostile factions and their intrigues, and the man who possesses the best knowledge upon the state of things here will be our best Resident. It will be difficult to conceive that the wit of man could devise and assign a sinister purpose for the sixteen lacs of rupees sent by England to relieve the famine in Hindoostan, but the foolishness of the people here, excessive beyond that of the rest of India, could do even this .- Englishman.

SIR WM. DENISON.—There is one journal in Madras that protests against the inaction of the Governor. Reviewing the two years' administration of Sir W. Denison, the Examiner gives utterance to a wail of disappointment. We have never dared to describe the somnolency of the Southern Presidency in language so strong as this writer employs. This little fact seems to be representative of the whole place, that the pier completed at such an expense cannot be used for goods, because it is not connected with the shore and Customhouse yard. Yet there is a Chamber of Commerce. a local public and a press which accuses us of maligning them. The Governor is described as "determined to live in dignified seclusion, his leisure devoted to the company of a select few, and his midnight hours employed in giving to the world a second and more enlarged edition of his notes on the 'Essays and Reviews' of modern celebrity. He has abandoned Government House; he will not live amongst the rabble, to be daily and hourly reminded of his responsibilities. Guindy will be his cool weather retreat, and the comfortable abode on the hills, during the more oppressive heats that reign in the plains during certain seasons of the year. But we care not how far away Sir William chooses to live from us, if he will but show that he works for us, and give us a few tangible proofs of his intellectual presence amongst us."

PUBLIC WORKS IN BURMAH.—Captain Newmarch has issued a very suggestive Report on Public Works in Burmah during the past year. He exposes some of the abuses of the department with honesty and ability. He represents the percentage of establishments as only 147 for 1861-62, which is less than that of any other province. He shows that the percentage of establishments for military works is only 91, while on civil works it is 21, the expenditure on the former being more concentrated. We must let Captain Newmarch speak for himself. "The ordinary charge made by an architect or civil engineer in England is at the rate of 10 per cent. on the cost of the work for merely planning and supervising or undertaking any of the labour of accounts or payments for labour, or for purchase of materials, or any such details. By comparison, I think it will be admitted that the work of the department is cheaply done, when it is considered what details it embraces, and that for hundreds of works, and over an area the size of England, Scotland, and Wales put together." The objection is to the inflexibility of the establishments, since they do not correspond to the increase or diminution of work, as would be the case were competing contractors employed.

WYNAAD.-The Planters' Association of Western India, meeting at Wynaad, again complain of the disgraceful state of the roads in Wynasd. Parties travelling on them do so at the risk of their lives. The association protest against the determination of Government to withdraw the sappers and miners at work on the Tambercherry Ghaut, in order to work on the Ahtoor Ghaut in the Shevaroys. Returns from the various coffee estates show that 310,000 plants have been stolen in eighteen months-an enormous number. The planters groan under the want of government, while Sir W. Denison enjoys himself in their vicinity and heeds them not.

COCHIN CHINA .- The Cochin Courier says that at Vypeen the sea is advancing so rapidly that it has washed away the boundary pillar recently erected in that locality, which only a few weeks ago was ascertained to stand thirty-five feet back. The recent abolition of the tobacco monopoly by the Cochin Circar has been attended with the happiest effects, and is giving general satisfaction. Applications for licences are flowing in from all quarters, and the results of the trade promise to compensate for present loss of revenue. The sale of opium has not yet been legalised, and the consequence is that a large seizure of a smuggled stores has been effected by the police.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MAHARAJ LIBEL CASE.—It is a gratifying sign of the good done by the disclosures in the Maharaj Libel Case in Bombay that a native gentleman offers a prize of Rs. 250 for the best poetical version of the Report in Guzerati.

NATIVE LADIES IN BOMBAY .- Lady Frere is making most praiseworthy efforts in Bombay to induce the wives of the native gentry to meet her in public. Bombay is a much better place for such an experiment than Calcutta or Madras, the native community being much more public-spirited and enlightened. The Indu Prakash, translated in a Bombay paper, remarks on the plan-" The great drawback is that Hindoo ladies are not educated. They do not know how to sit or behave in a durbar. Native ladies will only stare at each other and sit silent. The case is different with European ladies. They are clever and intelligent, skilled in dancing, music, and the fine arts. When such opposite natures are mixed together, it is not possible that mutual sympathy should awaken in each other." The zenana system, according to which, in Calcutta, English ladies visit Hindoo families and teach them, succeeds in Calcutta, but it requires on the part of such ladies a knowledge of the vernacular, which few with the cares of married life can afford to acquire.

TRADE WITH ADEN .- In Aden, during the year 1861-62 the trade was as follow:-

Imports by sea ... Rs. 49,68,305 Exports do. 32,91,251 82,59,556

Imports by land ... ... Rs. 16,35,756 Exports do. ... 13,20,252

Total ... ... ... Rs. 1,12,15,564

This is Rs. 11,96,065 less than last year; but deducting the item of coal, the regular trade has increased by nearly nine lakhs of rupees. Now that coal can be delivered by the Egyptian railway at Suez so cheaply the P. and O. steamers send much less to their Aden depot. There were no disturbances of any political importance during the year. In Yemen, Ahmed Pasha was again at war with his Arab neighbours. At Mokha there was an outbreak of the old fend between the Mushlahi and the people of Moza, in which a number were killed on both sides; it still continues unabated. On the coast the Turks are extending their possessions; they have already occupied "Disseh" and "Adoolis," and it is rumoured that they intend planting military colonies along the frontiers of Abyssinia. There is no doubt that the occupation of "Disseh" by a power which would hardly use it to our disadvantage, is a most fortunate circumstance, as far as British interests are concerned; but it is equally true that in proportion as the Turkish power becomes established along the African shore of the Red Sea, so the slave trade will be extended, and the efforts of Theodorus of Abyssinia for its suppression will be paralysed. There was no material check on the slave trade. Instead of bringing slaves to Berbera as heretofore, the Hurren merchants take them to Tajourra, whence, in spite of orders from the Turkish Government to the contrary they are sent to Yemen and the Hejaz. Until we obtain the right by treaty of capturing slaves under Turkish colours, and of watching Turkish ports, our endeavours to stop the trade will be only partially successful .- Friend of India.

SATTARA is to be fully incorporated into the Bombay Presidency. The Poona Observer gives a slight sketch of its history. Before the rise of Sivajee it belonged to the Mahometan kingdom of Beejapore. In 1698 it became the seat of the Mahratta empire; and from this date until 1749 -or a little more than balf a century-it was the capital of one of the most famous kingdoms of Asia. In 1749 the Peishwa Balajce Rao obtained the supreme power, and removed the seat of government to Poona. For seventy years the Sattara family remained in dependence and captivity. Sattara regained its independence to some degree when the British occupied the country. In 1822 the Raja Pertaub Sing assumed the Govern ment. In 1848 his brother and successor died without issue, and the right of adoption not yet being conceded, we took possession of the territory. Sattara will now form a collectorate, and its outlying jagheers and estates will be severally attached to the zillahs in which they are locally situated.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, Sept. 27 .- Great excitement exists at Canton in consequence of the discovery, on the 18th inst., of a conspiracy, the object of which was the seizure of the city by a league of desperadoes during the literary examinations now pending. Our information is to the effect that certain suspicious movements being observed in connection with a dwelling house in Honam, owned by Howqua, information was sent to him, which, on being communicated to the authorities, led to the arrest of thirteen persons, and the seizure of a mass of treasonable documents. The confessions of the men arrested are said to point to a wide-spread secret league embracing various classes, at the head of which were some priests, a military mandarin of low rank, and similar persons, who, by influencing the credulity or exciting the ambition of their respective associates, had constructed a plot which accident alone seems to have disconcerted. The 18th instant had been fixed on as the day on which the city should be thrown into disorder by incendiary fires and similar devices, as it was calculated that at that time all the high officials would be seeluded in the Examination Hall, and ordinary public functions brought to a stop, in the usual senseless manner. They might thus have been able to seize the principal defences; but it so happened that the Examiner in-Chief was delayed in his journey, and the examinations were postponed a month. This caused a delay of the enterprise, and meanwhile the discovery fortunately took place. Nine of the conspirators were beheaded on the 19th instant, and extraordinary precautions were at once taken by the native authorities. The guards at the gates have been doubled, and strong patrols are supposed to traverse the streets at night. Spies are also said to be active in their search for such ringleaders as have escaped. The examinations begin on Monday next, and it is to be hoped that all danger of a rising has passed by. Meanwhile H.M.S. Regale lies in the river for the protection of the foreign community. This conspiracy at Canton, coupled with the rumoured disaffection of a party at Pekin, shows that the intrigues of the anti-foreign faction are not at an end. Lau, the enlightened Governor general of the Two Kwang, is a man who has made a just estimate of the position in which the last war left his country with respect to foreign nations, and he has frankly and honestly accepted the situation. Numerous attempts have been made to get him into disrepute with the authorities at Pekin, but without success; and the present conspiracy has no doubt been resorted to by his enemies as a last resource to effect his ruin. We have good reason to congratulate ourselves on its failure.

During the past fortnight nothing has been seen or heard of the rebels in the vicinity of Shanghai. The scattered bands of marauders which appeared in the neighbourhood of the city a few weeks ago seem to have fallen back upon the main body; but no intelligence has been obtained regarding the recent movements of the rebels, or how they propose to employ themselves during the winter. The views entertained by her Majesty's Government on the Taeping question, and the general defence of our property in China, have afforded satisfaction to foreign residents in the treaty ports; very few, if any, of our people desire that measures should be pushed to greater extremities.

All is quiet at Ningpo. An incident occurred there about a fortnight ago that might have led to trouble and disturbance. It appears that the French steamer Deroulede, then stationed off Yu Yaou, moved a mile or two higher up the river to join a small flotilla of Cantonese lorchas and other craft which had been posted in a certain bend of the river for purposes of strategy and observation. The officer in command of the French vessel desired this flotilla to go a few miles higher up; the Cantonese replied that they did not like the proposal, but ultimately, after much squabbling, they obeyed. Two days later they received an order from the same officer to proceed aix miles further up the river; they re-fused most decidedly to comply with such an order, on the ground that it would place them in too close contact with the Taepings, who were strong in that quarter. Active French steps were adopted to enforce compliance; the Cantonese resented those steps so far as to fire upon the French vessel and kill two men, wounding a third. The officer in command, Captain Marolus, was also slightly touched in the leg by a couple of small shots. Something like a regular fight then followed, the result of which was, that 600 Cantonese deserted to the rebels, who are in the vicinity of Shang yu. H.M.S. Encounter happened to be at the islands for the health of her crew when this wretched affair took place; but her captain, Roderick Dew, lost no time in taking the Hardy up, particularly as the French commander had come down to Ningpo with the Deroulede, leaving Yu Yaou to take care of itself, after all this mischief had been created. It is necessary that something should be done to prevent a recurrence of such things. The Cantonese in the river off Nirgpo muster many well armed lorchas and about 3,000 men, while we have scarcely a ship, a gun, or a man, to meet the evil. As it was, the 600 deserters reappeared near Yu Yaou, along with a large body of rebels. The Hardy sent them back by means of a few well-aimed shots.

From Pekin we learn that everything is quiet, and that cholera is abating. Rumours to the effect that the party belonging to the Cabinet which Prince Kung overturned a year ago was beginning to show signs of reanimation have been transmitted from Tien-tsin. We have letters both from Tien-tsin and Pekin, up to the latest dates, but they make no allusion to

From the three northern ports there is no news of importance.

The ports on the Yang-tsze River continue to prosper.

At Shanghai a general meeting of the landrenters was held on the 8th inst., her Britannic Majesty's senior Consul in the chair, when measures were proposed for the better administration of the affairs of the settlements.

From Amoy there is no important intelligence. The country here is not so thriving as it once was. A good trade is carried on by foreigners.

From Swatow and Foo-chow there is no news. At the former port the question of where the foreign settlement shall be is still undecided, all sorts of intrigues are going on to prevent the Kailut site from being obtained.

In Hong Kong everything goes on smoothly. The volunteers are at target practice, and the hot weather is wearing away.

We learn from Whampon that a disturbance took place on Sunday last among the crew of the Duckess of Lancaster, which was not quelled until an armed boat was sent from Canton. Later accounts say that the crew had been drinking on shore, but were all penitent by the time the boat from her Majesty's ship Beagle reached

At Macao the trade in coolies had opened briskly for the season. The return of his Excellency Governor Guimaraes was duly celebrated by public demonstrations. By the governor's orders Rustomiee has been surrendered to the Hong Kong authorities, conditionally on his being returned should no criminal prosecution against him be successful .- Overland China Mail.

ARTILLERY PAY

No. 894.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 288, of Aug. 14, is published for general information:

Military.—No. 288.—India-office, London, Aug. 14, 1862.—To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—With your letter dated May 15, 1862,
No. 179, you transmit correspondence in which the No. 179, you transmit correspondence in which are government of Fort St. George submit an inquiry as to the terms upon which an officer of the new Indian artillery would join the Staff College at Sandhurst, with regard to pay and pension, if, after competing successfully for admission, he should be ordered to join the college.

competing successfully for admission, he should be ordered to join the college.

2. On this subject I have been in communication with H.R.H. the General C. in C.

3. It appears to me that an officer of the new royal brigades of artillery joining the Staff Colle e, with the permission of the proper authorities, should be allowed to receive while there the rate of pay drawn by officers of similar rank in the original brigades of artillery whilst studying at the college, and royal artillery whilst studying at the college, and that, as such period of service is allowed to be reckoned as service, both for pay and pension, in regard to officers of the British forces, he should also reckon, as service for retiring pension, the period of his residence at the Staff College, in the propor-tion of 1 year for 2 years' residence, as laid down in tion of I year for 2 years residence, as fain down in the notification of the Government of India, dated April 10, p. 65.

4. The General C. in C. has expressed his concurrence in this view.

5. H.R.H., however, remarks that, as employment on the staff of India is not open to officers whose regiments or brigades are not serving in that country, even though they have passed the Staff College, he does not consider it fair to the army at large to he does not consider it fair to the army at large to appoint to the staff out of India any passed officers who belong to corps on the Indian establishment; but H.R.H. has no objection to officers serving in India competing for and entering the Staff College, if they wish to do so upon this understanding.—I have, &c., (Signed) Charles Wood.

The Victoria Cross. WAR OFFICE, Nov. 11.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 11.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned non-commissioned officers of the army, whose claims to the same have been submitted for her Majesty's approval on account of acts of bravery performed by them in In lia, as recorded against their names, viz.:—

75th Regiment—Colour-Serg. Cornelius Coghlan.—Acts of bravery, June 8 and July 18, 1857.—For gallantly venturing, under a heavy fire, with three others, into a serai occupied by the enemy in great numbers, and removing Private Corbett, 75th regt., who lay severely wounded. Also for cheering and encouraging a party which hesitated to charge down a lane in Subzee Mundee, at Delhi, lined on each side with huts, and raked by a cross fire; then entering with the said party into an enclosure filled with the enemy, and destroying every man. For having, also, on the same occasion, returned under a cross fire to collect dhoolies, and carry off the wounded; a service which was successfully performed, and for which this man obtained great praise from the officers of his regiment.

2nd Dragoon Guards—Corporal (then Private) Charles Anderson and Trumpeter Thomas Mona-2nd Dragoon Guards—Corporal (then Private) 2narles Anderson and Trumpeter Thomas Monagban.—For saving the life of Lieut.—col. Seymour, C.B., commanding the regiment, in an attack made on him on the 8th of October, 1858, by mutinous sepoys, in a dense jungle of sugar-canes, from which an attempt was made to dislodge them. The mutineers were between thirty and forty in number. They suddenly opened fire on Lieut.—col. Seymour and his party at a few yards' distance, and immediately afterwards rushed in upon them with drawn (native) swords. Pistolling a man, cutting at him, and emptying with deadly effect at arm's length every barrel of his revolver, Lieut.—col. Seymour was cut down by two sword cuts, when the two men above recommended rushed to his rescue, and the trumpeter shooting a man with his pistol in the act of cutting at him, and both trumpeter and dragoon driving at the enemy with their swords, enabled him to rise and assist in defending himself again, when the whole of the enemy were despatched. The occurrence took place soon after the action fought near Sundeela, Oude, on the date above-mentioned.

TRADE OF BRITISH BURMAH.—Eor the first time we have the trade returns of the whole of British Burmah, arranged under its three divisions, for the year 1861-62 :--

Exports.
Rs.1,34,60,647
n... 81,86,384 Imports. 1,45,77,031 86,46,460 56,82,588 Pegu ... ... Tenasserim... Arracan 46,08,818 or a total of sea-borne trade for the year of about 4½ millions sterling. Adding the internal trade across the frontier from Native Burmah, we have the grand total of £6,412,828, or, say, 61 millions sterling, better than most of the British colonies. The value of the cotton exported was little more than £35,000. The rice was a million sterling in value, the timber two-thirds of a million, the Cutch £65,000, and the petroleum, £26,000,

PERUVIAN COTTON IN INDIA.

MR. CLEMENTS MARKHAM proposes to introduce into the Collectorates of Coimbatore, Madura, and Tinnevelly, the cotton-plant indigenous to the province of Piura, in the extreme northern part of Peru. The reason he assigns for this suggestion is the similarity of climate in those widely remote regions. In Piura no moisture whatever falls during the hot season from November to May, and during the remainder of the year the ground is watered merely by a sort of condensed mist, and that very rarely. During the period of total drought, "the thermometer ranges from 80° to 96°, the sky is constantly clear, the atmosphere perfectly dry, and the glare from the sands and stony soil excessive. If a piece of paper is put on the ground in the evening, it may be taken up in the morning and written on without any inconvenience, for it will be found to be quite dry." The rivers, however, are full during this season, being replenished by the rains which descend in the upper regions of the Andes. Facilities, therefore, are afforded for artificial irrigation, which is carried out by means of small channels drawn through the rows of plants, but the practice of flooding a plantation is carefully avoided. Notwithstanding the apparent disadvantages of a dry atmosphere and a sandy soil, the staple of the cotton grown in this arid district is longer than that of "Uplands," Pernambuco, and inferior only to that of the Egyptian and Sea Island varieties. The mean length of Sea Island is stated at 1.61 inches; of Egyptian, at 1.41; of Peruvian, at 1.30; of Brazilian, at 1.17; of "Uplands," grown in India, at 1:08; of New Orleans, at 1:02; and of indigenous Indian cotton, at 0.89. It will be seen from this comparative statement that it is decidedly worth while to try the experiment of introducing into those provinces of India which are favoured with but little moisture a plant so valuable for economic purposes and that asks only the very smallest assistance from artificial irrigation. Some years ago, it appears, a so-called Peruvian cotton was attempted to be cultivated in India, and without success, but it was actually Brazilian cotton and brought from a very moist climate. No conclusion, therefore, is to be derived from that unfavourable experience, while everything tends to bear out Mr. Markham's anticipations with regard to the culture of the plant from Piura in the scantily-watered districts of Coimbatore, Madura, and Tinnevelly. Sir Charles Wood, we observe, goes a step further, and recommends to the Bombay Government to make arrangements "for giving this experiment a fair trial in Sind, of unblemished reputation, but nevertheless it steals away from its enemies.

valley of Peru, while in both regions irrigation is absolutely necessary."

CALCUTTA PHARISEES.

WE are not of those who bring railing accusations against the commercial community of Calcutta. If not immaculate, it is probably no worse than any other body of mercantile men. Over trading inevitably leads to sharp practices, and if to an uncertain market be added an expensive style of living, certain irregularities may be expected to occur without materially compromising the character of the offender either as a man of business or a man of honour. Where competition is great the margin for profits is naturally limited, and every exertion has to be made in order that a favourable balance-sheet should be presented at the end of the year. From an abstract point of view, and as a question of ethics, such a state of things is, of course, to be regretted,-and also to be condemned if any one be clean enough in heart and hand to venture to throw the first stone. But practically no great harm is done so long as actual bargains or agreements are faithfully executed, and no violation attempted of the code of morals which rules in mercantile circles. Society in Calcutta, however, appears to be as easily offended as a prude, and shrinks with conscious terror from even the semblance of "shady" conduct. For an unusual length of time it has been grievously shocked by the malpractices imputed to two influential directors of the Assam Tea Company-one of them, indeed, being the local Chairman-and language was found too feeble to express the abhorrence generally entertained for their supposed misfeasance. Like the Pharisee of old, merchants and journalists thanked Heaven that they were not as these two men, and went home justified in their own eyes for any peccadilloes they might have committed, because they had not failed to anathematise the assumed misconduct of their neighbours. As a rule Englishmen affect to pride themselves on their love of fair play, and demand that every one should be esteemed as innocent until his guilt be proved and brought home to him. It is not so, however, in Calcutta. There, it seems, it is the custom to condemn the accused without waiting for further evidence, and to refuse forgiveness where there is very little to forgive.

It will be in the memory of our readers that a Mr. Judge, practising as an attorney in Calcutta, brought three very serious charges against Mr. D. C. Mackey and Mr. Carter. These gentlemen were accused of appropriating the Company's coolies and tea-seed, and of falsifying the records of the Board meetings. The Hurkaru at once opened upon them in full cry and tore their character into shreds. The other local journals took up the promising scent, and with loud clamour strove to pull down the apparently defenceless prey. When the first uproar had somewhat subsided, it became evident, even to the most vociferous, that abuse was not proof, and that something more was wanted than mere virulence of language to satisfy the public at home. sub-Committee was accordingly appointed, consisting of Messrs. A. T. T. Peterson, C. B. Stewart, and C. M. Blackie, three gentlemen where the climate resembles that of the coast | scarcely a proper tribunal under the peculiar circumstances of the case. Though partners with Messrs. Mackey and Carter in the Assam Tea Company, like them they were also interested in private concerns of the same nature and had gardens of their own, and consequently were liable to judge harshly of any practices that might give their rivals an advantage over themselves. We do not for a moment assert that they were actually influenced in their Report by any considerations of this kind, but for their own sakes they should have avoided the possibility of incurring such a suspicion. With regard to Mr. Carter, indeed, they withhold their judgment in his absence, though they do not fail to remark that they consider the explanation he had tendered as unsatisfactory. Towards Mr. Mackey, however, they are less lenient. "We have had," say they, "a most painful duty to perform, and although we are ready to admit the great and valuable services rendered by Mr. Mackey to the Company for a series of years, still we cannot do otherwise than pronounce a strong opinion on the great impropriety of Mr. Mackey, as Chairman of the Company, using his position as a means for his own private purposes, and this in a manner that, according to all probabilities, would have never been discovered but for the inquiries and investigation of Mr. W. J. Judge."

Now, it must be admitted that Mr. Mackey was guilty of certain irregularities, and he himself confesses the fact, but to what did they really amount? The Sub-Committee exonerate him from having injured the interests of the Company in a pecuniary way. He took not a farthing of their money, but, on the contrary, one of his improprieties directly placed £1,150 to the credit of the Company, and which they would not otherwise have received. The facts were simply these:-Two batches of coolies,-one of seventy, the other of fifty,-had been collected by an individual connected with the Company, but unfortunately in Cachar, where they were not wanted, and whence at that season they could not be conveyed to Assam. Mr. Mackey, therefore, took them off the hands of the collector, paying all the costs from his private funds, but of course without making any entry of the transaction in the Company's books. The Sub-Committe, however, reprimand him for effecting the transfer of those coolies without first obtaining the sanction of his co-Directors, though it is admitted that they were not taken over secretly, but with the full knowledge of the Secretary and Honorary Managing Director. No doubt it would have been better had a formal Resolution been passed at a Board Meeting authorising Mr. Mackey to take the coolies they could not themselves employ, but there was this trifling obstacle in the way-a Board Meeting never could be got together. The other Directors were quite content to reap all the advantages of their position, while they left the entire work to the Secretary acting under the orders of the two gentlemen whose acts are now criminated. Having neglected their own duty they are now doubly anxious to punish those who slightly exceeded theirs. The part they are playing is that of the cuttle-fish, which blackens the surrounding water in order to escape observation while

Then, as to the appropriation of tea-seed. It has hitherto been the magnanimous custom of this Company to bury in a pit, where it was allowed to rot, whatever indigenous seed remained over and above their own requirements. Mr. Mackey applied for twenty-five maunds of this surplus seed, and his application was granted. Conversing afterwards on the subject with Mr. Carter, he expressed his regret that he had not indented for 125, and subsequently he did ask for 200 maunds, but his recent conversation with Mr. Carter running in his mind—he alluded to his previous demand as being for 125 instead of twenty-five maunds. This application also was granted, and the seed was duly paid for at the price fixed by a Board of five Directors, at the suggestion of Mr. Judge himself. It so happened that 230 maunds were actually delivered, but for this error Mr. Mackey was clearly not answerable, though he paid for the difference without demur.

We come now to the third charge, that of suppressing and falsifying records. After the order had been passed for the delivery of the 200 maunds, the Secretary called upon Mr. Mackey with his first letter of application, and pointed out to him that whereas he had referred to it as being a demand for 125 maunds it was only for twenty-five. Thoughtlessly and incautiously Mr. Mackey inserted the figure 1 before the 25,—a foolish thing to do, but, under the circumstances, of no material importance, as correct abstracts had been made of both letters, and the application for 200 maunds had already been granted. A mischance, indeed, befell the abstract of the second letter. Not deeming it sufficiently full and explicit, Mr. Carter tore out the leaves containing it and made a fresh abstract in the Minute-book, but the torn leaves were endorsed by the Secretary and placed in the strong-box for future reference.

Such is the head and front of the accusations brought against Messrs. Mackey and Carter, and which have been so grossly exaggerated and distorted in the public prints. Personally we know nothing whatever of either of these gentlemen, but it is perfectly clear that the irregularities complained of do not involve the slightest degree of turpitude. To Mr. Mackey the Company are mainly indebted for the present flourishing condition of their affairs. Their shares when that gentleman joined the Direction thirteen years ago were at 80 to 90 per cent. discount, whereas they are now at 160 per cent. premium, and even his accusers do not deny that for this improvement they are indebted to his indefatigable exertions. Truly a sorry return he has received. Had the other Directors done their duty no unpleasantness of the kind could have arisen. But being suddenly roused to a sense of their shortcomings, they turn upon the only two of their number who had ever paid any real attention to the affairs of the Company, and complain that they have received £1,150 where they did not expect to receive anything. Whatever may be the Calcutta standard of morality—as applicable to one's neighbour-we may safely assume that the mercantile world in this country will not be disposed to visit the conduct of the accused with a very heavy censure. To impale a Chairman for augmenting the funds of the is owing to the great increase in expenditure for eyes of British shareholders an indictable or unpardonable offence. Its rarity would of itself justify an acquittal.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE AMALGAMATION INJUSTICE. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,-In the Official Gazette, or list of promotions published in your last number (Oct. 13), it appears that the officers of the late H.E.I.C., who have not "volunteered" into H.M.'s new general service regiments, are superseded in rank by their own recently junior brother officers !- that is to say, not only have their own regiments been demolished, and not only have the terms on which they took service been violated by H.M.'s Government, but they are thus degraded as well as defrauded, for not "volunteering" to forego their

It is also now nearly, if not quite, four years since the officers of Sir Hugh Rose's army took a prominent part in suppressing the great sepoy mutiny, and some of them are now dead; yet not a fraction nor a notion of their prize money have they as yet received.

Whether in the public prints or in private letters, both of civil and military servants, the minister who has occasioned these discontents is unequivocally named, through whom and with whom even her Majesty's supremacy in India is, notwithstanding all would-be loyalty, intensely and undoubtedly abhorred, and that cf the H.E.I.C. regretted.

Is there, then, nobody in England to espouse the cause of these insulted officers, who have deserved a better treatment of their country than that which they endure, and which may be compared to that of the patriot General Garibaldi at the hands of the minister Ratazzi?

I am, sir, one of your constant readers, although "An Indian Officer." not myself

MADRAS RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that, during the half year ending the 30th of June last, the main line from Madras to Beypoor was opened throughout, and has since been worked over without interruption. On the North-West line no extension took place during that period, but a further opening of 15 miles has since been made to Tirupetty, 42 miles from Arconum junction. The entire length now open on the two lines is thus 448 miles, against 298 miles open at the beginning of the half-year, being an increase of 150 miles. For the six months the average number of miles open was 346, and the number of passengers carried 636,791. The progress of the works on the Bangalore branch has been in every way satisfactory, and it is hoped before this time next year to have it opened for traffic. Much credit is due to the district engineer, Mr. Carter, for the energy, ability, and economy with which he has carried on the works at the Sardanoor Pass, by which the line ascends to the Mysore tableland. The average number of miles in work on this line during the half-year was 319, against 246 of the preceding half-year. The fare for third class passengers was raised on May 12 from 2 pies to 3 pies per mile, the other fares and rates remaining the same. The receipts for passengers during the half-year ending the 30th of June amounted to £30,111, of which £25,391 was for third-class passengers, £2,746 for second-class, and £1,974 for first-class. The receipts at the corresponding period of last year amounted to £22,778. The total receipts from traffic for the past half year amounted to £67,354, and the expenses to £52,389, including £22,415 for maintenance, leaving the net receipts £14,965. The receipts for the corresponding half-year of 1861 amounted to £45,908, the expenses to £33,756, and the net receipts to £12,151. The receipts fr the carriage of railway materials formed I' 2 per cent. of the gross receipts; that the net profits have not increased correspondingly partly due to the increased length of way maintained, is chiefly caused by the heavy amount of renewals of faulty sleepers effected during the half year. On the Madras division alone upwards of 35,000 of those sleepers were replaced by iron sleepers in the course of four months. The receipts per train mile were 5s. 01d., and the expenses 3s. 11d. per train mile. Since the date of the last report a further issue of share capital to the extent of £1,000,000 has been made under the sanction of the Secretary of State for India, of which sum £513,108 has been received and paid into the Treasury of the Indian Govern-

LAUNCH OF THE POONAH.

A magnificent addition was made on Saturday to the already numerous steam fleet of the Peninsular and Oriental Company by the launch of the Poonah at Blackwall. A large number of invitations to view the launch were issued by the directors of the Thames Iron Works Company, by whom the Poonah has been constructed. The Poonah is a large screw steamer, measuring 315 feet in length and 41 feet extreme breadth, with a depth of hold of 30 feet. Her burden is 2,597 tons. In her construction every late improvement has been adopted, not only to secure strength and speed, but to provide increased accommodation and comfort for passengers. The most confident anticipations are entertained that she will be one of the fastest vessels afloat, and her beautiful form and fine proportions fully justify such hopes. The recent death of Mr. Wilcox, M.P., chairman of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, could not fail to have a depressing effect upon such an occasion, and in consequence of that sad event none of the directors of the company were present on Saturday to witness the launch of their new ship. Immediately after being launched the vessel was towed up to Deptford, where she will be fitted with engines of 500-horse power, manufactured by Messrs. Humphreys and Tennant. The guests of the Thames Iron Works Company then proceeded to one of the offices, which had been tastefully fitted up for the occasion, and there partook of a sumptuous dejcuner, with the indispensable Mr. Harker as toastmaster. Mr. Peter Rolt, chairman of the company, presided, and among those present were Mr. G. W. Bentinck, M.P., Mr. Vansittart, M.P., Ismael Pasha (General Kmety), Sir R. Bromley, &c. It was stated that the slip from which the Poonah had just been launched would be immediately occupied by another vessel of similar character, also for the Peninsular and Oriental Company, the fleet of which now amounts to nearly eighty thousand tons.

MISCLLLANEOUS.

SPECIE TO THE EAST .- The specie taken by the Bombay steamer Ellora on the 12th amounted to the unusually large sum of £1,059,390, of which £1,000 in gold is for Alexandria, and £132,100 in gold and £926,290 in silver is for Bombay. The rate at which specie shipments are being made to India is attracting much attention. Last month the total sent from India alone was £1,400,000, and a further sum of about half as much was probably despatched on English account via Marseilles. From the magnitude of the amount by the mail now starting it is evident that these figures will be enormously increased during the present month, and, as it is not easy to allay a movement of the kind when it has thus strongly grown up, there is a likelihood that the rage for sending orders to Bombay for cotton may continue month by month with increasing force, and cause the drain to assume proportions still more considerable. In these circumstances, apparently, it must happen either that the supply of the staple obtainable from India will be found so ample that there need be little further apprehension of an actual dearth of employment in Lancashire, or that the orders sent hence will so far exceed the supply readily available that their execution will be possible only at greatly enhanced rates. As the inonly at greatly enhanced rates. Company over which he presides is not in the maintenance of way; and this again, though crease of these orders, and of the consequent outflow of bullion, must tend to a further decided advance in our rates of discount, the contingency has, at the same time, to be contemplated, that the cotton thus purchased at high prices will arrive here upon a market affected by the depressing in fluence of this change in the value of money. It is to be assumed that such of the various banks and other establishments as are facilitating the existing course of business have fully weighed these points, together with the possible extent of any revulsion that might follow a sudden announcement of peace in America; but among prudent merchants and financiers there is unquestionably a feeling of anxiety on the subject. This feeling, too, is increased by the knowledge of the incredibly reckless character of the commercial operations of Liverpool, Manchester, and Glasgow which preceded the crash of 1857, and of those which, even in the face of the warning of that period, were almost immediately afterwards entered into on a still more extraordinary scale, and which resulted in overstocking every market in the world, so that now, in the second year of the American war, the amount of uncleared stocks is still from almost all quarters a topic of remark.—Times' City Article.

STUDENT INTERPRETERS IN CHINA AND SIAM. Lord Russell has addressed a letter to the Duke of Devonshire, Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, intimating that he proposes to nominate a certain number of candidates to compete before the Civil Service Commissioners for the appointment of student interpreters in China and Siam. The candidates selected are to be between eighteen and twenty four years of age, and Lord Russell adds:-" The object for which such anpointments are made is that the persons on whom they are conferred should, in the first place, devote themselves to the study of the Chinese or Siamese language, as the case may be, and, in the next place, should qualify themselves generally for the public services in China or Siam, so that her Majesty's Government may always have at their disposal persons competent to discharge the duties entrusted to her Majesty's consular offices in those countries. The salary which is assigned to the office of student interpreter in either country is at the rate of £200 a-year, to commence from the date of departure from this country, the passage from England to the place of destination being, moreover, provided at the public expense. . . As the climates of China and of Siam are considered to be more or less trying to English constitutions, the probability that the health of the candidates will be such as to bear a residence in those climates will be taken into consideration by the Civil Service Commissioners. Candidates must clearly understand that if they succeed in obtaining one of the vacant appointments-of which as regards China there are four, and as regards Siam two, to be filled up on the present occasion—their retention in the public service and their future advancement in it will depend entirely upon the ability which they may show after their arrival at their destination, and on their general steadiness and good conduct.' The examination is to take place on Thursday, December 30, and the heads of the examination are-" General intelligence, Precis, orthography, handwriting, first four rules of arithmetic, first four books of Euclid, translation from Latin into English, translation from French into English, general knowledge of modern geography.'

THE REBEILION IN CHINA .- The Abeille du Nord, of St. Petersburg, of the 31st of October. publishes an article on the internal affairs of China. It appears from the facts stated in the Russian paper that, notwithstanding the assistance afforded by the British and French troops to suppress the insurrection, the insurgents do not appear to dread the European allies of the Emperor of China. The insurgents have penetrated on one side as far as the Pacific Ocean, and on the other side to the desert of Thibet. They have obtained possession of several towns in the province of Shen-Si, situated in the north-west of China, and the numerous Mussulman population in that province have made common cause with them. of Pekin dreads the Mussulman population, which in the province of Yun Nan alone have caused them insurmountable obstacles. Mussulman population in China have always been hostile to the reigning dynasty. It is true that this dynasty has never consented to place them on an equality with the other subjects of the Chinese Empire. The Mussulmans are very numerous in China, they are scattered from the most remote districts of Kachganet and the steppes of the Kirghiva to the province of Yun-Nan, on the frontiers of the Birman Empire. If, consequently, the insurgents obtain the support of the Mussulman population, nobody can predict the conclusion of the existing disturb-

GEOGRAPHICAL COURSE OF PESTILENTIAL DIS-EASE IN 1861-62.—At the opening meeting of the present session of the Epidemiological Society, on the evening of the 3rd inst., Dr. Babington, F.R.S., president, in the chair, a narrative was read by Dr. Milroy of the progress of some of the chief pestilences which have prevailed during the last twelve months in foreign and distant countries of the world. The cholera has continued to rage in many parts of India, especially in the North-West Provinces. Peshawur, Kobat, and various other places suffered severely during the summer. About the same time Cabul, Candahar, and other districts to the west of the Indies were infected, and the scourge was also present in Bussorah, at the head of the Persian Gulf, and in the Pashalic of Bagdad, along the course of the Tigris. Towards the end of 1861 it broke out at Bombay, and since then it has appeared in many parts of that presidency, more especially in the malarious provinces of Guzerat. Several places also in the Deccan, intermediate between Bombay and Madras, suffered. In Cochin China the French troops have been very sickly, and numerous deaths had arisen from cholera. In China proper and also in Japan the pestilence had been extremely fatal; the mortality in Shanghai and Pekin, and in Nagasaki and other towns in the latter country is said to have been very great. fatal outbreak occurred during the summer at Jeddah, on the Red Sea, and vast numbers of Moslem pilgrims perished. In the western hemisphere the yellow fever has been very fatal in many places in the Carribean Gulf. Soon after the landing of the allied forces at Vera Cruz it appeared among the Spanish, French, and British soldiers, and caused great mortality. In our small force of about 600 men, upwards of sixty were swept away in less than two months, and, as there was every prospect of the disease increasing as the summer heats advanced, it was wisely determined to re-embark the marines and remove them to a cooler climate. The losses among the French and Spanish forces are believed to have been very large, but no authentic statement has been published. During the present summer Havannah and Nassau, in New Providence, one of the Bahama Islands, seem to have been the chief seats of this malignant tropical fever; several of our ships of war and many of our merchant vessels suffered severely. On the West Coast of Africa, which many persons have fancied to be the birthplace, in the first instance, of yellow fever, it prevailed with great fatality at several points on the Gold and Ivory Coasts which have hitherto escaped its visitations, at least for many years past. Loango also, and other places to the south of the Equator, are said to have been infected during the year.

DRAFTS ON INDIA.--The first of the semimonthly biddings for bills on India took place on the 5th inst. at the Bank of England. amount to be disposed of monthly is £500,000, of which £300,000 were offered on this occasion, the amounts apportioned to those Presidenties were entirely subscribed for, with the exception of a sum so small that it could not be rateably divided within the terms of the notice. At the commencement of last month, when bills were offered for £380,000, the tenders within the limits amounted to £1,500,000. The increase in the present instance indicates an extraordinary demand for remittances to pay for cotton, but many of the applicants, expecting to get only a portion, are believed to have asked for three or four times the total actually wanted.

CHARGE OF SWINDLING AGAINST AN OFFICER OF THE INDIAN ARMY .- At the Public-office at Birmingham, on Monday, Oct. 10, before Mr. Kynnersley, a young man named Francis Packe, a lieutenant in the Indian army of Bengal, and who gave as his address "The Cloisters, Windsor," was brought up on remand under the following circumstances:-A little more than a week ago he arrived in the town, and took up his abode at the Hen and Chickens Hotel. Last Wednesday he called upon Messrs. Boucher, tailors, and asked them to make him a suit of clothes by the following Saturday, as he wanted to go to Bromsgrove. He wrote his name in the reference book of the firm as "Captain Francis Packe, of the 31st Regiment of the Bengal Native Infantry, stationed at Bombay." He called at Messrs. Boucher's again on the following day, and again on Friday evening, and having ascertained that the clothes were finished, he left the shop for a few minutes, and on his return asked if a check could be cashed for him. On receiving a reply in the affirmative, he produced a plain check for £10, drawn upon Messrs. Grindlay and Co., of Parliament-street, London. The price of the clothes was £7. 10s. 6d.; a receipt was given to Packe, and £2. 9s. 6d. in change. At his request a porter was sent with the clothes to the Hen and Chickens, but the prisoner took the parcel from the man on his way to the hotel. Inquiries having been made by telegraph in reference to the check, a reply was received that it was a "dead swindle." The prisoner was apprehended at the railway station at the moment he was about to get into the train for Worcester. The next morning, on being informed of the precise nature of the charge against him, the prisoner said that the check would be met at the end of the month. Charles Hanley, a clerk in the service of Messrs. Grindley and Co., East India commission agents, stated that the firm had acted as agents for the prisoner, who was a lieutenant in the Indian army; that he had returned to England on furlough, which had expired, and he was supposed to be in India with his regiment. His account with Messrs. Grindlay had been closed some months since. They had no assets, as the accused must have been well aware, for, although they still held his power of attorney, they could not receive any of his pay, it being payable only Several of Packe's checks had been in India. presented since August, but they had been returned. Mr. Frank Smith, of the Heu and Chickens, stated that he had received a couple of checks from the prisoner (one of them for £10) in payment of his hotel bill, but they had been returned dishonoured. He had reason (he said) to believe there were others yet to turn up, as Packe had been giving checks to gentlemen staying in the hotel with whom he had had money transactions. The prisoner was committed for trial at the sessions, with the privilege of procuring bail. He reserved his defence.

MILITARY EDUCATION.—The Rev. CHARLES J. HUGHES, M.A. (Wrangler, Cambridge, 1859), Rector of Perrivale (population 32), begs to inform his Friends that he has REMOVED from the Finchley-road this Residence (built expressly for him). CASTLEBAR-COURT, EALING, W., where he receives both Senior and Junior Pupils to prepare for the Army, Military Colleges, and the Civil Service.

MILITARY and NAVAL EDUCATION.—

A MARRED CLERGYMAN, resident at Brighton, RECEIVES a limited number of PUPILS, between the ages of Twelvs and Fifteen, who may be destined for the Military and Naval Professions. With a view to this ultimate object, the entire course of Study, from the outset, is regulated expressly in conformity with the requirements of the Examinations at Addiscombe. Sandhurst, Woolwich, and Portamouth; and every care is taken to direct special attention to those subjects likely to prove professionally useful in the future carrier of the Naval or Military officer. The Pupils are examined periodically in Mathematics by Professor J. R. Tourng, formerly of Belfast College, and Author of "A Course of Mathematics, Pure and Mixed, for the Use of Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations," &c.; and also in Classics and Modera Languages by Scholars of repute. Prospectuses may be had of Mesers. ALLEN and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, London, S.W.

TNDIA OUTFITS.-NOTICE.

Thresher's India Tweed Suits. Thresher's Kashmir Flannel Shirts, Thresher's India Gauze Waistcoats,

THESHOF'S INCIA URUZE WAISTCOALS, were invented and are manufactured exclusively by THRESHEE and GLENNY, and for which the International Exhibition Medal of 1863; the Exhibition Medal of 1861, and the Madras Medal of 1864 have been awarded.—The high character and universal approval of these articles have led to a number of infectior imitations, all of which are advertised under similar, but triflingly altered names, and, therefore, Mesars. THRESHEE and GLENNY feel it necessary to announce that the India Genze Waistcoate, the Kashmir Flancel Shirts, and the India Twood Suits can only be procured at their catablishment,

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, OR PEARL DENTIFRICE,

OR PEARL DENTIFRICE,

A white powder, is composed of the choicest and most recherché ingrediente of the Oriental herbal. It extirpates all tartarous adhesions to the teeth, and cusures a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface. Its antiseptic and antiscrobutic properties exercise a highly beneficial and salutary influence; they arrest the further progress of the decay of the teeth, induce a healthy action of the guma, and cause them to assume the brightness and colour indicative of perfect soundness. The breath also attains a grateful purity and fragrance. Price 2s. 9d. per box, Caution.—The words "Rowlands' Odonto" are on the label, and "A. Rowland and Sons, 90, Hatton-garden," on the Government Stamp. Sold by them, and by chemists and perfusers.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

For our military readers the most interesting news received by the Bombay Mail of the 27th October is probably that which relates to the relief of the Royal Artillery, and which will be found elsewhere, under the head of General Orders.

The mercantile community, on the other hand, will naturally attach the greatest importance to the judgment of the High Court of Calcutta with reference to the right of a zemindar, or landed proprietor, to raise the rent of his lands. In our next issue we propose to summarise the Chief Justice's decision, and in the mean time it may suffice to state that, to a certain extent, it is in favour of the landlord.

The Priestley scandal continues to be commented on by the Indian press in a very proper spirit, with the exception of the Bombay Gazette, which, having constituted itself the "Devil's 'Advocate," endeavours to vindicate Colonel Priestley's conduct, while that of Major Fitzgerald is pronounced "wholly indefensible." The one may have committed a blunder, but the other has committed an offence. "He (Major Fitzgerald) abused the privacy of the Club by abusing at its dinnertable the character of the Commander-in-Chief more than Colonel Priestley abused its Major Fitzgerald?" The action taken by the Commander-in-Chief, it is admitted, 105. Freights declining.

CANTON, Oct. 14. Major Fitzgerald?" The action taken by Cents., 941 to 941; Five per Cents., 1043 to but then "an officer in the discharge of his duty is entitled to the support of the head of the army,"-a ruling which no one will question, the only difference of opinion being as to the "duty" of any gentleman to violate "the privacy" and abuse the confidential intercourse of a Club. Finally, Colonel Priestley's chivalrous champion offers up a devout prayer that other Clubs will not view his escapade in the same light as the United Service Club of Bengal. So far as the Byculla Club is concerned this charitable aspiration has been wasted on the winds, for it has already approved of the line of action adopted by its sister institution in Calcutta.

The Marine Insurance Companies in Bombay have determined to raise the present rates of insurance 1 per cent. all round-31 instead of 24 per cent. for cotton shipped to the United Kingdom. 20,000 bales of cotton have been totally lost within the last six months, and upwards of 50,000 bales are either lying at the Cape or Mauritius, or have been sold to pay the charges of ships that had put into intermediate ports, which losses will eventually fall on the Insurance Companies.

The Afghan correspondent of the up-country papers persists in raising his cry of Wolf! with reference to the armed intervention of Persia in the contest between Dost Mahomed and the ruler of Herat. It is now asserted that a force of 18,000 Persian troops, with ten pieces of artillery, had arrived at Mushed, and that the Ameer was so daunted by the tidings that he was anxious to come to terms with Sultan Ahmed Jan. The latter part of the rumour is very likely true, but the march of the Persian forces must be taken with many a grain of salt.

The programme of the Commander-in-Chief's movements during the cold season involves a considerable amount of activity on the part of Sir Hugh Rose. That, however, is his Excellency's strong point—to the discomfort of his staff. The Viceroy has also sketched an outline of progresses for three years, denoting a lively faith in the soundness of his constitution, and in the untroubled sequence of events.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Via Jubal.) CALCUTTA, Oct. 30. (Via Galle.)

Nothing definite has yet been ascertained respecting the cause or extent of the recently discovered conspiracy in this city.

Grey shirtings unchanged. Tea, total export to date, 52,000,000 lbs. Exchange on London, 4.73.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 7.

The city is tranquil.

An engagement has taken place between the rebels and Colonel Ward's contingent, near Ningpo. Colonel Ward was afterwards killed while attacking Reece (?) City. The rebels had appeared in great force before Ningpo, determined to take the city.

Advices received from Japan announce the perpetration of a dreadful political murder.

A lady and three gentlemen, while riding on the high road, were attacked by a Daimio with a retinue of 300 men. Mr. Charles Lennox Richardson, of Shanghai, one of the party, was murdered in cold blood. The rest escaped.

The vengeance of the foreign Powers for this act had been averted by the British Minister, whose interference had incurred the indignation of the European residents.

Tea-Congou firm, but little doing. Silk firm. Settlements in fortnight, 1,500 bales. Export to date, 43,000 bales. Exchange on London, 6:31 (?). Freights lower.

PERSIA AND HERAT.

The continuance of the siege of Herat renders it necessary for us to understand the situation of the contending parties. Undoubtedly it is changed since the recovery of Furrah by Dost Mahomed Khan. Up to that time the Ameer might plausibly allege that his territory had been violated, and his honour insulted, by his relative the Wullee of Herat; and that he was entitled to vindicate his rights without let or hindrance from any third power. But vindication is one thing and annexation another. It may be that the "great powers" of the East would not very sensitively resent the exaction of some reasonable satisfaction by one offended Barakzai from another,-by the venerable chief of the family from his presumptuous nephew and son in law or too curiously scan which of the two offered the original provocation. Had the Ameer simply regained the Taimuni country, expelled the Herat garrison from Furrah, and indemnified his treasurv for the expenses of the campaign, it is probable that the dispute might have been regarded in the light of a family quarrel. The sluggish course of Persian politics might not have been ruffled, and the diplomacy of Teheran might still have slept.

Recent intelligence, however, would seem to indicate that the Ameer does not propose to end his enterprise like a fashionable novel, with the forgiveness of his erring nephew, the restoration of his domains, and general rejoicings. ambitious mind evidently aspires to the inclusion of Herat, like Candahar a few years ago, in the ring-fence of the re-united Dourani monarchy. Impelled in old age as in early youth by that climbing ambition which mounted from the low steps of a jagheer in Hoshtaagar and the petty satrapy of Ghuzni to the throne of Cabul, the youngest brother of Futteh Khan, and the inheritor of his power, aims at the consolidation of a dominion which, some five-and-forty years ago, his own headlong indiscretion, fatal to the life and soaring schemes of the minister, abruptly shattered; and mindful that in those times when the Kajar demanded tribute from Herat, his hosts were met and repulsed by the Afghan troops, the fiery spirit of the Ameer does not shrink from a contest with Persia. But times are changed. Then the Persian and Pathan had the field to themselves; now the fine threads of European diplomacy are round them, and their every political movement agitates the giant States of the West. Still, many a coach and four has been driven through an Asiatic treaty. Persia is indeed bound to refer her grievances against the Afghan State, before appealing to arms, to the British Government and to endeavour to effect an arrangement; but events march quickly, and unless the negotiators of Teheran keep pace with them, the Persians may consider that the best way of keeping Dost Mahomed Khan out of Herat is not to allow him to enter, and to cause him to raise the siege. It may occur to them that this is the simplest plan of maintaining an independent State, subservient to their own Government, between the Persian and the Afghan boundaries: and whilst Lord Palmerston and the Russian Ambassador are discussing the matter in London, with occasional references across the Baltic, the Kajar and the Barakzai may have come to loggerheads.

In the meantime we hold that the course of the Indian Government is clear. We must act up to the letter and to the spirit of our treaties, be they advantageous to our present interests or not. We understand that the Native Vakeel who represents our Government at the Court of the Ameer has long since been recalled, and by this time must have received the despatches ordering him to retire to Cabul. Bound to counsel the Cabul Government not to give cause of offence to Persia, we cannot allow our representative to accompany an army besieging Herat. If Persia appeals to us, we shall doubtless use our good offices to effect some adjustment. But having done so, we are not responsible for the event; and the Persian Government has not shown itself so observant of its own obligations that we should strain in its favour, and against our other ally, one tittle of a treaty, the practical effects of which have been adverse to British interests in Central Asia.—Friend of India.

OPIUM.

The net amount of revenue derived from opium under the Bengal Government during the year 1861-62 was Rs. 2,46,84,215, or £2,468,421. The prospects of the season were most promising at the outset, but the heavy rains and storms of March last did very serious injury. Notwithstanding this, Behar and Benares turned out 40,000 chests, or about 10,000 chests more than the outturn of the preceding year. In consequence of the increase in the price paid to cultivators for crude opium, of from Rs. 4 to Rs. 5 per seer, and of the loans for well-sinking, and other additional inducements held out, the cultivation was considerably extended during the year. The additional beegahs thus brought into cultivation are set down :-

During the last ten years there has been a progressively increasing demand for Indian opium, which, being met by a stationary supply of about 70,000 chests, has nearly doubled the price in China, and called into existence a supplemental native Chinese supply, estimated by those acquainted with the trade at from 20,000 to 30,000 chests, selling at about two-thirds of the price of Indian opium. Mr. Laing's deduction from these data was that they afforded conclusive evidence, as matters stand, that China requires every year a supply of 100,000 chests of opium, and is prepared to spend from £12,000,000 to £15,000,000 on the article. Mr. Laing, however, held that the utmost this country required was that China should one year with another take 80,000 chests of Indian opium, at Rs. 800 a chest. To effect this, the course adopted has been to extend the cultivation of the poppy, that a larger quantity of opium at a lower price may be supplied, so checking the extension of the cultivation in China, and tending to give to the opium revenue a more per manently reliable character. In furtherance of this policy, the cultivation of the poppy was experimentally tried in the districts of Budaon, Shajehanpore, and Rohilcund during the season of 1860-61, and having fully succeeded, steps were taken for extending the operations in those districts during the season 1861-62. The agency system was also introduced into Oude in 1860-61, and with the greatest success. 13,334 beegahs were cultivated the first year, the average yield being as high as eight seers per beegah. In 1861-62 a much larger area was under cultivation, but the produce at the average yield was not so high.

In 1861-62 the cultivation was further extended to the Jhansie, Jaloun, and adjacent Bundlecund districts, as an experimental measure. The opium agent at Benares has now reported that in the above districts 1,915 beegahs were actually cultivated by ryots, receiving advances, the gross yellowing 105 maunds, valued at Rs. 75,000. The experiment having thus been successful, the opium establishments in the district are to be considered permanent.

It is quite probable that these various measures will result in increasing the annual provision of "Bengal" opium to 55,000 or 60,000 chests, while that of Malwa exceeds 40,000 chests, and is capable of development, notwithstanding the pass duty of Rs. 400 a chest. It follows that our opium revenue is of a less precarious character than has been apprehended. The production will henceforth not be confined to certain contiguous districts in Behar, but will likewise be spread over Oude, Rohilcund, and Bundlecund, bad weather being all the less likely to do extensive damage, while the reduced price will serve to keep down the cultivation in China. As to danger to the revenue from the Chinese abandoning the use of the drug, it is out of the question. Habits of the Chinese will continue opium smokers until they themselves become desirous of giving up the practice, and the virtuous Celestials are not likely to conceive any such desire.—Phænix.

THE DUTCH IN SUMATRA.

"The Dutch conquests in Sumatra may be quoted as a flagrant example of the ambition of territorial extension run wild." Such is the declaration of Mr. Craufurd, the best authority on all matters relating to the Eastern Archipelago, except, perhaps, Mr. Logan. The Straits journals just received are filled with protests against a new and flagrant example of Dutch aggression, said to be contrary to all treaties and destructive to our commerce, and we shall strive as intelligibly as possible, with all the treaties before us, to state the case.

About a thousand miles from the continent of India, and only twelve from Java, lies the island of Sumatra, running down from the Andamans and Nicobars in a line parallel with our three settlements of Penang, Malacca, and Singa-pore. It is the largest island of the Archi-pelago next to Borneo, which again is surpassed in magnitude only by Australia. Stretching away in the shape of a spindle for a thousand miles, it is thrice the size of Java or Cuba, and half as large again as Great Britain. Its population is moderately put by Mr. Logan at some two and a-half millions, or hardly twenty to the square mile. Like all these islands, it was early the depot of a brisk trade with India centuries before Marco Polo spent six months among its natives. Already, in 1290, he found the people converted to Mahomedanism. Now, they may be divided into Malays, the conquering race; Achinese in the far north, with whom the Hindoos of Guzerat have traded most; the Palembang, opposite Banca, who are the descendants of Malays and Javanese, the Sarawi and Rejang, and finally the Batak, who, though once cannibals, have surpassed both the Aztecs and Peruvians in the invention of phonetic writing. The island has always been divided among these tribes, and has been broken up into independent kingdoms ever at war, and ever oppressive, as is seen from the scanty population. To add to the internal strife, in 1509, eleven years after the Portuguese landed in India at Calicut, they attempted to establish themselves in Sumatra. The Dutch and English, before whom they gave way as they have done throughout the East, followed, and for years maintained the pettiest struggles to obtain the sole monopoly of black pepper. Expelled by the Dutch from Bantam we made Bencoolen, on the south-west coast, our settlement, and gave it the title of Fort York in honour of King James II., the reigning sovereign. There for a century and a half we bartered brave English lives for pepper, we squandered millions of money, and finally were glad to exchange the place with the Dutch for Malacca. From 1811 to 1816 we expelled the Dutch altogether from the Archipelago, and Sir Stamford Raffles began an administration which, notwithstanding many mistakes, especially on the subject of land tenures, promised to make its rich islands the abode of a happy, a free, and a civilised people. But Lord Castlereagh knew not geophaphy, English statesmen were eager to make the United Netherlands and Belgium rich so as to be a strong bulwark against French aggression: and with a combined magnanimity and folly unparalleled in history, we restored Java to the Dutch in 1816 by what is known as the Treaty of London, signed in 1814. Sir Stamford Raffles had adopted the policy of Free Trade long before England dreamed of it, but the Dutch were allowed to seal up hermetically the island, by making the Java duties on goods in foreign bottoms more than double those on goods in their own ships. This was followed in time by a strict monopoly of all produce which-let us be honest -finds a parallel in the East India Company's monopolies of opium and salt, soon to be broken while the reduced price will serve to keep down the cultivation in China. As to danger to the revenue from the Chinese abandoning the use of cause of complaint. In 1824, when Mr. Canning the drug, it is out of the question. Habits of the kind are never eradicated by Governments. The sions in Sumatra to the Dutch, and agreed to form no new settlement there, on condition that the Dutch ceded to us all their establishments on the continent of India, and on the Peninsula of Malacca. Thus the Dutch obtained a legal footing in Sumatra, and they followed it up until it may be said that the whole southern half of the island is theirs, or under their suzerainty. The Government costs them proportionally almost as much as Algiers costs the French. The last instance of annexation some years ago was the taking possession of Siac almost opposite Malacca, and containing the finest river in the island. That this course of aggression is contrary to the treaty of 1824 is undoubted. Strictly interpreted, that treaty, while it excluded the English from Sumatra, confined the Dutch to the possessions they at that time occupied or received from us, and implicitly secured the independence of all the unconquered native States. To guarantee this each of the contracting parties sub mitted for mutual inspection the treaties they had already made with native Powers, and agreed to do so for the future. They both expressly engaged "that no treaty hereafter made by either, with any native Power in the Eastern Seas, shall contain any Article tending, either expressly, or by the imposition of unequal duties to exclude the trade of the other party from the ports of such native Power." They went further, and agreed to give strict orders to all their officers "to respect the freedom of trade," and in no case to impede a free communication of the natives in the Eastern Archipelago with the ports of the two Governments, respectively, or of the subjects of the two Governments with the ports belonging to native Powers. That this was Lord Palmerston's reading of the treaty in 1841 is evident from the energetic remonstrances which he made against Dutch annexation, and so successfully that the Netherlands Government in 1843 withdrew all the military posts it had established on the east coast of Sumatra. In 1838 Count Van den Bosch, the hero of Mr. Money's book, then colonial minister in Holland, wrote to the Governor-General of Java. "An establishment on the Siac river and further northwards will require to be gone about with the greatest caution. Here especially we will meet with the opposition of England, which must, as yet, and until we are well established everywhere else, be respected." Such is Dutch craftiness. And so six years ago Siac was seized without remonstrance. And now, on the pretext that the States to the north of Siac are its feudatories, the Dutch Resident has visited all the pepper ports on the east coast still independent, and H.M. steamer Scout has seen the Dutch flag flying at Langkat, which, with Siac, Acheen, and Dilli, has an engagement with us "for the pur pose of strengthening and perpetuating the friendship and mercantile communication with Pulo Penang."

It may be asked, if we ourselves are precluded from making settlements in Sumatra, why we should object to the Dutch forming a policy which a settlement of the question of a fair Contract has given us India? We have two reasons for Law. Some of these Courts have certainly objecting. We would rather leave the people of | decided a large number of such cases—in one Northern Sumatra to themselves than see them instance not less than 1,500-in the last ten the victims of a policy such as Holland pursues in Java, where the people, made serfs to the soil, are deprived of all hope beyond that enjoyed by well-fed pigs, as Mr. Money's book conclusively And there is a more selfish reason. Nearly all the trade of Penang depends on the pepper ports between Siac and Acheen, on the north-east coast opposite to it. Once permit Dutch aggression contrary to treaty, and the comparative freedom of trade secured by the treaty of 1824 is extinguished. The Dutch will bind up the whole produce of these ports in a strict monopoly, and send it to Holland in their own ships. The native chiefs will have only the Dutch merchant to buy their pepper and must accept the Dutch price; we shall have no market at all, and Penang will decay. The great future which by Free-trade Raffles opened up to the Eastern Archipelago in 1811 has been dashed by the Dutch, whose name is execrated by all the people. Dutch annexation means serfdom for the people and extinction to all commerce. With the highly-coloured statements of Mr. spect and ordinary comfort, Money's book before us we still believe that Free-trade and political independence will do more to civilise the Eastern Archipelago than the soul-destroying rule of a Christian and a Protestant nation who treat their Asiatic subjects as Mussulmans do their wivesenjoy their society and shut them out of heaven. In 1841 the Penang Chamber of Commerce petitioned Lord Palmerston to act, and he did so successfully. Let them repeat the experi-ment. What Lord Palmerston did so well then he will not refuse to do when the need is more pressing and the aggression more serious. More than this, India cannot attend to the imperial interests of England in the Straits, and an Indian colonel, however gallant, is hardly their best de fender. Let our Eastern settlements urge this complication as a new argument for colonial control. India and they do not love each other, and the sooner a divorce is effected the better for both. -Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A GROAN.-The medical officers of her Majesty's British and Indian Forces have just grounds for serious complaint against both the Home and Indian Governments. No good reason can be brought forward for the delay which has been already borne by those most interested in a settlement of the amalgamation question. Even when a man expects to be injured, he is anxious to know the worst-but in the case before us grievances both sound and true are expected to be removed, and claims heard and granted. If some stronger feeling than discontent arise among the medical officers of her Majesty's armies in India the two Governments alone are answerable for all the distaste felt by these officers to the public service. It is contrary to man's nature that he can serve a bad master with any pleasure or zeal, and we know that the feeling uppermost in the minds of many medical officers is, a strong desire to leave a service in which they can obtain no consideration, no redress of grievances however old, and no even-handed justice. Her Majesty's Warrant of the 13th of January, 1860, is now nearly three years old. It gave in so many words, increased rank, pay, and precedence, but the only substantial advantage—the increased pay—has been withheld up to the present day. A surgeon becomes surgeon-major after twenty years' service, and he finds himself in no respect a gainer by the pompous official announcement. This is one only among several grievances. A good doctor is as essential to the efficiency of a regiment as is a good commanding officer. earnestly invite the attention of the Governor-General to the subject .- Friend of India.

BREACH OF CONTRACT .- The Secretary of State for India has called for returns of the number of cases of Breach of Contract decided by the Small Cause Courts of Northern India, with a view to months. It is just possible that a solution of this difficult question may be found in an extension of Small Cause Courts presided over by trained judges. But the Indian Government should obtain the opinion of plaintiffs on such cases, as well as the mere returns and the opinions of the judges. The Landholders' Association would do well to attend to this question, which must ultimately be settled by a compro-

SOLDIERS' WIVES .- The Delhi Gazette directs attention to a fact which is most discreditable to the author of the order. On the 1st September the women of H.M.'s 101st Regiment were mustered on parade with the men, drawn up on the right of their respective companies. This is as disagreeable to the men as it is dishonouring to their wives. It has been, and should continue to be, the rule to muster the women, when necessary, in the barracks. As it is, we not only keep down the number of married women as low as possible, but do nothing to ensure their self-re-

, SHIPWRECKS IN THE HOOGHLY .- Never is the Hooghly so dangerous as at this season of the year. No less than six ships have of late been lost, and some of the Calcutta journals have taken occasion to animadvert on the carelessness of the pilots. The facts are these, we believe. Of the six one foundered at the Sandheads, without a pilot on board. Another was so leaky that she became water-logged, and sank whilst in charge of a pilot, without any blame attaching to him. A third was lost chiefly owing to the position of a light vessel having been changed without the pilot having had an opportunity of becoming aware of that fact. This pilot was reduced in rank. A fourth ship was wrecked owing to her pilot going below for a time, and leaving the ship in charge of his leadsman during his own absence from the deck. He was punished by reduction to an inferior grade for one year. The fifth vessel was the Elizabeth, lost at night in an intricate channel. The pilot was punished by dismissal. The sixth case has not yet come before the Marine Court for trial, and any remarks, therefore, would be out of place. The punishments awarded hardly justify an attack on the Marine Courts or the Pilot Service. The proceedings of the former ought to be published by authority.

REWAH.—As a foil to the picture which we, (Friend of India), drew of Rewah, from the best authority, last week, we have received a letter denouncing the oppression said to be committed by the Rajah upon his subjects. We are told that twice a year the Rajah deposits a large amount of treasure in the Fort of Bandogurh, which he believes to be impregnable; that he has farmed the taxes to two most cruel natives, who mercilessly oppress the people; that several rich Brahmins whose wealth has been stripped from them by the Rajah, finding no redress, have committed suicide; that the ryots and zemindars of Sohagpore have been deprived justly of their estates, several being cruelly murdered by the Rajah's sepoys; and finally, that the Political Agent declines to interfere at the cry of the oppressed and even to open petitions on the subject. Such oppression is generally more the rule than the exception in native States, being, in fact, the only mode of governing known to Asiatics. The Agent is by treaty forbidden to receive petitions, but in more than one instance the Government of India has interfered. These statements are exaggerated. Still, now that every noble's estate has become a part of the Empire, public opinion must be brought to bear on the chiefs, and hence, while disbelieving some of the facts, we publish them. Every native in India, from Peshawur to Tounghoo and Cape Comorin is more or less our subject, and is entitled, directly or indirectly, to our protection. The Government of India, which has restrained Holkar from oppressing the Thakoors of Rampoora, will not consent to see the resources of Rewah developed" by such means.

AGRICULTURAL PROGRESS .- The first step has been taken by Mr. Macnair, of Joradah, in Jessore, and Messrs. Jardine, Skinner, and Co. in Raishave, to revolutionise the labour market and the agricultural operations of the country. Each has ordered out from England a steam plough. and has engaged a skilled engineer to superintend it. Already, in some factories, machinery has superseded native feet in the manufacture of indigo, and so successfully that human labour promises to be less and less resorted to by English capitalists. We observe, too, that an engineer has taken out a patent, under the Indian Act, for a machine to dry and roast tea. The disturbances of 1859 promise to be a boon to the settler, not only in breaking up an old and vicious system, but in leading landholders to work their estates on the most improved methods, and to devote their capital to new objects, such as tea and cotton. In some districts, we hear, the tenantry are readily entering into contracts for sowing indigo, on the condition that their rents be not raised more than sixpence a beegah. We trust the planters who make such agreements will not fall into the old error of confounding the indigo with the rent accounts, and thus lose the benefit of the last four years' struggle .- Friend of PORT BLAIR is rapidly becoming a flourishing out, and are opposed to it still. It can work no Our latest letters therefrom convict settlement. are up to August 30th, and according to them the internal state of the settlement is highly satisfactory. The superintendent has recently adopted a plan for the management of his small kingdom by which a given number of men will be told off to each post, with a proper proportion of gangsmen, the men to be located there permanently instead of shifting about as formerly. There can be no doubt that this plan will, as our correspondent says, enable the authorities to tell at any moment the exact number of men stationed at any post, and the amount of work to be expected from them; but at the same time it will have this disadvantage, that the convicts will be enabled, by constant association with each other in one place, to carry out any plans for escape with greater facility than if they were constantly shifting. This disadvantage is not, however, so strong in Port Blair as it would be in any other convict settlement; for those who have escaped are, generally speaking, only too glad to get back again with their lives The last attempt was made by five men at Viper Island, who constructed a raft out of three plaintain trees, and so crossed over to the mainland, swimming themselves, and pushing the raft which contained their blankets and clothes, but no food, before them. They landed on the coast a little to the North of Viper Island, and after travelling a short distance to the North struck off to the West, reaching the sea-shore on the seventh day. Their road the whole way lay through dense jungle, and though they found great quantities of pan, they could get nothing to eat but a small sub-acid fruit with two stones in it. On reaching the sea-shore they found some dried cocoanuts which had been washed on shore, but only enough for a single meal. However, they pushed on along the shore for about a day and a half, and at last came to four canoes apparently deserted. Encouraged by the seeming solitude, they went up to the canoes, but were at once surrounded by more than twenty men armed with bows and arrows and small knives. They offered no resistance, and the savages, after stripping them and tearing off all their nose-rings, &c., carried them away to their huts, which were close by but half hid in the jungle. Here some women were cooking, and very politely offered them some meat, but this offer was declined by the convicts, probably high caste men, and on this the male savages, naturally disgusted, led them to the beach and made signs to them that they had better be off the way they came. This advice the convicts took and made off at once, but the aborigines, who, according to our letter, were in "high spirits, laughing and chattering," pelted them with stones as they ran, so that the convicts fell down several times in the water; and one benevolent young gentleman, aged twelve or thereabouts, carried his practical joking so far as to stick an arrow into one of the runaway's shoulders. At last, however, they allowed them to get away, and the convicts crossed the jungle till they came out opposite to Chatham Island, where they halted on the coast and called for help. This being given, they returned to their own quarters, which they are not likely to leave again. Several new roads are being made in the settlement, and a temporary semaphore has been erected on Ross Island. The road from Aberdeen to Phœnix Bay has been completed, and in order to give the Europeans attached to the naval brigade as clerks, &c., some exercise instead of amusement, the absence of which is pathetically deplored, another road is to be made along the beach, all round Ross Island, above high-water mark. With all these roads Port Blair must be rather an enviable place, and we wish our municipal commissioners could be sent down there for a season. There is a field, too, for commercial speculation, for cloth is scarce, and a timely importation would sell at a profit. Everything planted on the settlement grows well, especially cotton; and altogether we have reason to congratulate ourselves that Port Blair is well managed. One thing, however, we are sorry to hear, and that is that intermarriage among the convicts is increasing. We have condemned this through. M.D., to his full surseoncy.

good, and will, we fear, work much evil. If it does nothing else it will effectually check all independent settlers from remaining on the island, by the fear it will excite of a rising generationthe progeny of felons. There are at present in the settlement 2,264 native convicts, all told; and should intermarriage increase, it will become a most momentous question what to do with the fruits of such ill-advised unions .- Englishman.

English in the Law Courts .- Gradually and wisely English will make its way into the Sessions Courts as well as the High Court of Bengal. All Sessions Judges are now required to give authenticated copies of their decisions in English in addition to the vernacular translations thereof, to all parties applying for such in order to prefer any appeal or make any reference to the High The zillah judges have also been called on to furnish the Court with a list of Moonsifs distinguished the Diploma-holders and those who have taken degrees at the University from non-Diploma-holders, as well as those who are acquainted with the English language from those who are not.

A WESLEYAN MISSION is about to be established in Calcutta and its suburbs. Two missionaries have arrived from England, and the Rev. Mr. Jenkins has come up on a visit from Madras. The Eng lish Weslevans are almost the only Protestant body who have no mission in Northern India. We recommend the aboriginal tribes to their attention. The Sonthals are cared for by the Church of England, and the Coles of Chota Nagpore by German missionaries. The Wesleyans have begun a mission at Sironcha on the Godavery, and should devote themselves to the indigenous tribes of the Central Provinces, from thence to Sumbulpore. For want of missionaries Hinduism is making proselytes among them.

THE BRITISH AND FOREIGN UNITARIAN ASSO-CIATION have resolved to discontinue their abor-"The committee tive mission in Calcutta. express their regret that, from the absence of satisfactory and well-attested facts, they do not feel justified in continuing their efforts in that part of the world, unless evidence is given that the mission is doing a more distinctively Christian and Unitarian work, and is carried on with more manifest power and clearness of purpose."

THE KOOSHTEE RAILWAY .- The Dacca News again calls attention to the uselessness of the Kooshtee Railway to the people of Dacca and East Bengal. Their traffic reaches Kooshtee by a water route, which for half the year is unavailable. Assam, Cachar, Sylhet, and Dacca will continue to patronise the steamers which ply through the Soonderbuns. During the dry season the steamers between Kooshtee and Dacca are obliged to adopt a circuitous route as low down as Khulna. The paper advocates the extension of the line to Furreedpore, where it would intercept the northern traffic, which flows through Serajgunge, as well as gain a firm hold on the traffic of East Bengal. To do this capital must be raised, but the railway will not pay without it.

BRIGADIER SWINLEY, now Commandant of Artillery at Meerut, is to be one of the Inspectors of Artillery under the new system, and will take charge of the Lower Circle. The appointment now held by Brigadier Swinley at Meerut will not, we believe, be filled up; but new arrangements with reference to the command and staff of Artillery, at the head quarters of that arm, will be made.

CHAMBERLAIN'S HORSE.-Letters from Meerut mention that a troop of Chamberlain's Cavalry had received orders to march for Agra, to form part of the military escort of his Excellency the Commander in Chief in his coming tour of inspection; also that the 19th Punjab Infantry were to march for Agra on Oct. 15; and that it was reported that on the Relief the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade would come to Meerut, instead of H.M.'s 90th, as previously arranged.

SURGEON-MAJOR T. A. WETHERED, of the Bengal army, has been permitted to retire from the service. He entered it in 1838. His retirement promotes Assistant-surgeon G. R. Pemberton,

I.-Lieutenant Hennessy to be second in command vice Captain Crutchley, appointed Cantonment Joint Magistrate at Ferozepore. Lieut. Hennessey is, we hear, a young officer of promise, and distinguished himself in the mutiny.

LIEUTENANT MCNAIR .- Telegraphic intelligence from army head-quarters at Simla mentions that the trial by court-martial at Fort William, of Lieutenant McNair, of the late 73rd Native Infantry, has terminated fatally for the military career of that officer, who has been sentenced to dismissal from the service; and the sentence has been approved and confirmed by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. Before finally sealing the fate of this young officer, his Excellency wrote down to the Presidency, desiring to know if any family or private affairs or misfortunes had led to Lieutenant McNair being so frequently placed in arrest, but the answer being that no such circumstances were known to the court which tried him, or to the authorities, the verdict and the sentence took effect, and Lieutenant McNair's name is removed from the army list.

THE LIEUT.-GOVERNOR N.W.P .- Mr. Edmonstone's camp will not be formed this season, since he intends to proceed to Allahabad by dawk, visiting any stations on his way at which matters may be considered to require his personal inspection. These inspections, if any such be held, will be the last which he will make, resigning, as he will, his high office in January of next year. Mr. Edmonstone's retirement will be a loss to the State, which has always included him in the number of the ablest and best of its servants. To abilities of a high order, he united a marvellous industry, or, as the late lamented Hodson, who acted in 1851 as his personal assistant when he held the appointment of Commissioner of the Cis Sutlej States, used to called it, a "most uncommon appetite for work." The removal of his name from the list of the Civil Service reminds us of another old servant of the late Court of Directors. Working with Elliott, Belli, Bogle, and D'Oyley, regarding whose treatment by Francis and his colleagues Warren Hastings complains to his honourable masters, was N. B. Edmonstone. This gentleman, it will be remembered, translated Lord Cornwallis's Code of 1793 in Persian, and received from Government a donation of ten thousand rupees as an expression of its satisfaction at the manner in which the task had been accomplished. The translation of the Code into Bengalee was made by Mr. Forster, the first Bengalee scholar of his time, who afterwards published the first dictionary of that language.

THE OVERLAND ROUTE .- Mention is made by the Colombo Observer of the 6th of October of three casualties which had occurred on board the mail steamer Colombo, during her late passage round from Suez, owing to the dreadful heat in the Red Sea. The sufferers were Mr. Simpson, head of the Ceylon firm of J. P. Simpson and and Co., Captain King, of the Bengal army, and the steward of the ship.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S STAFF. -- Some changes have recently been made on the staff of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, which may be the better for explanation. Capt. Burne, who was military secretary, has been removed from the post, in consequence of orders from the Horse Guards, that that appointment is not to be held by any officer below the rank of Field-officer. Captain Burne, therefore, becomes A.D.C. and Private Secretary, and Lieutenant-colonel Sarle, Military Secretary. Captain Burne was originally selected for this office solely on public grounds.

APPEALS TO H.M.'s PRIVY COUNCIL--The following important opinion of the late Advocate General regarding the admission of appeal to the Privy Council from the decisions of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh is taken from the Hurkaru. "In my opinion, it is not competent to the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh to allow a petition of appeal to her Majesty in Council from any decisions passed by him, in any case, civil or criminal, or to suspend execution pending, or take security regarding, any such appeal, unless an order to that effect shall have been obtained from her Majesty in Council; but it is quite competent to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council to entertain a petition, from any person aggrieved by a judgment of the Judicial Commissioner, in any civil case of whatever amount, praying for leave to appeal from such judgment, and, if such leave be granted, to order the transmission to the Privy Council of transcripts of the proceedings, and to hear and finally dispose of the appeal as fully as in the case of ordinary appeals.'

RECRUITS FROM ENGLAND .- As no regiments leave England this year for India the drafts expected, as far as Bengal is concerned, amount to about 3,700 men and sixty seven officers. The first draft is expected towards the end of October, and will be quartered at Chinsurah until equipped with light clothing. No time will be lost in despatching these men to their respective regiments up country, and the facilities now offered by the railway will conduce much to this desirable result. The Government have acted wisely, we think, in separating the recruits arriving in the country, from the time-expired men awaiting embarkation. Dum Dum was, until lately, the receiving depot for both, hence the commanding officer of that station had to deal with the two classes of soldiers most difficult to deal withthe very young and the very old-those who know too little and those who know a great deal too much. The present arrangement, whereby the recruits go to Chinsurah and the time-expired men to Fort William, is an improvement upon the old system. The chief misfortune is, however, that drink is too easily procurable at both places, notwithstanding the strenuous precautionary measures adopted by the authorities.

MUHAMMEDAN COMMENTARY ON THE BIBLE. One Syud Ahmed, a learned Mussulman of Ghazeepore, announces that he has written, on the principles of the Muhammadan faith, a commentary entitled, "The Muhammadan Commentary of the Holy Bible," and has begun to publish the work at his own press. As it is very large it is to be supplied periodically to " ardent purchasers " at 128 pages for one rupee. The work consists at present of English and Oordoo in parallel columns. A singular instance this of that eclecticism which always marks the decline of earnestness in a belief, and which attended the expiring efforts of Paganism in ancient times. Meanwhile, the Rev. Mr. Owen has completed his Oordoo commentary on the Bible. The mutiny destroyed alike his MSS. and his library, but the work, again com menced, is near publication.

THE S.S. "INDIA."-The Calcutta and Burmah Steam Navigation Company's steamer India has certainly succeeded in making what Martin Chuzzlewit's captain of the Screw would call a " spanking run." She left Greenock on the 6th August, crossed the line on the 22nd, rounded the Cape on the 8th September, and arrived at Galle on the 2nd October, being fifty six days and-a-half out from Greenock-fifty days under steam, and six and-a-half under canvas. The India arrived at the Sandheads on the 9th, having made the voyage in sixty days and nine hours, including forty-eight hours stay at Galle, with an average of eleven knots an hour through the pas-She was built by Messra. William Denny and Brothers, of Dunbarton, and previous to leaving for this country had a very successful trial trip. She is 1,010 tons gross register, and has direct acting engines of 200 horse power upon the surface condensation principle.

Bank of Upper India.—A new bank company has been formed in Meerut, known as the Bank of Upper India. Mr. W. A. Forbes, C.S., Major Tyrhwitt, and Mr. Cohen are trustees.

FATAL ACCIDENT .- A dreadful accident took place on the 9th Oct., at about 2 P.M., in a lane branching out of Radabazar and leading to Doomtollah. Mr. Jones, of the Custom-house, who occupied a large building in the locality indicated, was in the act of superintending some repairs which were being done to a portion of the building on the second floor near the landing place, and which was in a very dilapidated condition. Four bricklayers were engaged in the repairs, and attending to some directions he was giving them, when suddenly the entire portion of the floor gave way, bringing down with it the five individuals with a tremendous crash, and burying them under its ruins. The police, together with a large body of Europeans, was immediately on the spot, endeavouring to extricate the poor sufferers. Three of the natives who were first got out were still living, though most seriously injured, especially one of them, who was conveyed to the College Hospital in a hopeless state. The fourth man that was extracted was the mistree, an old man, but he was already a corpse. Ultimately, and after removing a great portion of the ruins, was discovered the body of poor Jones, who appeared to have expired some time before. The face was fearfully bruised and completely disfigured, and showed marks of considerable violence. Mr. Jones was a big powerful man, and much respected by those about him for his kindness and affability. His sister and other ladies were in an adjacent room at the time, and their feelings on seeing the melancholy accident can be better imagined than described .- Hurkaru.

CHIEF MAGISTRATE OF CALCUTTA.—Several candidates have already appeared in the field for the appointment vacated by the death of Mr. James Hume. Amongst others, we hear the name of Mr. Macleod Wylie, who has applied for the appointment, and would be willing to accept it if the salary of the post be not reduced to 1,500 rupees, as was proposed in a minute by Lord Canning at the time when the salary of the junior magistrate was increased from 800 to 1,200 rupees. Mr. Wylie, as Deputy-secretary to the Government of India in the Legislative Department, receives 2,500 rupees a month.

THE MAHARMAH OF BURDWAN.—The Englishman acknowledges the receipt of Rs. 250 for the Mead Fund from his Highness the Maharajah of Burdwan; the letter enclosing which conveys an apology for the delay in the remittance on the ground of a delicacy on his Highness's part in putting himself forward in an object so purely Christian. The Rajah's liberality does him honour, but the spirit of his letter is yet more praiseworthy.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—Sir Hugh Rose's intended tour through Central India is mainly attributable to his Excellency's anxiety to satisfy himself by personal inspection as to the character of certain sites for hill-stations for European troops in that part of India. It is not to be inferred from this that any sanction has been accorded by Government to the building of new cantonments in Central India, or that any expenditure on hill sites in that quarter is likely to take place immediately, beyond the expenditure of a few thousand rupees to prepare Murthoor as a sanatarium for Nagpore.

Captain Forlong, who is an officer of high engineering information and attainments, has succeeded Colonel Ommanney as Superintending Engineer of the 1st or Presidency Circle, Bengal, and has also officiating charge of the 2nd, or South Eastern Circle. Mr. W. Smith, Civil Engineer, has succeeded Captain Price as Civil Architect at the Presidency, in which appointment he relieved Captain Price when the latter officer temporarily replaced Colonel Ommanney.

Mr. W. Judge.—The Assam Company, as we gather from the Hindoo Patriot, have voted Mr. Judge a present of fifty shares for his exposure of the Mackey cum Carter misdeeds. "When we consider," adds the Patriot, "that the reward given was simply a reward for neglect of his own duty, which led to mis-appropriations and misdeeds on the part of his brother directors, we are tempted to say with Mr. Mackey that he has reaped where he had not sown."

THE "INDIAN PUBLIC SCHOOLS" SCHEME .-In June, 1859, the Bishop of Calcutta issued a circular letter, proposing the establishment of three schools at stations in the Himalayas-one for Bengal, one for the North-West Provinces. and one for the Punjab. The circulars elicited many promises of subscription, and a number of suggestions. Previously to the day of thanksgiving, in July, 1859, for the suppression of the mutiny and rebellion, a second circular was issued to the clergy of this diocese, proposing that a collection should be made on that day for the foundation of a public school at some station in the Himalayas, as a memorial of the deliverance then commemorated. Accordingly a general collection was made, amounting to Rs. 35,000, including a munificent donation from Earl Canning of Rs. 10,000 at the Cathedral in Calcutta. money was placed in the hands of the Bishop, the Archdeacon, H. B. Harrington, and A. Sconce, Esqrs., and was invested in the 51 per Cent. Government loan, in the name of the Bishop and Archdeacon of Calcutta, and is called the "Indian Public Schools Fund." In May, 1860, the bishop, being then at Simla, and doubtful as to what hill station he should determine upon for the large school which he could assist with the funds at his disposal, a meeting of Simla houseowners and others interested in the welfare of the station, was held on the 30th April, 1860, and a committee formed to draw up a statement showing the advantages of Simla as compared with other hill stations. The statement was prepared and submitted to the bishop, who then determined that he would not come to any decision until he had seen Mussoorie, in the course of his visitation, the Rev. Mr. Maddock having offered to make over all the buildings of his school at that station for the sum of 50,000 rs., on condition that he was to be nominated principal of the proposed institution. It was also necessary to ascertain how many persons in the Cis and Trans Sutlej States were likely to avail themselves of a collegiate school at Simla, and blank forms were sent to all stations under the Punjab Lieutenant governorship. These were filled up and returned, with the number of children likely to be sent if the school was established at Simla. It was explained that the school would be for the benefit of children whose parents were unable to send them to England for education, but who could afford to pay a small sum monthly, and that the object aimed at would be a sound, practical, and religious education, to which classical and other studies would be added, as far as means allowed. Last year it was intimated that Simla, being almost destitute of educational advantages and favourably situated, was the chosen spot, and a committee was asked to look for a site for the school. Of several indicated, the Bishop has selected Jutogh, and the commander-in-chief has conceded the withdrawal of the convalescent depot to make room for the school. Jutogh is about four miles from the central point of Simla, and two from the western outskirt. It is a bleak, barren plateau, with about a dozen willows round a muddy pool, and half that number of sorrylooking trees, surrounded by the hovels and ba-zaar of the late Nusseree battalion on the west and north, and by the houses and gardens of the officers on the east; it is open to the south. Amongst the sites indicated by the commit tee is a very fine one, on a spur of Jako, about two miles from the church. It is prettily timbered, and tolerably level, with plenty of stone for building, and a fine supply of water in the neighbourhood. There are four houses in the spur, with room for building other structures, such as school-rooms and dormitories, &c. The spot is known as "Little Chelsea." It may have been seen by the Bishop during his stay in Simla, and considered too small for his plans. It was examined lately by two Roman Catholic clergymen who were deputed by their bishop to look for a site on which to build a large Orphanage, for which they consider it admirably adapted. had selected a spot beyond Jutogh, but were refused the land on any terms by the Puttiala Rajah, to whom it belongs.—Englishman.

STR HUGH ROSE'S MOVEMENTS .- According to the Hurkaru, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, with two officers of the Adjutant-general's, and one from the Quartermaster-general's Department, and the whole of his staff will leave Simlah for Agra on the 30th October, so as to arrive there by the 5th of the ensuing month, after visiting Dugshaie, Subathoo, and Kussowlee on his way down. The headquarters camp will commence moving down from Simla by the 25th. in small parties, to Umballah, there to take dak gharies so as to reach Agra before the 5th Nov. On the 10th of that month the camp will proceed on to Gwalior. There a light camp will be formed, so as to move by long marches through Jhansee, Sepree, Lullutpore, Saugor, Jub-bulpore, Allahabad, and Cawnpore, to Luck-now, reaching this last named place by the first week in January, 1863. While his Excellency will be indulging in this sweep through Central India, the remainder of his camp will march from Gwalior direct to Lucknow, there to await Sir Hugh's arrival. At Lucknow, we believe, that arrangements are already being made for a little Chobham, and if the financial department does not put its veto on this hobby of his Excellency, the troops, particularly the European Regiments from the adjacent stations, are to be encamped at Lucknow, either between Charbagh and Dilkoosha, or between Alumbagh and the city. These troops are to be drilled under the orders of General McDuff in the new evolutions on a large scale. His Excellency will remain with the troops at this miniature Chob ham for about fifteen days, and then proceed with his Camp to Agra to meet that of Lord Elgin, which will by that time be there. Both camps will then proceed through Delhi, Meerut, Roorkhee, and the Doon to Umballah, to summer at Simlah in 1863.

DOMINIE COLONELS.-The army of India is rapidly becoming in some respects a large school where colonels of regiments are supposed to act the part of monitors. We (Hurkaru) learn that a gallant and highly connected lieutenant colonel of a regiment up country, a short time ago, when examining a class of officers in their official cate chism found fault with a captain for inattention, and as a punishment ordered him to write out a certain portion of her Majesty's Army Regulations as a task. The transcribing of these interesting paragraphs was, "according to order," to take place in the verandah of the orderly-room -the place where prisoners, complainants, noncommissioned officers, &c., most do congregate. and where a fine view could be obtained of the gentleman in disgrace. The captain, we understand, has appealed against this treatment to higher authority, and if our information be correct the general officer of the division has, we are glad to say, supported his appeal.

A STARTLING INNOVATION. -- We (Englishman) hear with extreme surprise, and, notwithstanding the excellent source from which our information proceeds, with a reserve of something approaching to incredulity, that in certain courts martial uncountry it has been ordered that the votes of the members for "guilty" or "not guilty" should be given, in the proceedings in rotation. As the junior member always votes first, and the others after him by seniority, the new arrangement will enable any person in whose hands the proceedings may be placed to discover the vote of each individual member; instead of learning, as heretofore, only the aggregate decision of the court. We need not specify the reasons for which we object to this adroit manouvre; and notwithstanding the specific nature of the information tendered to us on the subject, still cling to a hope that there is some mistake in the matter. If not, and all that has been communicated to us is true, and can be maintained, the sooner that courts martial, already rapidly waning in popularity, are annihilated, the better.

THE INDIGO SEASON has been already opened by the sale of a portion of the produce of the Mooteharee concern, in Tirhoot, at Rs. 250 per factory maund. Although this is the last season's price for this mark, the quality is said to be greatly Superior.

"L'HOMME PROPOSE."-The Vicerov and Goernor-general proposes, after a stay at Simlah during the summer of 1863, to visit the stations in the Punjab, particularly those on the Frontier, in November of that year, and return again to Simlah for the summer of 1864, descending again in November of that year to visit Oude and the North Western Provinces, so as to pass the summer of 1865 in Calcutta.

LACK OF JUDGES.—The Chief Justice, it is said, has applied to the Home Government for the appointment of two extra Judges of the High Court. At present the number of judges is imited to thirteen, including the Chief Justice. but the Act of Parliament authorises fifteen. If the work of the past few weeks can be taken as any criterion of the ordinary business to be got through, the necessity for additional assistance is apparent. Mr. Raikes, temporarily absent, will return from Madras by the next steamer, and resume his duties by the 1st Nov.

THE NEW ROYAL ARTILLERY APPOINTMENTS are as follows:—Inspector-General, Bengal, Col. Swinly; Inspector-General, N. W. Provinces Col. I. Brind, c.B.; Deputy Adjutant-General, Lieut.-Col. G. Moir, c.B.; Brigade Major, Bengal, 2nd Capt. A. H. Lindsay; Brigade Major, N. W. Provinces, 2nd Capt. M. C. Sankey.

Mr. C. B. Stewart.—The Hurkaru gives a positive contradiction to the rumour that Mr. C. B. Stewart, of the firm of Gordon, Stewart, and Co., had been nominated a member of the Bengal Council.

MADRAS.

THE MADRAS POLICE.

We have had so frequently to call attention to the supineness of the Madras Government, that it becomes a matter of especial pleasure to be able to single out one feature of recent adminis. tration of its affairs of which we can give an almost unqualified approval. In Bengal the police have long been felt to be the curse of society. In Madras, till recently, their cruelties and oppression were the theme of constant invective and led eventually to the report of the Torture Commission. The prevention rather than the detection of crime, is the great object of all police arrangements, and in point of strict social duty, the latter is generally only useful as it tends to ensure the former. The reformation of criminals is a very forlorn hope, especially in this country. The deterring effect of their punishment upon others, the knowledge which soon runs through a community that detection and punishment are. if not absolutely sure, at all events most likely to follow the commission of crime, are and must be the chief advantages which society derive from the possession of an efficient police force.

Madras has found that the most essential ingredient in an effective force is to be discovered in the services of the European officers of the force. These officers proceed steadily and slowly through their districts, dividing their time equally over all the parts. Their object is to teach the men their duty in detail, and to maintain free intercourse with the village magnates and principal inhabitants. It is highly important, considering the necessity of a police force being officered by Europeans, whose language, habits, and feelings are foreign to the natives, that they should mix with them to a sufficient extent to enable the people to regard them as their protectors and in some sort their friends. The co-operation of the village communities is most important, and to secure it the object should be to make them feel that the police is a municipal rather than an imperial institution, and that they are really far more interested in the efficiency, diligence, and accessibility of each officer in it than the Government. They must be encouraged to expect more from the police, and this can only be done by insisting on the plan which they have adopted in Madras of making European officers communicate freely with the people. The consequence is that wherever the police service has been stationed long in particular districts, they have steadily increased in popularity. A better class of men, chosen freely from Europeans, East Indians, and natives alike, have been found for employment in the grade of inspectors, and have worked intelligently and well. Potails or village magistrates are required to act as coadjutors of the police, and the village police, so far as it exists, is required to aid the constabulary. This co-operation is the keystone of efficient police administration, and beneficial results have already been produced. In most district courts an intelligent police officer aids the public prosecutor at the final trial of the prisoners, and is at hand to take the instructions of the court. A system has been introduced of observing, reporting, and registering all crimes with certainty and accuracy, and the active patrol of the streets, in towns, and of ghats and highways in rural districts, is enforced. The relation of the magistracy towards the police, and their willingness to afford support and is an important subject, to. The recent alteration of encouragement, is to be attended to. the law has tended considerably to weaken the direct control of the European magistracy over their subordinates in the administration of justice, and thereby to render them more dependent on the police for speedy intelligence of what occurs in their districts. Officers of police are required to investigate in the first instance, and prepare for trial when necessary, all cases of complaint affecting the conduct of their subordinates. Such investigations when made by the magistracy without notice to, or communication with, the supernitendent, have been found to be in practice subversive of sound administration and departmental subordination, and are discontinued.

The introduction of the force into the districts has not been made without incurring in some instances severe opposition, especially in Bellary and Cuddapah. The population resolutely tried their strength, but were worsted. A gradual improvement has since been effected not merely in preventing crime, but in the character of the crimes which are committed. The work of detection is a very difficult process, requiring the exercise of considerable skill. In training detectives the great difficulty is to destroy the habit of looking to the prisoner for confession against himself. Indiscriminate arrest has to be stopped with severity, the effect of which is at first to paralyse the efforts of the men. We rejoice to hear of these vigorous efforts for the suppression and punishment of crime, and to ensure the safety of society. With an ignorant police, an unskilled native magistracy, the well-known apathy of the people in submitting to the oppression of evil doers, the unwillingness of prosecutors and witnesses to attend without remuneration, and their venality when they do attend, are formidable difficulties in the way of an efficient administration of criminal justice. It is the duty of Government to do the utmost in their power to repress these evils, and we are bound to add that the authorities at Madras are working steadily, efficiently, and successfully to accomplish that end .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE JAINS .- The Swami, or Lord of the Jains. is celibate, and seems to be a fair parallel to the Bombay Maharaj. The death of the late Swami from vice does not in the least abate the universal esteem in which he was held by his followers as one of the best of men. Their expressions of deep grief at his death were mingled with compassionate lamentations that medicine, which had so frequently saved him before, had this time proved unavailing. The temple, from its description, seems to resemble the enormous structures of Egypt rather than anything else. It is an oblong building on a hill, seventy feet square, constructed amongst enormous masses of loose rock; the labour expended in hewing and fitting the immense stones to every inequality of the surface and sides is almost incredible. It consists of an open court surrounded by a wall of hewn granite about twenty feet in height, and round the inside are a verandah and numerous chambers, containing statues nearly life size. In the centre and facing the doorway stands the principal object of Jain worship, a colossal figure of Jineshwara, inaugurated 500 years ago by one of the Mysore kings. The image is that of a naked human figure, upwards of seventy feet in height, and shout twenty-five feet across the shoulders From the thighs upwards it is in full relief; down wards it is attached to the rock behind. It is believed by the Jains to have been formed so exactly according to the rules of art, that life ensued. At the finishing stroke of the chisel the sculptor perceived it begin to move, and dreading the mis chief that so huge a being might do, instantly chipped off a portion of the left foretinger, and by this only imperfection deprived it of life. The manifest limit of the rock more rationally accounts for the shortness of the finger. The curly head and thick lips point to an Egyptian origin and model.—Friend of India.

MOULMEIN, Sept. 27 .- Rumours of war with Ava are rife among some of the Burmese here, but whether they have any foundation remains to mein robberies were never so frequent as they are now, and almost every man in the place sleeps with a loaded revolver under his pillow. There is a rumour that the Viceroy intends coming here on a flying visit very shortly. It is to be hoped that an opportunity will be taken to represent to him the injustice to us of the new mail contract. Moulmein ought to have all the advantages in the new contract which Rangoon enjoys, by having direct communication with Tavoy, Mergui, and the Straits. The weather has broken at last, and we have now had a fortnight's fine weather, with refreshing showers.

RANGOON, Sept. 30.—There is no news stirring in Rangoon. The most exciting topic is the weather. After a long interval of dry weather which made some of the pessimists talk gloomily about the rice-crop, the rain is down on us again at the rate of six inches per diem, and all is wet, mouldy, and uncomfortable. The Chief Commissioner has passed our frontier, and we shall hear no more of him or the probable results of his mission for another month at least. The chances are that he will return re injectá. Every one here is exclaiming against the late monstrous arrangement of the Postal Department by which our mail steamers are made to go all the way round by Chittagong. It makes us just a fortnight further from England, and is of no use to any one but the few people at the wretched station of Chittagong, who, more over, have the advantage of a daily land-dakh from Calcutta. If they require steam communication it should be kept up by a small steamer running between Chittagong and Akyab. The Recorder's Courts' Bill excites but little interest here. There have been some feeble remarks on it in the local papers, but the inhabitants generally do not seem to have any idea of holding a meeting, or making any movement to show the general opinion regarding it. The finality of the Recorder's decisions, which is provided for by Section 27 of the Act, can hardly be relished. The probabilities are this section will be modified, and an appeal allowed to the Calcutta High Court, or perhaps to the Chief Commissioner, 'ommissioners, and Recorder sitting in banco. Englishman.

APPROACH OF THE MONSOON. The customary igns of the near approach of the Monsoon are now noticeable, and the gathering mass of clouds in the North West indicate that it is but a few days distant. We learn that the native clerks of the weather apprehend a cyclone or other violent agitation in the elements, and judging by the long continuance of the rains on the Western coast, we are prepared for an unusual downpour here, and trust the town will be thereby purified from the atmospheric and material impurities which are constantly brought to our notice. The drain opposite the Abercrombie Battery emits a stink more fearfully disgusting than any we have been sickened by in London during the repairs of the sewers, and other parts of Madras are nearly as nauseous.—Madras Times.

ACCIDENT .- Mr. Steele, the First Judge of the Small Cause Court, met with a severe accident on the evening of the 8th October, while riding after dark. His horse being startled by lights borne before a carriage, became restive and threw him, his arm being broken by the fall.

It is stated that the whole of that line of country is now under water, and land, and English capital is brought out, it must that it was lately suffering from starvation from a previous long continued drought. The prospect for the regiment is certainly not very cheering. We doubt very much whether it is very prudent pulse of railways, canals, and roads, it is certain to march a corps through the country immedithe advance will be vastly accelerated in a geoately after the monsoon.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—We (Mudras Times) are not aware that coolies have ever been reckoned among the exports of India; they are, nevertheless, exported in great numbers, and the demand appears to be kept up with much regularity. It is a question how far the increasing export of this article is for the benefit of the country. Mauritius, Trinidad, Demerara, and Ceylon, annually absorb, for a time, many thousands of our ablebodied population, and the French settlements are also viá Pondicherry, not behind in the struggle for Indian labour. We do not know whether any exact returns are kept at the different ports of embarkation of the numbers who quit these shores and return to them year by year, but the number must be very large. Four years ago nearly 97,000 coolies went to Ceylon alone, and it is well known that the working of the coffee estates in that island is entirely dependent on the supply of Indian on the export, in fact, of our coolies. labour-The Singhalese won't work on the estates, and but for the aid which comes to them regularly from the provinces of Madura, Tanjore, and Trichinopoly, the Ceylon planters would be ruined. It is therefore natural enough that the planters should desire to do everything in their power to facilitate the transit of coolies from our territories to those of Ceylen. We published on Tuesday a letter forwarded by the Secretary to the Planters' Association at Kandy, from Mr. W. D. Gibbon, setting forth in plain language the difficulties coolies, or "our coolies," as he calls them, encounter before and after they reach Denipatain, whence they embark to cross the Gulf of Manuar. From Putucottah to Denipatam is a distance of about eighty miles. Mr. Gibbon states the emigrant coolies are subjected to hardships both in dry weather and in wet-in the first instance from want of water, and in the second from want of shelter; and he recommends, totidem verbis, to dig wells and build sheds at distances of twelve miles, placing them under the care of Kanganies or native supervisors, as appears to be the custom in the Island. The practical character of the planters' suggestion is remarkable. "We would not only be doing the coolies a good turn, but every shed would act as an advertisement to any cooly who wished to emigrate, keeping Ceylon in his view." Mr. Gibbon thinks this plan would do more for the Ceylon planters than all the agents on £1,000 a year whom they might send, but he fears "the Indian authorities might not like it." The Ceylon Government, to whom this letter was forwarded, had already taken action in the matter. Orders had been given for twelve wells to be dug along the roads, for the latter to be put in good order, and the civil engineer was directed to confer with the Governor regarding such other measures as might be deemed neces sary for facilitating the passage to and fro of immigrants.

REDEMPTION OF THE LAND REVENUE.-The Madras Times affirms that there is but one valid reason against the policy of allowing the land revenue to be redeemed, and that this has been usually forgotton. "It is that for a capital sum of which the value tends to decrease is exchanged an annual sum which is capable of increase, the difference increasing with time. That money is H.M.'s 108ти Foot, at Jaulnah, have got their rapidly falling in value no one can deny; interest ago, and as the Indian debt is taken up in Engfall still more. On the other hand, land is increasing in value; the mere increase of population must effect this; but when we add the immetrical proportion with the improvement of the LEAD ORE IN TAVOY .- Dr. Oldham, of the country. Compare Bengal with what it was fifty same country only ten years before, and we, habituated as we are to grand results, must be struck with the vast change for the better which will be paid by Government, and their services placed at the disposal of Mr. Mann. This last clause we fear will scarcely find approval with the Revenue Board, who in June last gave it as their deliberate opinion that Government should not provide manipulators for the tea growers of this presidency "who are perfectly well able to meet this requirement without Government aid." When will the Board awake to the present altered condition of this country? When will they learn that help and encouragement to the planting interests are and must be ultimate gain to the coffers of the State? but it is more; it is a step in civilization.

TEA CULTIVATION.—The Madras Times has the following on the cultivation of tea:--" We congratulate the revenue board on being no longer the principal obstruction to the progress of tea cultivation in the Madras Presidency. It would no doubt be more satisfactory to themselves if they could feel that they had voluntarily moved out of the way-if they could tell us that the great importance of the subject had led them to carefully reconsider their late proceedings, and that on balancing the facts they now saw that Messrs. Thomas and Lascelles had led them astray, and that they would have done better to have followed the counsel of the more practical men who were either personally or scientifically interested in the question; but no, they were content to rest on their primitive opinion. They came originally to the decision that there were no leaves to manipulate, and by that decision they must abide. 'Nolumus leges Angliæ mutari How can there be tea when Mr. Thomas has told us there is none? It may be quite true that Mr. Mann had had a tea plantation at Coonoor for some years, and that some of the leaf has been sold in the bazaar. Dr. McPherson also savs that he knows the plantation, that the plants are very flourishing, and bid fair to excel either Himalayan or Assam tea, if only scientific manipulators could be got to prepare it. But how can re get over Mr. Thomas's statement? That is the point. He says there are no leaves, and he must be right. We can fancy the above to be the process of ratiocination that passed through the collective mind of the board and insuired their proceedings of June 23,1862. Curiously enough, these proceedings are immediately followed by a memorandum by Mr. Ouchterlony, on the present condition of Mr. Mann's tea plantation at Cooncor. by which we learn that there are now 2,400 plants about 11 years old; 4,000 plants about 8 years old; 2,000 plants about 2 years old; 12,000 plants about 1 year old. Total, 20,400 plants. From February to June (the crop season) of this year, tea has been prepared from the crop of leaves picked to the amount of 2,000 pounds weight; it has thus been established that the real tea plants of commerce will grow fruit, mature seed, and supply a crop of leaves at Coonoor." What an agreeable suprise this would have been to Mr. Thomas had he been now in India! Mr. Ouchterlony, moreover, tells us, with regard to the tea hitherto roughly and unscientifically prepared by Mr. Mann's native overseer, that "when accident (perhaps) has caused one picking to be better prepared than another, tasters have found this passable; his tea, more over, has for the last two years found a ready sale at a fair price in the bazaar, and particularly in a shop at Ootacamund: it has shown decided improvement by being kept, and last year the result of partial experiments, made in pursuance of instructions gathered from books was, that some parcels of tea were so good in flavour and perfume that I found a pinch, added to the ordinary China tea sold in the Ootacamund market, impart to the latter a most agreeable flavour." It also appears that only about five acres of Mr. Mann's estate produced the 2,000 lbs. weight of leaves, or at the rate of 400 lbs. of tea per acre, and that there would probably have been much more but for the failure of rain at a particular time. His Excellency the Governor, in the course of his mountain wanderings has seen the samples of tea prepared at Mr Mann's plantations, and they have evidently pro duced an alterative effect. It is now discovered that "the opinion formed by the Board is not applicable to all the tea plantations on the Hills and that work can be found there for tea mani pulators, and that they can be usefully employed." It has therefore been decided in Council that the Government Order of the 26th May, 1862, shall be superseded—that it is necessary for Government to assist the tea planters in ascertaining the merchantable quality of the tea produced in the Presidency, and that the time has arrived for doing so; arrangements are accordingly to be immediately entered into, with the Government of India, to send two experienced manipulators, whose cost of transit and salaries | United Service Club in Calcutta.

SHRAVANA BALAGOLA-We have received an account of Shravana Balagola, a great Jain town, forty miles north-west of Seringapatam, and the Sheffield of South India, so far as the manufacture of brass vessels is concerned. They are sent to all parts of India, from Benares to Cape Comorin. The demand far exceeds the supply; money-advances are made by wholesale merchants, and articles finished at night are generally despatched early the next morning. The people are very indus-trious. They have no machinery, but the clang of hammers resounds from early dawn until past midnight.

SIR WM. DENISON .- His Excellency the Governor was to leave Ootacamund on the 10th October, for the Western Coast, where he will embark at Beypore, for the purpose of inspecting the Paumbem Passage, whose capability of improve-ment was the subject of Parliamentary inquiry last Session. His Excellency will afterwards visit Tinnevelly, and probably Travancore and Cochin. His return to Madras may be looked for about the 1st November.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ZORAOR-OOL-HOOSSEIN, the rebel leader captured near Dharwar, along with four of his followers, through the instrumentality of Captain Thatcher, Superintendent of Police at Ahmedabad, and who was brought to Poona, where he has been detained prisoner in the gaol ever since his arrival, has been forwarded to Bombay, and placed in the custody of Mr. Forjett, the Deputy Commissioner of Police, preparatory to his being forwarded to Calcutta, from whence he will be sent on to Lucknow, where he will be tried on charges of murder and rebellion, which offences were committed in 1857-58.

H.M.'s 72nd Highlanders, at Mhow, have so much sickness amongst them that they have, as a sanatory precaution, been marched out of camp, and are now under canvas on the top of a hill four miles from Mhow.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—Several changes re likely to take place shortly in the Public Works Department. Captain Fuller will, we hear, be appointed Civil Architect, and Colonel C. Scott, Executive Engineer of Sholapore, or perhaps of Ahmodnuggur and Nassick.

COURT MARTIAL.-Sergeant Vaughan, Barrack Sergeant of Foona, is, we understand, now in arrest, having been captured at Bombay, and will be tried by Court Martial for being absent without leave. We also hear the Sergeant is in some furthur trouble about certain pecuniary trans-actions, which are described as being of a complicated and shady character.

Major Barr .- It is expected that Mr. W. H. Havelock, Political Agent at Kolapoor, will go to England before long on sick leave; and rumour names Major Barr, late of Kattywar, as his successor. Sir Bartle Frere has, no doubt, found out by this time, that the major has been made the victim of a clique, and is determined to redress, as far as possible, the injustice done him in his removal from the Kattywar agency. We trust that we are not premature in congratulating Major Barr on the prospect of being re employed in an honourable position under Government.

COLONEL PRIESTLEY .- The members of the Byculla Club have passed a resolution approving of the expulsion of Colonel Priestley from the

THE FRENCH IN THE EAST.-At last the French have succeeded in "neutralising" Perim. following out the policy which leads them in the East to plant a settlement or secure territory as near as possible to each of our possessions. The French officer commanding at Saigon has issued a notice to the effect that the Curieux has taken possession of a certain strip of coast at the entrance of the Red Sea in a bay called Osboc. The bulletin takes care to state that the land "has been conceded to France by the chiefs of the country," and is three miles from Cape Reierbs, "fronting Perim." The history of this transaction is far from creditable to the parties concerned. Of all the "ideas" for which France is ready to go to war the "idee Egyptienne" is not Started by the First Napoleon, Louis the least. Philippe followed it up, and the present Emperor is devoted to it. In 1839 France purchased a harbour in the Red Sea from the chiefs of Edd, which in reality belonged to the Porte. In 1859 a second attempt was made to purchase the Bay of Adoulis and island of Dissa, off the Abyssinian coast, but that also was proved to belong to the Porte. Still, the French consul at Aden having been accidentally drowned there, the French carried off several of the natives, and the Porte made over Zeila till the matter should be investigated. Zeila the French still hold. Not content with this, they have now purchased for ten thousand dollars this Osboc on the same coast. If Zeila was in the gift of the Porte Osboc was equally so, and the purchase is null. Thus, with the Isthmus of Suez canal, the French prepare a highway to the East, for which the new steamers also are intended .- Friend of India.

THE WEATHER .- Letters from most parts of this Presidency speak of very serious injury having been done to the new crops by the recent heavy and unseasonable rains. Of course, at this time of the year, too much importance must not be attached to rumours of "considerable damage to the cotton crop," though, as the plant is in blossom at present, the effect of the rains may have been to materially reduce the anticipated yield. Broach and Guzerat seem to have suffered most severely. We have seen a private letter from Bhooj, dated the 12th October, in which the writer says :- "We have had most dreadful weather here lately. On the night of the 3rd we had a hurricane, and eleven inches five cents of rain, besides a shock of an earthquake. All our bungalows have been greatly damaged. In the city of Bhooj about 2,000 houses have been destroyed. . . Sickness is now very prevalent." On Wednesday night last, October 22nd, the great night of the Dewallee, we had a very heavy storm of rain and wind in Bombay; and the weather is still very unsettled. There is a general expectation that we shall not pass through this month without experiencing one of those terrible cyclones which appear to visit this coast at intervals of eight or ten years .- Bombay Saturday Review.

PITTORA FAIR .- Our Paper learns from Captain Tyrwhitt's report that the annual Pittora fair, held near Akeee, in the northern portion of the Nassa Talooka, took place during the last three days of August. About 10,000 men, of whom a large number were Rajpoots from the desert, attended. No disturbance took place.

MAIL LOST AND LOSS OF LIFE.—The Bhooj, Rajkote, and Sind mails, despatched from Rajkote at 10.5 A.M. on the 30th September, were lost by the foundering of Postal Boat No. 3, near the beacon light at Dandee on the 1st October, during the prevalence of a storm which seems to have extended to Mandevie. A life was lost by the foundering of the Postal Boat, and two Postal Boats in the Jooree Runn were also destroyed during the same storm.

GENERAL HOSPITAL AT POONA .- It is in contemplation to build a general hospital at Poona. It is said that Mr. David Sassoon has promised to contribute half a lac of rupees towards its construction, and to endow it with a lac more. have much pleasure in noticing this munificent liberality on the part of this gentleman, who has recently bought up much of the most valuable house property in this place.

the Bombay Cricket Club was opened very successfully on Thursday, Oct. 23rd, by a dinner, at which Mr. Tristram, Honorary President of the Club, presided, and which was attended by Commodore Frushard, Colonel Barr, Mr. R. B. Barton, and other distinguished patrons of manly sports and by most of the members of the club in Bom. bay. A long list of toasts were drunk with enthusiasm, and, on Mr. L. H. Bayley proposing the health of Lieut. Graham, of the 33rd regiment, as a former captain of the Rugby Eleven, the toast was, at the suggestion of the chairman, altered to "the present captain of the Bombay Eleven," and drunk with all the honours, Mr. Graham being thus elected captain by acclamation. The club is unusually strong in cricketers whose reputation was made before they left England, and, after a little practice, ought to send out an eleven capable of meeting and beating any other eleven in India. The funds are, we hear in a most satisfactory condition, and the number of members increases every day.

LOCUSTS AT KOTREE.—The Kotree correspondent of Our Paper gives an account of two clouds of locusts overshading the station. They appeared at first to be thick dust-storms, but on their nearer approach, were discovered to be dense masses of locusts flying towards the sea, about eight miles in length, preceded by flocks of kites busily feasting upon them. They left anything but a pleasant odour in the air, and were in each case followed by dust-storms, which rendered the rest of the day very sultry. During the flight and the storm, the thermometer rose from 84 to 98 degrees, and within half an hour returned to 86.

SUKKUR, Oct. 4 .- Early this morning the quay of Sukkur and the cliffs and house-tops of Roree were covered with people to see Bourne's steam train-which had come in the previous evening from Kurrachee laden with fifteen hundred hogsheads of beer for Ferozepore—make the attempt to ascend the Sukkur Pass. This year the violence of the current was greater than usual, and about a month ago the Commissioner in Scinde visited Sukkur with the view of ascertaining whether the rush of water in the navigable channel could not be diminished by enlarging the smaller channel on the Sukkur side. At present the current is not so strong as it was a month ago; but it is very strong still, and will continue so, no doubt, for a month or two longer. The total length of the steamer and barges of the train is 714 feet, being nearly 100 feet longer than the total length of the steamer and five barges first proposed by Mr. Bourne for the navigation of the Indus. Bets were taken in Sukkur that it would be impossible for the train or steamer to get up without leaving some of the barges behind. The train, however, started, and ascended the Pass steadily, and within forty minutes she had got up and stopped at Old Sukkur to put ashore some of the Sukkur people who had come to witness her performance. So far, therefore, the success of the train is complete. I came in the steamer from Kurrachee, and she did well all the way. But the Sukker Pass with its violent cross currents and boiling surges I looked upon as the crowning test, and certain it is that the vessel which can suc cessfully navigate it will be able to navigate any part of the Indus and Ganges.—Times of India.

A MUNIFICENT PRESENT.—On the departure to Europe of Mrs. Mead, widow of the late Dr. C C. Mead, a sum of rupees fifteen thousand was presented her by the Hon. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, in consideration of the medical services rendered by her late husband for a number of years to the Jamsetjee family. Rs. 10,000 were given by the hon, gentleman in his own name; Rs. 2,500 in the name of his mother, Downger Lady Jamsetjee; and a like amount in the name of his sister Perozebaee. The late baronet's mantle seems, from this and other similar instances, to have fallen upon the Hon.

Gale at Mandevie.—By the arrival of the O. I. S. Co.'s steamer Ride, Captain H. P. Edwards, which left Mandevie on the 7th of October, we (Our Paper) have particulars of a severe gale which swept over that place between the 1st and D'Almeida and party.

BOMBAY CRICKET CLUB.—The first season of the 4th. The Cotian Buthill, Tindal Ally, from Kurrachee to Mandevie, sank on entering the port. The Cotiah Galaem, from Kurrachee to Bombay, with passengers, cotton, &c., struck while running in for shelter, and foundered. Out of sixty persons which she contained it is painful to state that forty were drowned. Two Europeans on board, named Smith and Donkin, were saved, but the latter met with a severe injury in getting ashore. Three other Cotiahs, the names of which are not known, likewise foundered near Mandevie, but their crews are supposed to have reached land in safety. According to the accounts given by the inhabitants, so severe a gale, attended by so great a loss of human life and shipping, has not visited Mandevie for many years. The Rifle was caught in the same gale, but weathered it finely, and when she left on her return the storm had moderated greatly.-The individual named Smith mentioned in connection with the foundering of the Galaem lately absconded from Kurrachee, leaving a number of creditors in the lurch, and after having stolen the revolver which we advertise. He was a messenger in a merchantman, from which he deserted, and pretends to be the son of a Colonel of some Hussar regiment at Liverpool. We would caution the people of Bombay, hotel-keepers especially, against this person. He calls himself Smythe; has dark hair and black eyes, and is about twenty years of age. Mr. Donkin was lately an engine driver in the employ of the Sind Railway Company. Both his legs are said have been fractured.

> THE ISLAND MAGISTRACY.-It is generally stated that, on the departure to England of Mr. W. Crawford, the following arrangements will be made for the duties of the magistracy in this island :-- Mr. N. W. Oliver to act as senior magistrate and commissioner of police. Mr. F. L. Brown to act as second magistrate. M. H. E. Leeke, returned to duty from England, to act as third magistrate.

GOVERNMENT CURRENCY AT KURRACHEE .- The Sindian gives a report of a case before the Small Cause Court at Kurrachee, when the Judge decided that Government promissory notes issued at Bombay under Act IX. of 1861, are not legal tender in the town of Kurrachee.

MAILS TO INDIA.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, sia Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails ria Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

Court Martial.

LIEUT. W. P. FISHER, OF THE LATE 4TH EUROPEAN REGIMENT.

Head Qrs., Simla, Sept. 27.—At a general court martial assembled at Meean Meer, on Tuesday the 19th day of August, 1862, Lieut. William Pemberton Fisher, of the late 4th European regt., was arraigned on the following charges:—

Charges.—Ist. For neglect of duty, as commanding officer of the 6th Punjab infantry, in having, at Dera Ishmail Khan, between the 2nd of July, 1860, or about that day, and the 31st Jan., 1861, failed to remit to Subadar Wuzeer Khan, Rs. 1,100 entrusted the Line Fisher when the first-named date, for to him, Lieut. Fisher, about the first-named date, for the purpose of being remitted to the said subadar at his home.

2nd. For scandalous conduct, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Dera Ishmail Khan, when in command of the 6th Punjab Infantry, dishonestly used on his own account the sum of Rs. 1,100, the property of the above-named Wuzeer Khan, and entrusted to him, Lieut. named Wuzeer Khan, and entrusted to him, Lieut. Fisher, as aforesaid, for the purpose of a family remittance, he, Lieut. Fisher, having, moreover, remained indebted to Subadar Wuzeer Khan on account of the money so improperly used, and misapplied as aforesaid, until about the 20th Nov., 1861.

Finding.—The Court are of opinion that the prisoner, Lieut. W. P. Fisher, of the late 4th European regt., is of the 1st charge guilty, and of the 2nd charge not guilty, and they do accordingly acquit him thereof.

Sentence.—The Court sentences the prisoner,
Lieut. W. P. Fisher, of the late 4th European regt., to be severely reprimanded in such manner as H.E.
the C. in C. may be pleased to direct.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C.
The C. in C. is glad to find that Lieut. Fisher has

The C. in C. is glad to find that Lieut. Fisher has been acquitted by the Court of the dishonourable conduct set forth in the second charge.

Lieut. Fisher has, however, been convicted of failing to remit to a native officer under his command money entrusted to him for that purpose.

This was a serious neglect of his duty as a commanding officer, and a great hardship to the subadar; and this neglect, coupled with the fact that the subadar's money has been carried to a private account of Lieut. Fisher with a native banker, and withheld from the subadar for more than a year, exposed Lieut. Fisher to the charge of dishonesty.

It was not proved at the trial that Lieut. Fisher authorised this disposal of the Subadar's money, and the C. in C. has, therefore, confirmed the acquittal on the C. in C. has, therefore, confirmed the acquittal on this charge.

H.E. observes with regret that Lieut. Fisher, an officer of highly distinguished service in the field, has been reprehensibly careless in pecuniary affairs. He was originally placed in arrest for drawing bills which were dishonoured; and pending the disposal of these accusations, which involved protracted inquiry, the charges were preferred on which he has now been tried.

Before this trial could take place, another com-plaint against him in regard to the estate accounts of another officer was received, which necessitated additional inquiry.

The C. in C. trusts that Lieut. Fisher's long arrest, and the narrow escape he has had from punishment, will have the effect of making him more careful in his future conduct.

The major gen. commanding the Lahore division is requested to have these remarks read to Ligut. Fisher, who will then return to his duty.

BUDGET ESTIMATES FOR 1862-63.

THE Budget Estimates for the current financial year are, so far as they go, decidedly satisfactory. Bengal contributes to the public breasury, Rs. 12,82,07,464; the North-West Provinces, Rs. 5,50,26,000; Oude, Rs. 1,16, 09,000; the Punjab, Rs. 2,84,32,000; Bombay and Scinde, Rs. 7,12,18,622; the Central Provinces, Rs. 72,58,000; Berar, Rs. 35,54, 000; Madras, Rs. 6,39,58,914; the Eastern Settlements, Rs. 15,88,000; Burmah, Rs. 73, 30,000; General and Political Receipts, Rs. 53,16,000; and the Hyderabad Residency, Rs. 1,17,000; making a grand total of Rs. 42,97,12,000, or the goodly sum of £42,971, 200. This total, however, includes the estimated receipts from Assessed Taxes, and the Post-office and Telegraph Departments, the revenues derived from which are of course not entered under the separate provincial headings. The Land Revenue, comprising Sayer and Abkarree, is set down at Rs. 21,58, 80,000; Assessed Taxes, at Rs. 1,58,31,000; Customs, at Rs. 2,47,50,000; Salt Duty and Sales, at Rs. 5,05,47,000; Opium, at Rs. 6,30, 00,000; Stamps, at Rs. 1,85,00,000; Mint, at Rs. 25,71,000; Post-office, at Rs. 48,09,000; Electric Telegraph, at Rs. 7,07,000; Law, Justice, and Police, at Rs. 49,30,000! Marine, at Rs. 20,00,000; Public Works Receipts, at Rs. 65,00,000; Tributes and Contributions on account of Contingents from Native States, at Rs. 68,52,000; Civil Miscellaneous, at Rs. 45,00,000; Military Miscellaneous, at Rs. 80,00,000; and, lastly, Interest, at Rs. 3,35, 000. One-half of the income of the State is, therefore, derived from the Land Revenue, which yields in round numbers twenty-oneand-a-half millions sterling, while Opium, which comes next, brings in no more than six-and-a-quarter, and Salt only five millions: Customs, Stamps, and Assessed Taxes -including the Income-tax-following in order at a long interval.

On the other hand, the expenditure is estimated at Rs. 36,32,94,000, or £36,329,400, allocated as follows:-Bengal, Rs. 12,18,75, 098; North-Western Provinces, Rs. 2,25,19, 328; Oude, Rs. 76,39,000; Punjab, Rs. 1,67, 50,151; Bombay and Scinde, Rs. 5,89,55,819; Central Provinces, Rs. 62,06,000; Berar, Rs. 10,38,000; Madras, Rs. 6,32,06,231; Eastern Settlements, Rs. 12,56,900; Burmah, Rs. 55, 05,312; General and Political, Rs. 4,31,23,911; Hyderabad Residency, Rs. 9,71,103; and the Reserve, Rs. 28,21,147. To go more into detail, the total charges of the Revenue Department are stated at Rs. 8,75,27,000, including Rs. 60,00,000 for the Post-office, and Rs. 16,26,000 for the Electric Telegraph. other grievances he complains that Major ardent friendship. Still, there is reason to anticipate at least a balance of expenditure with income, a state of things few would have been bold enough to predict three years ago. We now look to Sir Charles Trevelyan for a surplus.

THE PRIESTLEY SCANDAL.

Well was it said of old that the beginning of strife is as the letting out of water. No matter how feeble at its source, the stream of contention gathers strength and volume as it rolls onward, until finally it swells into a raging flood, sweeping everything, in its blind fury, in wild ruin before it. Could Colonel Priestley have foreseen the consequences of his tale-bearing, it is probable that he would have left Sir Hugh Rose's character to take care of itself, and that would have been under any circumstances very much the wisest thing he could do. His mistaken zeal, however, has borne the usual fruit of officiousness, and has not only damaged his own position in the society of gentlemen, but has also seriously compromised several other officers of high standing in their profession.

It will be readily remembered that the flagrant abuses which prevailed in certain departments of the Bengal Commissariat induced the Commander-in-Chief to appoint a Commission, under the presidency of Colonel Huyshe, to inquire into the working of the whole system, but more especially with regard to the provisioning and clothing of the army, and the construction of barracks and military hospitals. Two of the members of this Commission were Lieutenant-colonel Priestley, of H.M.'s 42nd, a personal friend of his Excellency, and Major Fitzgerald, an officer of the peculiar service under investigation. Considerable difference of opinion seems to have existed on the various subjects submitted to the Commission, and it is not unlikely that after the manner of Englishmen in India a greater freedom of speech may have been used than is altogether customary in this country. It is quite impossible, however, that an officer of Colonel Huyshe's character and gentlemanly bearing would have permitted any really improper language or the expression of sentiments purposely disrespectful towards the Commander-in-Chief. But it is evident that Colonel Priestley was nervously sensitive as to words casually dropped with reference to his distinguished and absent patron. Among rence due to the head of her Majesty's Forces in India as to question the accuracy of an and the allotment of 1 per cent. on the official report submitted to the Commission by the Government, but which purported to proceed from his Excellency himself. Now, it is quite within the bounds of possibility that on some particular question an officer of the Commissariat may possess more special and accurate information than the Commanderin-Chief, who necessarily obtains his data at second-hand. If such were the case, there was no reason why Major Fitzgerald should hide his light under a bushel, but, on the contrary, it was his duty to clear away all errors and obscurity, and to place the matter at issue clearly and correctly before his colleagues on the Commission. Whether or not he transgressed against the strict rules of good taste by indulging in a little covert sarcasm is nothing to the point, and nothing but an unpleasant suspicion that the stricture was merited can explain Colonel Priestley's smallmindedness in attaching to it the slightest importance. But beyond his own official report to the Adjutant-general, that "during the proceedings of the Commissariat Commission he had been obliged to put up with inuendos of a character depreciatory of communications made by the Commander-in-Chief," there is no proof that anything of the kind ever took place. On the contrary, we have Colonel Huyshe's distinct denial that any discourtesy or disrespect was ever exhibited by the Commission with regard to any suggestions or wishes on the part of his Excellency. It is, indeed, difficult to comment in terms of moderation on Colonel Priestley's conduct in thus endeavouring to embroil his colleagues with the Commander-in-Chief, and out of their frank and independent bearing to make private interest for himself by acting as a tale-bearer. But if he were so uncomfortably sensitive on the subject of his chief's good name, how came it that he did not call the offending speaker to order on the spot, and then and there protest against the utterance of remarks reflecting personally on his illustrious friend? There is certainly no sign of his having so acted, and we may rest assured that he would have taken very good care to let his superiors, and, indeed, the whole world, know that he had manfully stood up in defence of his calumniated patron and resented as a personal insult the attempted defamation of his immaculate superior.

But while reprobating Colonel Priestley's conduct, we are not disposed to take up the cudgels very warmly in defence of Major Fitzgerald. An accident, we may assume, placed these two officers side by side at the table d'hôte of the Calcutta Club, when through a strange want of good taste, or possibly of ideas, they "talked shop" at the dinner-table, and directed their conversation to the business of the Commission of which they happened to be such ill-assorted members. It might have been supposed that, aware of the different views they took on the subject, they would have carefully eschewed a topic on which they could by no chance agree, and Colonel Priestley, one would imagine, would take especial pains to avoid hearing in private any more of those inuendos which had already caused such pain and mortification to his out into an indiscriminate eulogy of the Commander-in-Chief, and draws in his neighbour on the other side to express "great admiration for Sir Hugh Rose, and particularly for his Central India campaign." the latter head there cannot be two questions. No man in his senses will dispute that Sir Hugh did his work admirably during the mutiny, but it does not follow that a good general in war-time must necessarily make a good Commander-in-Chief in time of peace. Major Fitzgerald, at least, seems to have been of this opinion, or, what is still more likely, he lost patience with the prosy panegyrist at his elbow, and was betrayed into an unguarded and not too polite expression of contempt for his "mighty chief," whether in his public or private capacity. He would, of course, have done better to have resisted the impulse, nor can much praise be accorded to the eagerness he displayed to apologise right and left as soon as he discovered the mistake he had made. A kindly motive may have urged him to express his regret for having wounded Colonel Priestley's feelings, but he was certainly not called upon to say that in reality he entertained "a high respect for his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's position and public character," and that he "knew nothing of his private." There was no occasion to volunteer to eat his leek, leaves, root, dirt, and all. By acting in this weak and inconsiderate manner he has put himself out of Court, and alienated the sympathy of the public at large.

And now a few words in reference to the protest forwarded to the Committee of the Bengal United Service Club by Colonel Haythorne, Adjutant-general of H.M.'s Forces in India. In this letter he raises eight distinct objections to the proceedings of the Committee, which have been admirably disposed of by the Honorary Secretary, Mr. J. A. Crawford. In the first place, he charges the Committee "with having pronounced Lieutenant-colonel Priest-ley guilty of a breach of Article 24 of the Club Rules, without having satisfied themselves of the real facts of the case; and states that Major Fitz-gerald disturbed the harmony of the Club by 'in-sulting' Colonel Priestley. sulting' Colonel Priestley.

2nd. "That the Committee, acting through the Honorary Secretary, 'departed entirely from their competency,' in interfering with Colonel Priestley's legitimate measures to resent a 'deliberate insult' offered to him.

3rd. "That Colonel Priestley and Major Fitzgerald were not on friendly terms, and that, therefore, in addressing himself to Colonel Priestley, Major Fitzgerald must have deliberately determined Major Fitzgerald must have deliberately determined to insult that officer; he considers this position to be established by the fact of an apology having been tendered by Major Fitzzerald.

4th. "That the insult itself was a breach of the forty-fifth Article of War, and that no apology could therefore be accepted.

5th. "He remarks that he would be the last to address the Lieuters are the last to address the Lieuters are the last to address the Lieuters are the last to advocate the Lieutenant-colonel's cause had he re-ported an overheard observation, or one addressed to him by a friend.

6th. "He informs the Committee that Colonel

Priestley had officially reported to him that, during the proceedings of the Commissariat Commission, he had been obliged to put up with inuendos of a character depreciatory of communications made by the Commander-in-Chief.

7th. "He maintains, therefore, that Lieutenant-colonel Priestley cannot be accused of violating private confidence, and that he acted in accordance with the rules he, as an officer, and especially as commanding officer of a regiment, was bound to grace that can be passed on a man, and which, at home, is only inflicted for swindling or serious crimes." his name from the list of Members. from creating a new rule they have

In reply, the Committee express their surprise that Colonel Haythorne should have allowed himself, on the authority of an ex parte statement, to address a body of gentlemen in such a dictatorial tone, and they decline to notice the remarks he made in his official capacity as Adjutant-general. Anv statement he may have to make as Vice-President of the Club will be received with due consideration, and it is only in that character that they proceed to answer his various allegations. They accordingly suggest that it would have been more becoming on his part to have assumed that the Members of the Club who were on the spot would be more competent to form a correct judgment on the merits of the case than he possibly could do by deriving his information from the report of the very individual whose conduct was impugned. They also assert that the twentyfourth rule, if read in its entirety, does not apply to Major Fitzgerald, while it is directly levelled against such acts as that imputed to Colonel Priestley, who, by violating private confidence, "distinctly injured the harmony of the Club, that is, the mutual social confidence of its members," thereby affecting its character and endangering its stability. The Adjutant-general's second statement, that Major Fitzgerald insulted Colonel Priestley, is pronounced "inexplicable."

"Two members of the Club sit next to each other, "Two members of the Club sit next to each other, enter into conversation together, the conversation lasts throughout dinner, a more or less controversial subject is introduced; they take opposite views; each expresses his own opinion; these opinions differ; but in each case they are expressed in quiet gentlemanly language and tone, and are utterly devoid of personality. Where is the insult, and which of the two can be justly accused of offering a 'deliberate insult?'"

The question is unanswerable, and with equal precision the Committee set aside Colonel Haythorne's remark, that Colonel Priestley and Major Fitzgerald were not on friendly terms. They point out that the two met on terms of social courtesy, and being brought into close juxta-position, conversed on a subject of interest to both, though they happened to view it in different lights. Unless difference of opinion be an insult, none was offered or intended. As to the deduction that the tender of an apology implies the consciousness of wrong-doing, the Committee decline to commit themselves in any way, as they have no knowledge of the tenour of the said retractation. But assuredly there can be no proof of an intention to insult in an expression of regret for having wounded another man's feelings. Neither do the Committee feel themselves justified in noticing Colonel Haythorne's statement as to the disrespectful conduct of Members of the Commissariat Commission with regard to the Commanderin-Chief. The President of that Commission, however, as we have already intimated, has addressed to the Supreme Government a formal denial of the charge.

The Committee readily admit that to be expelled from a Club is a great disgrace to obey.
8th. "He argues, therefore, that the Honorary Screetary 'entirely departed from his competency in the course pursued by him, and that the Committee have created an unjustifiable rule—viz., 'that if an officer is insulted at the Club table, and if he takes the measures required by the regulations of the service, he renders himself liable to expulsion from the Club, which, at home, is the greatest dis-from creating a new rule they have strictly adhered to the elemental regulations by which the Club existed, nor could they have acted otherwise than they have done without a gross dereliction of duty. Thus Colonel Priestley has incurred a grievous social disgrace, the Commander-in-Chief has been placed in a false position, and his Adjutant-general seriously compromised in his private capacity, all because one officer allowed too much liberty to his tongue and another to his pen. The Club were clearly justified in expelling such a dangerous member, and will probably feel little regret if Sir Hugh Rose and Colonel Haythorne resign their respective posts of President and Vice-President. It can hardly be agreeable to either party to remain on their present footing. "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!"

CORRESPONDENCE.

INDIAN SLEEPERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,-In a paragraph in your last week's impression you state that sleepers on the Indian railways cost from three to four rupees each. On inquiry I find the statement to be perfectly correct, and that the sleepers are cut down in Norway and forwarded thence to Calcutta. Why should this be? Is there not sufficient timber in Kamroop for the purpose without sending to Norway? In the Burdoar grant alone of the Lower Assam Tea Company there is a block of 8,000 acres of "Sal" timber, bearing not less than 250 trees to the acre, each tree capable of making half-a-dozen sleepers.

The block of land is traversed by two navigable rivers, affording continuous water carriage to Calcutta, with water power for sawing timber to any amount. Of this forest an engineer officer, of high standing in Assam, said, "He considered there was timber enough for sleepers for every railway in India." Tea Company, I am informed, would willingly let the forest to one or two railway companies for ten years at a thousand pounds a year. If that be true, sleepers might be cut in Assam and forwarded to Calcutta for half a rupee a piece. This offer has, I understand, been made to the Eastern of Bengal Railway and declined. Surely the railway public ought to have some explanation on the subject.

A SHAREHOLDER IN THE EASTERN OF BENGAL Reform Club, 17th Nov., 1862.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

The directors state, in their report, that a train ran through all the way from Calcutta to Kooshtee on the 20th of August last, and that a train with materials has been run through every week since. On the 12th of September the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal returned to Calcutta from a tour in the provinces by a special train from Kooshtee. He alighted to inspect the iron bridge of about 1,000 feet in length over the river Koomar (the heaviest work on the railway), and the train stopped at the principal stations along the line. Notwithstanding these delays, the journey was accomplished in five hours and a-half. It was subsequently determined by the agent and chief engineer, with the sanction of the Government, to open the portion of the line between Calcutta and Ranaghat, a distance of forty-five miles, for passenger traffic. The first passenger train comgeneral traffic on the 1st of November inst. The ! agent stated that he had every reason to believe that soon after the opening steam communication by the rivers would be established between Kooshtee, the terminal station on the Ganges, and Serajgunge, the great mart or emporium of trade of Eastern Bengal, and that he expected a large traffic by that means. The directors have every reason to feel satisfied that the line was actually opened throughout at the time above mentioned. The capital account shows that £1,399,700 had been received, and £1,206,696 expended, leaving a balance of £193,003.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

The directors of this company state in their report that the portion of the year corresponding with that which has passed since their last report must always be, from natural causes, the most unfavourable for executive operations. south-west monsoon commences in May, producing disease and consequent desertion of labourers and this is followed by the rains in June, which usually continue until October, rendering a partial suspension of out-door labour during that time absolutely necessary; nevertheless, and although the floods of the current year in the locality of Kurnool and the adjacent districts have been very unusually heavy, the construction of the anicut across the river Toombuddra at Soonkasala, and of the aqueduct over the river Hindry at Kurnool, has been carried on with commendable expedition. The chief engineer remains firm in his previouslyexpressed conviction that his original estimate for the whole line of works from Soonkasala to the coast will not be exceeded, if his plans are carried out without further obstruction or delay. The construction of the anicut at Soonkasala proceeded rapidly until June last, when the floods commenced and prevented further progress. On the 1st of last month (October) the river had so far subsided as to permit a resumption of labour on the anicut itself. and then it was found that the work previously executed had withstood the floods most satisfac-The heavy musonry work of the head sluices of the main channel had also, up to the last-mentioned date, progressed steadily. main canal from the anicut just mentioned to the Hindry aqueduct, a distance of 174 miles, has been nearly completed, including the distributing sluices, the culverts for drainage, and the calingulahs, or escapes, although the greater portion has been cut through compact rock, and for some time past this length of channel has been ready to receive at least three feet depth of water. The Hindry aqueduct, a work of great extent and importance, was completed to above the height of the floods before the early freshes of the river came down at the end of April last, and, though severely tested, it withstood those floods without injury. The completion of this great work according to the statement of the chief engineer, will probably be achieved in July next. The section of the main canal from the Hindry aqueduct to Nagatoor, a length of 26 miles, terminating at the 43rd mile from Soonkasala, has been partially excavated, and the chief engineer has expressed a hope that he will be able to have the whole ready to receive water in July next. From the 43rd to the 72nd mile the excavation of the chief canal has also been commenced. The work on this section has been seriously retarded by the acts of the collector of the district, who, though an order of the Government authorised the transfer of the required land, withheld such transfer from April until the beginning of August. Plans and estimates of the channels for irrigating the whole of the land commanded by the main canal thus far have been approved, and preparations made for rapid construction. The transfer of the necessary land for the next portion of the main channel-i. e., from the 72nd to the 91st mile-was at the end of September last being promptly made, and partial excavation had then commenced, the plans and estimates of the whole having been sanctioned. In this section s fall of 200 feet has been provided for by locks. the chambers whereof will be 120 feet in length and 20 feet in breadth. From the 103rd to the sessions. Saigon is improving, thanks to the 133rd mile detailed plans and estimates were very near completion. Working plans and estimates of the further portion of the main line, extending from the last-mentioned section to Cuddapah, were finished and under examination by the chief engineer on the 1st of last month. From Cuddapah to Somaishwarum the line of main canal had been laid out, and plans and estimates thereof prepared. The whole line of the main canal for irrigation and navigation from Soonkasala to Kistnapatam, on the eastern coast, a total length of about 310 miles, is now in the hands of the company. A sum of £635,948 had been received on the 30th of September last on account of capital, and the expenditure in England up to the same date, and in India up to the 31st of August last, amounted to £251,473, leaving a balance of £384,475 in hand.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DRAFTS ON INDIA .- Biddings for £207,000 bills on India (£140,000 on Calcutta, £52,000 on Bombay, and £15,000 on Madras) were received on the 19th at the Bank of England. The declared minimum prices were 1s. 11 1d. per rupee on Calcutta, and 2s. on Bombay and Madras, and the applications within the limits were for about £860,000. Tenders on Calcutta at 2s.  $0\frac{1}{8}$ d. will receive about 88 per cent., and those above that price will receive in full. Tenders on Bombay at 2s. 03d. will receive about 43 per cent., and those above that price in full; and tenders on Madras at 2s. 04d. will receive in full.

SPECIE TO THE EAST .- The steamer Pera, with the India and China mails, on the 20th, took out specie to the amount of £358,708, all on merchant account; of this sum £36,879 was gold, and £321,829 silver, to be distributed as follows: -£140,645 for India, £191,779 for China and the Straits, £26,084 for the Mauritius and Cevlon, and £200 for Alexandria.

- Foreign-office. DIPLOMATIC APPOINTMENTS. Oct. 1.-The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint the following gentlemen, unpaid Attaches at the places undermentioned, to be Second Secretaries in H.M.'s Diplomatic Service: -William J. Dickson, Esq., Teheran; Robert G. Watson, Esq., Teheran; Frederick R. St. John, Esq., Pekin.

THE FRENCH IN COCHIN CHINA.-A letter from Segon of the 10th of August says:--" On the 28th of July the two Ambassadors who have signed the treaty of peace arrived at Saigon. They came from Hué by land, and have been appointed by the King. One, Lam-duy hiep, was viceroy of Binh-Tuan, a province near that of Bien-Hoa; and the other, Phan-thanh-giang, viceroy of the provinces of Ving-Long, An-giang, and Ha tien. This latter personage brings an edict from the King intended to be published in the French possessions. Tu-Duc in it expresses his satisfaction at those who for three years sustained a war against the French; declares that the chiefs may return to Vinh-Long; that the viceroy is charged to reward their services, and that he will bestow on them offices and dignities according to their merit; and that the Annamites who do not wish to remain under the rule of the French may pass into the western provinces. As to the districts occupied by the French, they remain in statu quo, and will be disposed of according to opportunity. It is said that the Admiral has caused this passage to be changed, and required that the cession of those provinces shall be notified to the populations in more precise terms. On the 2nd of August the two viceroys left Saigon. The guns of the Duperre, which had announced their arrival, saluted them on their departure. The province of Binh-Tuan, which was ordinarily commanded by a governor of the second class only, has been placed since the peace under the authority of a viceroy, a former minister of war and very clever man. great many military mandarins have installed themselves near him, and a number of dignities have been created in that country, which has attained a great importance in the eyes of the Annamites since it has bordered the French pos-

A HOME FOR THE SONS OF PARENTS RESIDING IN INDIA AND THE BRITISH COLONIES.—There are Vacancies for the Sons of Gentlemen under fifteen years of age in a first-class School, conducted upon Unsectarian Evangelical Principles. Experienced Tutors, Graduates of Oxford and Cambridge, assisted by Foreign Professors, and a Civil Engineer, prepare the Pupils for the Public Schools, the Universities, and for the various Naval and Military Examinations. Pupils from this School have successfully entered Rugby, Harrow, and Eton, have matriculated at the Universities, have passed with great credit the examination for Naval Cadetship, for Sandhurst, for Direct Commissions in the Army, and also the Competitive Examination for Woolwich, and for the Indian Civil Service.

The religious instruction and the moral and physical well-being of the Pupils are objects of the Principal's continued solicitude, and his experience of upwards of twenty years devoted to educational training is brought to bear upon the daily school life and occupation of those committed to his care, in repressing and counteracting the evil, and in developing and bringing into healthful action the good, discoverable in individual character and habit.

The mansion, the grounds, and park, situated in one of the healthiest western districts of Middlesex, are unexceptionable as to locality, soil, and water, and are fitted with every apparatus and appliance calculated to strengthen the constitution by promoting healthful out and in-door exercise.

The sons of parents residing in India and the Colonies, who are placed entirely under the guardianship of the Principal, find a home in his family circle, are treated in every respect as his own children, and join his holiday party in its annual excursion to the Continent.

The highest testimonals from parents of pupils, and from late pupils,—many of whom are now officers and civilians in the Indian Presidencies—are offered as guarantees for a consci

A YOUNG WOMAN, formerly Lady's maid, wishing to RETURN to CALCUITA, by the Overland Route, would be glad to meet with a Lady who may require the services of an Attendant, either for herself or take Charge of Children on the outward voyage. PRICHARD'S AROMATIC STEEL PILLS PRICHARD'S AROMATIC STEEL PILLS stand unequalled for restoring vigour to weak and re laxed constitutions, and have been proved to be the best medicine ever offered to the public. To those who are suffering from languor and exhaustion occasioned by a residence in hot climates, these Pills will be found particularly beneficial. They give energy to the muscles and nerves, streng h to the stomach, and completely renovate the system, so that the patient is astonished at the effects produced.

Prepared by W. Philiphard, Apothecary, 65, Charing-cross, fondon. In boxes 1s. 13d., 2s. 9d., 3s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all Medicine Vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS. HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—
WINTER'S TRIALS—It is impossible at all times to goard against taking cold, but by the aid of these admerable remedies the cold can lead to nothing worse. When Holloway's remedy has been rubbed a few times upon the back and front of a catarrhal chest the patient experiences great reher in breathing; the foliness and obstruction in the lungs give way to regularity of regination and circulation, the cough becomes less troublesome, and expectoration decreases.
All feverish symptoms subside under moderate doses of Holloway's Pills. No fact in medicine is better established than that such early subjugation of chest irregularities is the only safe mode of preventing asthma, bronchitis, pleurisy, and irremediable consumption. In royal 8vo., cloth lettered, 12s. 6d.,

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and variable. £3. nished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been avoided.

The Illustrations drawn on Wood expressly for the Work, by PAUL J. NAFTEL, Member of the London Society of Painters in Water Colours.

"The 'Channel Islands' is an excellent book of its class—well conceived, well written, well illustrated, well printed. It is the produce of many hands, and every hand a good one. Nearly every thing which a man can desire to know about Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark—about their history, Geography, and natural history—Professor Ansted and Dr. Latham have contrived to tell. Altogether the contents of the volume are as varied and interent as a well-sustained drama; and to this drama no more graceful and picturesque scenery could have been furnished than we find in the illustrations so profusely given by artists worthy of the subject and equal to their worth—Paul Naftel and M. Petere Le Lièvre. The result is not a merely handsome volume of the old 'Keepsake' style, made to sell and be booked at, but a book of rare merit and value, made for instruction and delight, to be read with pleasure and to be referred to with profit."—Athenseum, Nov. 15, 1862.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

In addition to the Calcutta Mail of the 22nd October, we have received a packet of papers from Bombay down to the 1st of the current month. For this we are indebted to the despatch of H.M.'s steamship Feroze to Suez, for the purpose of conveying Lady Elgin and suite to Calcutta.

According to the Madras Athenseum, great excitement prevailed in that Presidency, owing to the arrival of a telegram from Galle stating that "The abdication of the Queen is decided on." A Romanist paper goes still further, and announces her Majesty's abjuration of Protestantism, and consequent abdication in favour of the Prince of Wales.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay army proceeded to Aden on board the Feroze to inspect the garrison and the fortifications of the place. His Excellency's absence from the Presidency was expected to last a few weeks, and on his return he proposed to make a tour of inspection through Guzerat and the Mhow division.

Sir Hugh Rose has resigned his office of Honorary President of the Bengal United Service Club, but charges the Committee with irregularity in not having submitted the Priestley case, in the first place, to himself as President.

Mr. Smales, late Paymaster of the Inniskilling Dragoons, has given notice of his intention to bring an action for libel against the Poona Observer. He has also served Colonel Crawley and General Farrell with notices of actions for false imprisonment and defamation of character.

The Indian Government has addressed to the Secretary of State a spirited defence of Mr. Laing's Budget. Unless far more powerful than Mr. Laing's defence of himself, it is not likely to effect any material change in public opinion at home.

The Bengal subscriptions to the Cotton Fund amount to £10,000. The Ceylon community has also subscribed very nearly £1,000 for the same object, and it is gratifying to learn that the Rajah of Travancore has contributed the munificent donation of £500.

The mail from China reports the death of the American adventurer, General Ward, who fell mortally wounded after driving the Taipings out of Tee-Chee, a city they had previously captured. The Mahomedan insurrection in the province of Yuma appears to have assumed very formidable proportions, nearly every town being in their hands. The whole empire, indeed, is torn by dissensions and civil warfare.

The news from Japan is of a gloomy character. As a party of Europeans, consisting of Messrs. Marshall, W. Clarke, and C. L. Richardson, and a lady, were quietly riding along the road in the neighbourhood of Yokohama, they were attacked by the followers of the father of Prince Satsuma, who was returning from Jeddo. Mr. Richardson was brutally murdered, and the two other gentlemen severely wounded, the lady alone escaping uninjured. Indignant comments are passed on the apathy or pusillanimity of her Majesty's representative.

KURRACHEE exhibits increasing commercial activity. The value of her export trade for September, 1862, was Rs. 22,72,118. The principal articles exported were:—Cotton, Rs. 11,03,449; grain, Rs. 1,33,473; indigo, Rs. 85,695; seeds, Rs. 1,60,549; wool, Rs. 3,44,998.

AFRICAN MISSIONARIES .- Captain Pelly reports, in somewhat unsympathetic language, though his acts were kind enough, the failure of Dr. Krapf's mission on the East Coast of Africa, and the sickness of the missionaries. As this mission was recommended to the good offices of this consulate, he has done his best for them, especially since Dr. Krapf is so highly esteemed. But in respect to the youths, his colleagues, he says they have proved themselves to be utter failures. "I have been a sort of dry nurse to them ever since they came to Africa. Colleagues: one German gent, formerly butcher; one German gent, formerly button-maker; two English youths from Cornwall, formerly Dissenting preachers."

BENGAL.

THE BENGAL MILITARY FUND.

We have frequently of late noticed the amalgamation canker which has commenced to sap those valuable relics of the Company's government, the various funds of the military service and we have now to chronicle a vital, and we fear inevitable, blow which has been launched at the first and most extensively useful of those institu-tions—the Bengal Military Fund. The facts are as follows:-Major F. O. Salusbury, of H.M.'s 101st Royal Bengal Fusiliers, and previously of the 1st Bengal Fusiliers, who is stationed with his regiment at Mooltan, has written to the Paymaster of that circle, instructing him to cease making any deductions whatever from his pay on account of the funds to which he formerly contributed; and he has also written to the Military Fund management here to the same desiring that they will remove his effect, name from the list of subscribers from the lst of August last. Major Salusbury's grounds of action, which appear to us indisputably strong, are in his own words to this effect—that, whilst in the Company's army he duly subscribed to the funds maintained by that army; that, subsequently whilst in her Majesty's Indian army, he still continued his subscriptions; but that being now an officer in the British army, and having nothing whatever to do with the Indian service any more than all the other officers of that army, he positively declines and refuses to contribute further to any local or Indian funds, and has become a contributor to those of the service in which he now is. To us, as we have said above, the reasoning and the right here put forward are indisputable; and we cannot see how any deductions can justly be made from Major Salusbury's pay for the support of the military or any other Indian fund, any more than from the pay of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge. In the Amalgamation Act of last year this matter is but half setttled, Indian officers being permitted, if so inclined, to carry with them into the British army the benefit and advantages of the several funds, by continuing their subscriptions; but their doing so is not made compulsory, and this being the case, Major Salusbury, who appears to be a determined old bachelor, has the undeniable right to decline subscribing for the benefit of the widows and orphans of a service with which he has now no further connection. This right being conceded to the officer in question, equally belongs to all other officers who have left the Indian for the British army, and therefore all the officers of the twelve new line regiments, and all those of the late Company's now royal artillery and engineers, have an equal right of secession, an extensive exercise of which will be a death-blow to the military and orphan funds. So impressed are the Military Fund management here with this fact, and with the gravity of the danger to the institution involved in it, that they are about referring the case to the Government, which will be done within a few days. What remedial action, short of subsidising the Military Fund, the Government can take, we confess ourselves at a loss to see, as we assume that the idea of compelling Queen's officers to continue subscribing to the charitable institutions of a service from which they are totally disconnected will never be entertained for a moment. We are sorry for the blow which the Military Fund has received, but whilst wishing every prosperity to that noble and useful institution, we would not for a moment think of conducing to its welfare and stability by an invasion of the private rights of the officers of the British army .- Englishman.

CHRISTIAN BURIAL.

An ecclesiastical difficulty has recently occurred at Chunar which bids fair to lead to serious inconvenience. The question is one of Christian burial. A Roman Catholic soldier died at Chunar in a state of intoxication, and his own priest relic Church. The Protestant chaplain, the Rev. Roman Catholic soldiers are clearly not in any had an interview with Mahomed Sharif Khan. It man Christian burial, but under such circumstances he naturally refused to read the service of the Church of England over a man rejected by his own priest; yet by an unhappy state of the law Mr. Corbyn by his refusal has acted contrary both to the Book of Common Prayer and the orders of the Government of India.

The present state of the question appears to be as follows :- The Book of Common Prayer directs that the office for the burial of the dead is not to be used in the case of those who die unbaptised, or under excommunication, or who have laid violent hands upon themselves. Thus the law of the Church of England does not seem at first sight to forbid its clergy from burying a baptised person, like the Roman Catholic soldier in question, even though he has died in grievous sin. But by a strict in-terpretation of ecclesiastical law, the Romanist soldier, and, indeed, all Roman Catholics, are regarded by the Church of England as excommunicated persons, or rather as persons who ought to be excommunicated. The rubric and canons of the Anglican Church were drawn up at a time when the tolerating of Roman Catholics was not only never contemplated, but was strictly provided against. Canons II.-VIII. declare that "impugners of the Queen's supremacy, of the Apostolic character of the Church of England, or of its services, articles, rites, ceremonies, and government by archbishops and bishops, are to be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored until they repent and publicly revoke such their wicked Again Canon LXV. orders all ministers errors." solemnly to denounce Popish recusants during divine service every six months, and directs the issue against them of writs de excommunicatio capiendo. The bishop is further instructed to enforce this by diligent inquiry among his clergy. It must be a source of thankfulness to every one, except narrow-minded bigots, that these barbarous canons have fallen into desuctude. Nor, indeed, could they have any force in this country, where the Roman Catholic soldiers cannot be regarded as the parishioners of Protestant chaplains, and therefore may not be excommunicated by the Protestant chaplains. Indeed, so far is this from being the case, that whilst Canon LXVI. declares that "ministers of our Church are to confer with recusants, and labour diligently to reclaim them from their errors," the regulations of the army positively forbid all proselytism; and any Protestant chaplain would be liable to censure, or deprivation, who should take any active steps to convert Roman Catholic soldiers. Only a few years back a clergyman, the Reverend M. Barker, was compelled to resign the service for refusing to abstain from efforts to bring over Roman Catholics to the Church of England; and on that occasion Bishop Wilson wrote to Mr. Barker that he was licensed as minister of the Protestant inhabitants of his station, and of them only.

We are not disposed to quarrel with any one of these arrangements. The Roman Catholic soldiers have undeniable claims upon the State for spiritual ministration, and so long as the Romanist chaplains are as loyal in their conduct as they have hitherto proved to be, the efficiency of the men will be promoted in a military point of view; whilst any other arrangement would produce heart-burnings and controversies which would be destructive to all discipline. It might be a curious subject to discuss whether the Hindoo and Mussulman sepoys have not similar claims, but we leave that question for the Saturday Review ers and Buckles of the day. The point we have to consider is the obligation of Protestant chaplains to read the office of the Church of England over a Roman Catholic soldier whom the Roman Catholic priest refuses to bury. The ecclesiastical law is not sufficient to settle the point, though we think it would warrant any Protestant chaplain from refusing to read the burial service under circumstances such as those we have indicated. A clergyman is not bound to bury any one not belonging to his parish, and the

H. F. Corbyn, was then requested to give the way to be regarded as the parishioners of the Protestant chaplains. But then the Government of India have expressly ordered that no minister shall refuse or delay to bury any corpse that is brought to the church or churchyard, in such a manner and form as is prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer. Now this rule ought to be equally binding on Roman Catholic chaplains as well as on Protestant chaplains, otherwise the latter are clearly placed in a false position. We understand that the Bishop of Calcutta desires to see the order cancelled altogether; but we fear that any relaxation of the rule would lead to unseemly controversies, which on more than one occasion have caused considerable scandal at home. We do not desire to interfere with the discipline of the Church of Rome, and the Roman Catholic Bishop might possibly deem it expedient to omit certain portions of the service in cases where a Roman Catholic soldier had died in grievous sin. But for a Protestant chaplain to be compelled to bury a Roman Catholic, to whom the rite has been refused by a Roman Catholic priest, grievance which cannot be borne; and, ready as we are on all occasions to protest against any ecclesiastical tyranny or bigotry, we consider that Mr. Corbyn has acted most properly in the present instance, and that he fully deserves the support of the public for the courage which he has exhibited in bringing the question to an issue. We have discussed the subject without warmth or denunciation, for it is one which peculiarly requires the calmest as well as the gravest consideration. It is totally unconnected with any points of controversy between Protestants and Roman Catholics, and merely calls for such government interference as shall ensure equal rights and equal obligations to the ministers of both Churches. Englishman.

THE ORIGIN OF THE WAR BETWEEN CABUL AND HERAT.

(From the Punjab Administration Report for 1861-62.)

The south-western extremity of the Hindu Kush is known as the Siah Koh, or Black Mountain. On and beneath its southern slopes is the district of Gour. Rugged, with precipitous hills, crowned with forests, its valleys are inhabited by a nomad population, amongst whom the Taimuni tribe hold a principal place. The strength of the country has usually secured to its chief a certain degree of independence. But about the year 1845 the Wazir Yar Mahomed Khan, of Herat, brought it under subjection, and transporting many of the Taimunis to Herat forced some to reside in the city and others to serve in his army. He subsequently appointed Aktar Khan Alizai Governor of Gour, on account of his known hostility to Kohan-dil Khan, the then ruler of Kandahar.

At the commencement of the year under report, Abdul Ghafur Khan was the chief of the Taimunis. It is said that he could summon 12,000 horsemen to his standard, and enjoyed a revenue of three lakhs of rupees. The chief place is Tybarah.

The strong fort of Furrah is situated on the road between Kandahar and Herat, and commands the frontier district of the Cabul territories, abutting on Herat and Gour.

The Taimuni chief, instigated by private enmity, procured the murder of a kinsman of his own, resident in the Furrah district. The Governor, Mahomed Sharif Khan, a son of the Amir, resenting this outrage, applied to the Amir for permission to punish its perpetrator, and, though at first discouraged, ultimately obtained it on the ground that the chief was a feudatory of the Atighan Government, and had formerly been coerced by an Affghan force, under the command of Jalaludin Khan, son of the late Wazir Mahomed Akbar Khan.

On hearing of the preparations being made, Sultan Ahmed Khan, the ruler of Herat, remonstrated; and his wife, the daughter of the Amir, together with her son, Shah Newaz Khan, anxious was given out that her entreaties had prevailed, and that a pardon had been extended to Abdul Ghafur Khan. That chief accordingly disbanded his followers. But Mahomed Sharif Khan then made a sudden night march, compelling him to flight, and leading in a few days to the complete reduction of his country—the people of which had been alienated by his oppression.

Abdul Ghafur repaired to Herat, but Sultan Jan was then endeavouring to reduce the Mir of Maimanna to subjection. He did not ultimately succeed; and at the beginning of March he sud denly advanced to Subzawar, half way between Herat and Furrah. He was accompanied by Mir Afzul Khan, son of Poor-dil Khan, and Sirdar Ghulam Mohiudin Khan, son of Sirdar Kohan-dil Khan, who strongly urged him to push on to Kandahar. His force consisted of 8,000 irregulars and three guns, together with a crowd of militia, which soon moved on Khillutgah, about four and a-half miles from Furrah, the place where former kings used to hold investitures.

Sirdar Saifulla Khan, the youthful son of the Amir, held the citadel of Furrah with four companies of regular infantry, two hundred jazailchis, two hundred horse and four small guns, but the gates were in the hands of the Khans of Furrali. After an interval of nineteen days three of these -Khan Mahomed Khan, Idu Khél; Jabar Khan, Nurzai; and Mahomed Khan, Achukzai-opened the gates, and a day or two after the Sirdar was obliged to surrender. Protection was extended to the ladies of the garrison: the troops were disarmed and turned out. The Kandahar Sirdars advanced as far as Ghirishk, on the Hilmund, but did not attempt to make any demonstration against Furrah.

The unwelcome news reached Amir Dost Mahomed Khan at Jalalabad. He immediately addressed letters to the principal personages of Kandahar requiring them to obey the directions of Mahomed Amir Khan; and warned the Khans of the Jalalabad, Kabul, Ghuzni, and Kohistan provinces, together with Saadut Khan of Lalpura to be in readiness with their partisans for service. The Amir himself, after some unavoidable delays, marched towards Kandahar and reached Ghirishk on the 9th of June.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DARJEELING, Oct. 15 .- The Lieutenant governor of Bengal has sent instructions for the construction of a bridle road from the Saddle by a regular gradient along the western hills of the Balasun valley, emerging at the mouth of that river, crossing the Terai in a direct line to some where near Phansee Dawa, between Titalaya and Silligoorie, but nearest to the former place. It will be a long road from the Saddle to the foot of the hills, but the steep ascent from Silligoorie to Kursiong will be avoided, and the greater portion of the sixteen miles between Silligoorie and Titalaya; moreover, it will afford facilities for bringing the land on the western side of the Balasun under cultivation. There is, however, it appears, a hitch somewhere. The Municipal Commis-aioners have opposed it on the plea of engineering difficulties, great expense, and the low state of their funds. It is, however, believed that Colonel Beadle satisfied himself as to the practicability of the measure, and it is to be hoped that the Government of Bengal, ere it be abandoned, will call for such evidence and opinion as will satisfy it that the objections are well-founded. The cart-road is progressing very slowly indeed, and it is now discovered that the portion of the road from the Saddle towards Kursiong is many feet above that portion coming from Kursiong. They have therefore commenced cutting down eleven feet lower at the Saddle. The two roads not meeting is supposed to arise from one or other of the following causes: errors in the elevations of Kursiong and the Saddle as defined by the trigonometrical survey; the water used for the boiling points being salt at one station and fresh at the other; an imperfect spirit-level on the theodolites; a depression or rising of one portion of the hills during the frequent slight barometers, or the surveyors. No doubt the fact of the matter will be discovered by Colonel Beadle, who is expected daily .- Englishman.

PUNJAB, Sept. 30.—Our holidays commence to-day, but instead of lasting a whole month, we hard- orking unfortunates are limited to five days. I am happy to say that my prognostications of a favourable out turn in agricultural produce have been realised. Everything is flourishing, and everything would be comparatively cheap if the demands so allowed were not so great as to keep up prices—a most desirable state of things, you will say, for the producer, but quite the reverse for the unfortunate consumer. If the supreme or the local government would but interfere to prevent that dominant Rajah of Jummoo from inflicting prohibitory duties on the produce of the plains of the Punjab, I feel assured that cultivators would increase their lands by a good throw; but so long as his Highness of that ilk is permitted to impose such custom's duties as he thinks fit on sugar, salt, &c., which his people buy of our prople, the produce will be so restricted. see Colonel Phayre is going to negotiate with his Majesty of Burmah on this very subject; why should not the ruler of Kashmir be invited by a Special Commissioner to consider the impolitic nature of his measures in this respect? We are looking forward with anxiety to the completion of our railroad to Mooltan, but our authorities on this matter seem to be very dilatory, and we are informed, much to our disgust, that we shall be fortunate if the rail be complete within eighteen months.

"ADDITIONAL CLERGY SOCIETY."-There seems to be a general row among the clergy as to the cure of souls in certain places. In some stations somebody ought to look after them, and in others it is held to be the duty of somebody else. Our readers are doubtless aware that there is in existence a society called the "Additional Clergy Society," established for the purpose of providing clergymen for stations not provided for by Government; and in March last an order was issued by the Government of India for the payment of Rs. 150 per annum in every instance where a clergyman was appointed by the society with the approval of Government, on the condition that the society would at once appoint clergymen to the stations of Raneegunge, Port Blair, and Akyab. No objection was made by the society to look after Akyab and Raneegunge, provided the inhabitants of those stations were prepared to comply with the usual conditions, but Port Blair was tabooed. The naval brigade are in that station, and, according to the society, the care of these men's souls is peculiarly that of the Government, which they would in this instance elevate to the post of the "Cherub who sits up aloft and looks after poor Jack." This being the case, the members of the Additional Clergy Society object to interfere with the salvation of the Naval Brigade, even for the additional Rs. 150, The Bishop, we believe, has not interfered actively in the matter, but has merely expressed a hope that, should the society alter its present opinion and condescend to take up Port Blair, the allowance of Rs. 150 will not be withheld. To this modification of the grant the Viceroy has, we hear, consented, and has, moreover, approved of the Bishon's suggestion that a separate building for a church and a house for the clergy should be erected at Port Blair. All this is very considerate and courteous of his Excellency; but had he said, in the words of Joshua Geddes, "Thou would'st not take the cakes when offered first, and thou can'st not have them now," the implied reproof would not have been an unmerited comment on such an unseemly discussion among clergymen as an argument who is to save souls and who is not, and when Rs. 150 is to be granted for the said salvation and when it is not .- Englishman.

DELHI, Oct. 13 .- In my last I think I mentioned that the cold weather had either set in, or was close at hand. It was a delusion : we have not yet the fine clear cool days of October as it generally comes in, and the consequence is that fever is stalking abroad, carrying off numbers of earthquakes we have had for the last two or three natives and filling the European hospitals at the sixteen candidates, of whom seven were soldiers.

months, or an error in either the capacity of the | rate of from ten to fifteen men per diem. artillery is not affected so much as the 82nd, but I have heard of one fatal case in the former and two in the latter. Our hopes for a good name for Delhi have, consequently, declined; and although this is an unusual season, I fear, unless a speedy change takes place, we shall find it keeping up its character. It is piteous to see the European women and children going about the city with their fair faces disfigured by those dreadful Delhi sores. I have lately seen at least a dozen upon whose faces at least three and four sores are still festering, and will leave a mark the sufferers will carry down to their graves. It is bad enough for men, but women and children claim from us an extra amount of pity, and I think it marvellous that some of our clever medicos have not yet discovered some cure, or some preventive, for this plague. The native hakeems have a cure, and when it is applied by them it is wonderfully effective: but our soldiers are such "larky" fellows that unless a native is well accustomed to their pranks he seldom ventures twice among them; and besides this difficulty I don't think the army surgeons like "quack medicines," however efficacious they may prove. All I can say, therefore, will probably do little good, but I do still say that it is a pity some of our clever men do not turn their attention to the complaint, and, whether it owes its origin to drinking water, or bad food, set about discovering a remedy. My letters from Ferozepore mention a good fall of rain accompanied by thunder; this will give our friends in that quarter a little cool weather, and, as they have had hot winds again of late, they need it. There is a good deal of grumbling about "the crops," but I believe the out-turn will be good. Some of the grain is thin and other mildewed, but upon the whole it has been a favourable season. The "Old Bank House" (Begum Sumroo's) is being rebuilt. The "Delhi Institute" is progressing, and several new roads, opening out in cantonments, promise well. The defences of the fort gates are also in a forward state, and will be completed by the end of the cold weather .- Englishman.

OUDE POLICE.—The Supreme Government has recently put an end to an anomaly in the pecuniary arrangements of the Oude Police. Under the old regime an assistant superintendent of district police in that province, when ordered to officiate for a superintendent of the first or second grade, frequently dropped into the comfortable receipt of a deputation allowance which raised his total emoluments above those enjoyed by superintendents of the third or fourth grade, his superiors in actual rank. This, of course, gave rise to sundry jealousies, and the matter was referred to the chief commissioner for the decision of the Supreme Government. This latter, after remarking that an assistant superintendent would on his first promotion to the rank of superintendent receive no more than the salary attached to the lowest grade of that rank, has ruled that in future all assistants appointed to officiate as superintendents shall receive no higher emoluments than those enjoyed by superintendents of the lowest grade.

EPIDEMIC IN LOWER BENGAL-The native journals mention the reappearance in Baraset and Hooghly districts of the epidemic of fever and cholera which decimated so many villages some months ago, and also this time last year. Officers in charge of dispensaries are instructed to move about in the afflicted villages, and the Hindoo Patriot says it is the intention of the Lieutenant-Governor to appoint a committee of inquiry in the cold weather to investigate the cause of the extraordinary sickness in a place which has hitherto been healthy. The close of the rainy season in Bengal is most deadly, the hot sun beating down on the soil and dense vegetation surcharged with moisture. The Bengalee keeps to his mud hut and stagnant tanks, instead of building a bamboo house on a frame raised above the ground, as the Burmese and Malays do, so as to be above the malaria.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA on the 3rd Oct. held a confirmation at Darjeeling. There were ROYAL NAVY IN INDIA .- Commodore Lord John Hay, c.B., has left Calcutta in the steamer Proserpine, to join his ship, the Odin, at Diamond Harbour, which has since gone to sea, bound for Rangoon and the other eastern ports. His lordship, in concert with the Governor-general, has completed the naval arrangements for the employment of H.M.'s ships on this side of India and the Straits, leaving the other side, the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf, for future adjustment, we suppose, with the Bombay Government. On Monday, Oct. 20, his Excellency the Governor-general proceeded, accompanied by Lord John Hay, to the Government dockyard at Kidderpore, which they inspected together, neither of them considering it superior to Portsmouth or Plymouth, and the commodore expresses himself to that effect. It is the intention of the Government to excavate a dock in the Kidderpore dockyard, four hundred feet in length, and of a proportionate width, which, when completed, will receive the largest ships of her Majesty's navy for repairs and cleaning, and, consequent upon the employment of the Royal navy in these seas other improvements and changes will be introduced in the Government dockyard, which will soon increase its efficiency, and also its appearance.

THE DUTCH IN SUMATRA.—The question of Dutch aggression in Sumatra has been vigorously taken up by the authorities of the Straits Settlements, and is, we (Friend of India) understand now before the Viceroy. The matter will be dealt with in strict obedience to the treaty of 1824, which will be carried out in its integrity. That document seems to us to guarantee the independence of the native chiefs, and, whilst excluding us altogether from Sumatra, to restrict the Dutch to the settlements which they possessed in 1824. We trust the Foreign-office of Calcutta, or the Secretariat of Singapore, has copies of the papers which record the action of Lord Palmerston in 1841. The importance of this question to Penang may be gathered from the fact that last year pepper, gutta-percha, india-rubber and betel-nut were imported from the independent native states of Sumatra to the value of Rs. 34,36,666 and that these places took out cotton goods and sundries to the amount of Rs. 51,10,935, a total of 854 lakhs. In Stieler's Gotha Atlas, which is annually corrected by Petermann, and the edition of which for 1861 is before us, all Sumatra is as signed to the Dutch except Acheen, Dilli, and Langkat, the ports affected by the present diffi culty.

CENTRAL PROVINCES .- The districts of the Central Provinces are in course of settlement. Measures should be adopted to infuse a better element among the old proprietary, who are composed entirely of Gonds, and the descendants of the Hindoo families reared on the soil, and assimilated to Gondignorance and barbarism. Under a proprietary so effete there can be no progress. The fairest provinces in India, if we except the Sub Himalayan tracts, will be utterly thrown away on a class of people perfectly ignorant and uncivilised. European settlers who might be induced to take lands at higher rates than the people of these parts would be willing to offer, would do much good. Even enterprising natives from the North-west would be preferable. If due publicity of the settlement, the nature of rates and assessment, were given in the Gazettes, there might be a competition from which Government and the public would alike benefit. The Saugor and Nerbudda Territories enjoy almost an Italian climate. Under the old proprietors the finest teak forests, next to those found in Burmah, have been exhausted for roofing purposes and for firewood. Coal and iron mines have never been worked. Miles of arable land of the best black soil have been allowed to run waste.

Sale of Waste Lands.—The Calcutta Landholders' Association have submitted to the Government of India a copy of the letter of that Lands. Their own letter on the subject the Indian Government will forward to Sir C. Wood. Government say with reference to the meaning of the word "completed" in the him.

of grants under Lord Canning's Rules, "the 22nd of the Rules published by the Government of Bengal a liberal interpretation has been given to the Secretary of State's Despatch upon the point; and that, as the Government of India does not desire to narrow the view taken of the matter by the Lieut.-governor, it does not appear that any further exposition of the question is required." The important decision, also, is given by Government that the legislation still necessary under the 19th paragraph of Lord Canning's Resolution, "will have relation only to the mode of dealing with any rights which may be established by third parties on land sold, and will affect only those third parties and the Government who undertake to make compensation, whilst the possession of the party to whom the land has been granted bona fide shall not be disturbed." Thus all Lord Canning's grantees throughout India are dealt with most honourably.

THE FRENCH IN THE EAST .- A correspondent of the Englishman describes the state of the French in Cochin China. "Saigon is in a bad way. No trade, no rice; plenty of provisions for Europeans and no consumers; pirates abundant, and Admiral incapable. Leaving the ennui of office to some unfortunate inferior, his Excellency has steamed away up the Cambodian river to endeavour to reach the great lake, the grand object of French ambition." Cambodia being in insurrection against its suzerain, the King of Siam, the French have taken advantage of the difficulty. Asserting that several of the people have been pursued into French territory, which has thus been violated, Admiral Bonnard has told the Cambodian authorities to receive with friendliness des vaisseaux armés, and he has addressed a letter of complaint to the Siamese Court. The French force is 5,000 strong. This is only one of a series of efforts to pick a quarrel with Siam, which will end in the French obtaining command of the whole Cambodia valley. There can be little doubt that in less than a quarter of a century the English and French frontiers will meet somewhere between Burmah and Siam.

THE NORTHERN INDIAN TURF CLUB.—The Mofussilite publishes the proceedings of the Northern Indian Turf Club, which met at Dehra on the 3rd Oct. Captain F. Lukin, 2nd Dragoon Guards, was elected secretary in place of Sir C. Oakeley, Bart., who is about to leave India. In 1851 there were eighteen members in the club, and of these Sir C. Oakeley is now the last. The club was in abeyance in the mutiny, but was revived two years ago. It now numbers ninetynine members. In replying to a vote of thanks, Sir C. Oakeley said:—"I have always taken great interest in the well-doing of the club, for I look upon it as essential to the prosperity of racing here, as the Jockey Club is to racing, the Marylebone Club to cricket, or the Pugilistic Benevolent Association is to boxing in England."

KATMANDOO, Oct. 6.—I have nothing in the shape of news to give you from this quiet and dull quarter of the world, except that the Dheraj Bahadoor, wishing to keep up the good feeling which should always exist between the heads of the different governments in India, is now preparing a magnificent present to be forwarded to his Excellency the Governor-general. Jung Bahadoor has devoted considerable time and attention lately towards catching wild elephants, which are still very plentiful in the Kuma forests, and in March next a large number of elephant-catchers and elephants are to start for Numodhen Khola. The weather has been delightful.

Mr. Smoult, the Taxing Officer of the High Court, has sent in an application to Government for permission to retire on a pension. This gentleman is one of, if not the oldest officer attached to the Court, having held at different times the most responsible offices attached to it. We believe that a question will arise as to the right of Mr. Smoult to claim a pension, on the ground that the period of service has by no means been continuous. In the event of his resignation being accepted, it is probable that Mr. C. T. Davis, at present clerk to Sir Charles Jackson, will succeed him.

THE GREAT TRIGONOMETRICAL SURVEY.—The Hills states that the head quarters of the Great Trigonometrical Survey have left the Doon for Vizagapatam in about 18° N. latitude. In that vicinity a base line of verification will be measured during the present cold season, similar to the bases measured at Beeder, Seronje, and Calcutta, the other three angles of the vast quadrilateral network of triangles. The party will return to Dehra next hot weather.

FEMALE SCHOOLS IN DELHI.—The Delhi Journal records the establishment of four female schools in Delhi by four Mussulman gentlemen. The schools are well attended. One Mirza Elihee Bux has opened a school, assisted by the Deputy Commissioner, for the education of the Timour dynasty. This school is at Nizam-ood-deen, and has already nearly fifty scholars in attendance, which number will, it is expected, ere long, increase to one hundred. As in the case of the Calcutta Bethune School a conveyance is being constructed for the girls who attend these schools.

Benares, Oct. 20 .- One practical fruit resulting from the establishment of the Benares Debating Society was seen in the formation of a society for the promotion of female education, for which a special meeting was held on the 6th inst. This is called the Benares Female Education Book Society. It has for its president the Hon. Rajah Deo Narain Singh Bahadoor; and secretary, Baboo Aiswarya Narain Sing, and the leading men of the Debating Society for its members.
The object of this new society is the publication, at its own expense, of all books in Hindi suited to the instruction of females of this country that will be submitted to it, subject to the approval of the president and the majority of the members. The society does not for the present guarantee the payment of any pecuniary remuneration to those who prepare such books and submit to it, but only a certain number of copies after they have been published. Pursuant to a notice, which was previously in circulation, an extraordinary meeting of the Benares Debating Society was held on the 4th instant, at which, besides the elite, and the educated natives who compose its members, there were present Mr. A. Shakspear, the Commissioner, Mr. C. Horne, the Judge, Mr. R. H. Griffith, the able Principal of the Benares College, Captain H. P. Gill, Cantonment Joint Magistrate, Mr. F. Halsey, assistant to the Head Master, Benares College, Rev.W. Hooper, Sanscrit Professor of Jad Narain's College, Rev. Messrs. Parsons, Heinig, and Blake, &c., and some six or seven ladies. At this meeting a lecture on the Sidereal and Tropical systems was delivered by Pundit Bapee Deva Shastri, Professor of Astronomy and Mathematics in the Benares College. The object of the lecturer was the pointing out of some of the errors in astronomy contained in the works of the Hindus, and the rectifying of them. In doing this the lecturer certainly manifested an independent spirit and a liberal way of thinking. The lecture was well delivered, and well received by the audience, excepting by one or two followers of one Gunnoolal, mention of whom appeared in your last issue. The arrangements for the reception of the ladies and gentlemen made by Baboo Futteh Narein Singh were excellent. A vote of thanks was moved by Baboo Shamachurn Banerjee, and was seconded by Shiva Prasad. After this the hon, president rose and offered thanks to the ladies and gentlemen for the trouble they had taken to grace the meeting. Their attendance at such meetings at least shows how much interest they take in the improvement of the natives, and how they have their well-being at heart. If the civil and military officers of every station were in this way to have societies organised, as Captain Gill and Dr. Cheke did here, and to encourage the natives by attending their meetings, and to take an interest in their proceedings, then it is to be hoped the state of the country would assume quite a different aspect in a very few days .- Delhi Gazette.

MR. Scott.—The Delhi Gazette admits that it was misinformed as to Mr. Scott's furious riding having been the cause of the late fatal accident at Landour. The delinquent was a different person altogether.

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS .- The detachment of her Majesty's 81st Foot at Kangra Fort leave that post to join headquarters, and proceed towards Morar, on the 23rd October. The 2nd Regiment Native Infantry (old 31st) left Shahjehanpore on the 15th, halted two days at Futtehghur, and reached Bewar on the 23rd; they expect to be at Allyghur on the 1st Nov., Umballa 21st, Ferozepore 4th December, and Mooltan 26th. There are five European officers with the corps and 652 of all ranks. The 6th Native Infantry (the old 43rd) happened to be encamped at Bewar the day the 2nd arrived. The latter regiment have only four companies with headquarters, about 200 men, with 8 or 10 European officers.

THE LABARUM SYMBOL.-A correspondent of the Friend of India states that the origin of the J. H. S. and cross on Maharajah Goolab Singh's coins is this. He had in his family a native Christian, a son or nephew, I believe, of the late Dice Somroo, who acted as tutor to the Maharajah's children. This man assured his Highness that it would be gratifying to the English Government if he were to put those symbols on Delhi Goldsmiths .- The respectable old workmen who produced the articles known as Delhi jewellery are now dead. Only one or two are left who are really artists, and it is difficult to get any contracts executed, in spite of fair promises.

DISCIPLINE VINDICATED .- It will be remembered that Captain Maxwell and Lieutenants Orchard and Hare were removed from the Staff Corps in a very harsh manner, for expressing their opinion on some of the Amalgamation details. As his Royal Highness the Commander in-Chief considers that discipline has been sufficiently vindicated by the publicity with which the Government has marked its disapprobation of the conduct of these officers, they are allowed to enter the corps.

DEFENCE OF MR. LAING .- The Government in a long despatch has answered Sir Charles Wood's attack on the Financial Department and Mr. Laing's Budget. Admitting some trifling errors, the policy of the budget is vigorously defended.

CIVIL APPOINTMENTS. - Mr. Rowland Money goes to Calcutta in the room of Mr. Harrington; Mr. C. Thornhill succeeds him as Commissioner of Customs; Mr. Court succeeds Mr. Thornhill as Commissioner of the Allahabad Division; and Mr. Forbes from Mecrut succeeds Mr. Court as Inspector general of Police N.W.P.

MR. C. E. CHAPMAN, Deputy Auditor and Accountant General, Punjab, intends shortly to proceed to England on leave, and Mr. Taylor, the civil paymaster under that Government, who is now on his way back to India from England, is likely to be appointed to officiate for him, so that the arrangements made in the civil paymaster's office in the Punjab, and in the accountant-gene ral's office at this presidency during the absence of Mr. Taylor from this country will for the present remain undisturbed.

CINCHONA SUCCIRUBRA .- Dr. Anderson, of the Calcutta Botanical Gardens, having succeded in forming an infusion of the leaves of Cinchona Succirubra from the plants of that species in the Cinchona Nursery, near Darjeeling, reports to Government that four cases of intermittent fever were cured by it. The infusion thus possesses some of the febrifuge properties of Cinchona; it is of a dark chocolate colour, and is intensely bitter.

EASTERN BENGAL .- The Dacca News mentions that Col. Richardson, Majors Raban and Briggs, and the doctor of the station have been appointed a committee to report on the removal of the Sanitarium of Assam from the rainy Cherrapoonjee to either Shillong or Yeh-duh (not Yeddo). Shillong has no water, so that the latter is likely to be selected. The Cossyah rebels still refuse to come in under the amnesty. The authorities have grievously mismanaged matters in these hills. Not a Jynteah chief would attend Mr. Beadon's fruitless durbar. We expect much from Major Haughton, the commissioner, but Mr. Yule is the man for Assam.

MR. GEORGE CAMPBELL, C.S .- The farewell dinner to Mr. George Campbell, on the 21st Oct., was the largest ever seen in Lucknow. A round hundred sat down to table, and the party did not break up till twelve o'clock. Many excellent speeches were made by Mr. Yule, Gen. MacDuff, Mr. Campbell, Colonel Abbott, and Mr. Baldwin. The greatest good feeling pervaded all present, and the cheering was done unusually "high," being done standing on chairs.

Magisterial Irregularities.—The Allahabad Gazette states that the Commander-in-Chief has prevailed on Lord Elgin to take serious notice of the conduct of the Judge of Shahjehanpore, who reversed the order of the cantonment magistrate, sentencing a Maliomedan to one year's imprisonment for spitting in the face of a European soldier, and abusing him. The same journal speaks of a certain official in Humeerpore, who has made himself so conspicuous that both Europeans and natives have brought serious charges

Cash Balances.—The following shows the state of the cash balances. The phrase "Co.'s Rupees " is still adhered to :-

HYDERABAD, Oct. 2 .- The authorities at Candeish, after having given the Chuppatee question due consideration, have decided in not attaching any importance to the circulation of these cakes. According to them they appear to have been distributed as a propitiatory offering to avert cholera and famine, with both of which dreadful scourges the inhabitants have been threatened; and it is considered that the most effectual means of rendering the chuppatee distribution harmless is to take no notice of it. They argue that the more interest the Government appears to take in the matter, the more importance it assumes in the minds of the natives, and that should it, even as supposed by many, have a treasonable import, the mischief is not to be averted by interfering in the circulation.

A NORMAL SCHOOL.—There is at least one Normal school in India managed by a trained English master, and that in Madras. On the occasion of the transfer of the school from Vepery to new premises in Mount Road, Mr. Anderson, the master, delivered a lecture on the art of teaching. The Honourable Mr. Maltby presided.

"UNDER THE CODES."-The work of bringing all detached provinces under the "regulations, or, as it ought to be now, the "codes," is going on in Madras, as well as in Northern and Central India. A committee, consisting of the agents in Ganjam and Vizagapatam, and the Judge of Chicacole, have submitted a report on the arrangements for bringing the lowland tracts of the Ganjam and Vizagapatam agencies under the regular courts. The new zillah of Vizagapatam has been constituted.

Mission to the Shans .- The Moulmein correspondent of the Rangoon Times states that preparations are being made for the despatch of a British officer, to improve our relations with the neighbouring Shan States of Zimmay and Rahine. The Shans have of late been immigrating in large numbers into our territories.

THE LATE GENERAL CULLEN. Our obituary of the 14th inst. announces the death of Lieutgeneral William Cullen, of her Majesty's Royal Artillery on the Madras establishment, at Allepey, in Travancore, in the 77th year of his age. Since then we have received the following particulars of his services. General Cullen entered the military service of the late East India Company in 1804. and remained in it fifty-eight years without once returning to England. He distinguished himself at Ganderish and Berar against the Mahrattas, and with the forces against Kurnool in 1815, but it was in the administrative and political departments that he was chiefly employed, and established his right to a high place among the best officers of the Indian Government. In 1814 he was appointed Commissary of stores at Bellary, whence he was promoted in January, 1831, to be principal Commissary of Ordnance at Madras. In April, 1831, he was made Military Auditor-general, and in July, 1834, Commissary-general. In acknowledgment of his valuable services in these important offices he was selected in September, 1840, to represent the British Government as Resident at the Courts of the Rajahs of Travancore and Cochin. This office he held till January, 1860, when he retired from public life. He continued to reside in Travancore, where he was exceedingly popular with the native population. An ardent cultivator of science, he spared no expense or personal labour in promoting or conducting every investigation that could lead to further scientific progress, and it is hoped that his various papers and collections, which are believed to be very valuable, may not be lost to the public. The Cullen Scholarship, lately founded at the Madras University, and liberally endowed by the Rajah of Travancore and other natives, with the full approval of the British Government, may be adduced no less as a proof of their sincere regard than of their appreciation of one who had so long been resident among them, since they felt that no higher tribute could be offered to General Cullen than to associate his name with the education of the natives of India.

BEYPORE.—The Madras Railway authorities have raised the question of using Beypore as the P. and O. terminus, and Captain H. Tronson, that company's agent, on leave at Ootacamund, was asked to visit it. Government in a letter to Captain Tronson coldly say-" Adverting to the great interest which is at present attached to the establishment of steam communication between the ports of Beypore and Suez, I am directed by his Excellency the Governor in Council to suggest that it might be of much advantage if now that you are so near the former port you could, consistently with your other engagements, visit it and acquaint yourself with its leading features and capabilities before your return to Calcutta." Captain Tronson has returned to Calcutta ill.

PATRONAGE OF IDOLATRY .- It is long before an evil policy ceases to bring forth evil fruits. The people of Coimbatore, taking advantage of the proximity of Sir W. Denison, have addressed the following characteristic petition to him: - "We beg to inform your Excellency that since the assumption of this country by the English Government a yearly allowance of Rupees 151-4-0 was allowed by Government for 'Waroonajapam' and 'Roodrabhiskaikum' at the Vellingherry Hills as well as for 'Wanabojanam.' These ceremonies were regularly performed, whereby the periodical rains were abundant, and we enjoyed prosperity. The above allowance was discontinued ten years ago and the performance of the ceremonies ceased, the result of which is the failure of rains. We beg to assure your Excellency that so soon as the ceremonies are again performed we will undoubtedly have plenty of rain." On this the Madras Government merely remarks :- "It can hardly be expected that Government, which has for years been withdrawing from all connection with the religions of the country, will again enter on a course of policy which it has abandoned. " Hardly "!

THE ROHILLAS, who had been showing a rebellious front in the neighbourhood of East Berar, retreated on the approach of the 3rd infantry Hyderabad contingent, Tax on Firewood.-Some short time past the agent of the Southern of India Railway Company preferred a complaint to the Madras Government respecting the levy of an import duty on firewood imported from Ceylon for the use of his engines. Coal and coke are free from duty, but as firewood is not put down as free in the Schedule of Act XI. of 1862, it is taxed as an unenumerated article. The Government of Madras received the complaint and forwarded it to the Supreme Government, remarking, at the same time, that it would be an act of sound policy to exempt the firewood alluded to from taxation, because, although unimportant as a minor article of import, it was at present an object of considerable importance to the Railway Company on account of the disappearance of the jungle and the consequent increase in the price of firewood. In reply to the application the Supreme Government has, we understand, ruled that the said firewood may be exempted from taxation at once in anticipation of any legislative measure which it will be necessary to take for the insertion of it in the Schedule of the new Customs Act. With reference to the action of the local government in the matter, the Governor-general in Council has recorded his opinion that under Section XVII. of Act XI. of 1862, it is fairly within the competency of the local governments to exempt especially any cargo of firewood imported on account of the Railway Company; but that the said section would not empower them to declare any article of revenue generally exempt from Customs duty.

HIS HIGHNESS THE NIZAM is opening out at his own expense a road extending one hundred miles between Hingoolie and Jaulnah.

ENGINEER OFFICERS .- Owing to the acquisition of North Canara there is a greater demand than usual for engineer officers, and it is in contemplation to nominate qualified officers of the staff corps to fill some of the appointments hitherto held by officers of the engineers. Some unemployed officers will thus be provided for, the Bible-women as simply city missionaries. As while the services of the Engineers will become it is not likely that many will be found to do the available for their own more legitimate and important duties.

EMIGRATION TO REUNION .-Her Majesty's Consul at Reunion has received "the snub official." Some short time past that individual took it into his head to comment rather strengly on the inefficiency of the arrangements established by the emigration authorities at Calcutta, as exemplified by the heavy mortality which has lately occurred on board the ships bound from this port to Reunion. To remedy this alleged falling off he requested the opinion of the Lieutenant governor as to the propriety of continuing the present system of paying the emigration agent by fees. In answer to this suggestion the Lieutenant-governor replied that the charges brought by the Consul against the officers of the French Emigration Agency and the Protector of Emigrants in Calcutta were proved by no satisfactory evidence, and that although the system of paying by fee according to the number of coolies shipped might be open in theory to objection on the part of the colonists, it had not, so far as any evidence then before the Government went, been shown to have caused any practical mischief. The Consul also remarked upon the quarantine arrangements existing in Reunion, and gave it as his opinion, backed by that of Dr. Tonnerre, that they were the main cause of the coolies being landed in a sickly condition. Here the Lieutenant governor agreed with the Consul, and concluded by giving him a quiet hint that the said quarantine would be a good subject for him to turn his attention to. The returns, too, of various ships arrived at Reunion were by no means satisfactory or regularly sent in, and a suggestion that it would be much better if the Consul were to attend to that portion of his duties than to send in all manner of vague charges against other people, concluded the snub, which the unhappy Consul has drawn on his own shoulders for travelling out of his own province. Whether or no the snub was deserved we cannot say, for the precise nature of the charges brought, and the explanations given, are not before us .- Englishman.

THE BOMBAY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE express their "high admiration " for Sir G. Clerk, and as to Sir B. Frere they hail his appointment with great satisfaction. They anticipate from his rule very great benefit to the presidency, and the measures already brought forward under his auspices encourage them in the belief that they will not be disappointed. Of Lord Canning they say -" His latest measures will form his enduring monument." Of Mr. Laing-" another statesman has passed away from India within the last year, but his counsels and experience are still to be of great benefit to the country. The statesman by whose efforts the finances of the country were rescued from an almost hopeless state of confusion and chronic deficit, and under whose care they were fostered to a surplus, by whom the heavy duty pressing on English cotton goods was removed,-and by whom, above all, has been made such a manly stand for the independence of the Supreme Government of this country,-cannot be passed over in this report. Mr. Laing will not be forgotten in India, and the Committee trust that he may yet be spared to do her good service." The Committee of the Chamber for the ensuing year are Robert Hannay, Esq., Chairman; Walter R. Cassels, Esq., Deputy-Chairman; and Alexander Brown, John Farrar, and Richard Wallace, Esqrs., members.

BIBLE-WOMEN IN BOMBAY .- The Bombay Guardian reports that the Calcutta system of Biblewomen has been established in Bombay. One visitor, the wife of a city missionary, has been appointed, and others will be nominated so soon as they can be found. We are personally cognisant of the immense good done by two ladies in the Calcutta jail. They were the means of re-forming many of the long-term convicts now imprisoned at Ootacamund. In London there are no less than 170, although the movement began only in 1857, and for this purpose nearly £12,000 a-year is raised there. It seems to be the object of the Bombay Association to employ it is not likely that many will be found to do the work, the jail and hospitals should be attended to MAJOR SHAW, examiner of commissariat accounts, is about to retire from the service.

KANDEISH .- The Bombay Government have called on the Collectors of Kandeish, Ahmednuggur, Sholapore, Poona, and Sattara, for in-formation as to the state of the crops. In these districts from one-half to four fifths of the land born in wedlock 4,325 male children and 3,359 usually cultivated with spring crops has been left unsown. Only in the districts bordering on the Western Ghauts has this description of cultivation been attempted. The prospects of Khan-deish appear to be the worst of all, for there the proportion of land adapted for Khurreef cultivation exceeds that in the other collectorates, being about three-fourths of the whole area of culturable land. The high prices to which grain has risen, after making allowance even for the effects of the recent fall of rain are 75 to 100 per cent. above the average of the last two years. This state of things is aggravated by the prohibition placed by the Nizam on the exportation of grain from his estates, which usually furnish large quantities of grain to the eastern districts of the Deccan Zillahs and Southern Marattah country. The Government has accordingly ordered public works, in the shape of roads and tanks, to be carried out to employ the people. Sir Bartle Frere ascribes the difficulty in carrying out such works, which has always existed in Bombay, to the want of labour.

INDUS STEAM NAVIGATION. rupees reached Attock on the 2nd of October from They were sent by the steamer to Mukhud, eighteen miles above Kalabagh, and brought thence in seven marches to Attock. This is the first despatch of treasure by steamer up the Indus River.

Mr. SMALES .- The Bombay Grand Jury have thrown out the bill against Mr. Smales, late of the Inniskilling Dragoons. He is about to sue the Poona Observer for libel, the Deccan Herald states, in charging him with "having swindled Major Swindley and others of his brother officers of large sums of money, with which he absconded from Mhow." He has also served General Farrel and Colonel Crawley with notice of actions for defamation of character and false imprisonment. When the decision of the Commander-in-Chief on the Mhow court martial was read out to the Inniskilling Dragoons, Colonel Crawley is said to have indulged in triumphant comments unbecoming his position.

MAJOR GENERAL HALE, commanding at Poona, leaves India in the second steamer in November. The General and Mrs. Hale were entertained by the officers of the station at a farewell dinner on the evening of the 27th October.

MR. L. H. BAILEY, Barrister-at-Law, has resigned his post of Deputy-Secretary to the Bombay Government in the Legislative Department.

LIEUT. COLONEL WRAY, C.B., of the Royal Artillery, is to be appointed Principal Commissary of Ordnance at Bombay; and Lieut.-Colonel Hatch is to succeed Colonel Wray as agent for gunpowder.

"THE ETERNAL FIRE." - We see, from the Poona Observer, that Dr. Haug, the well-known Sanskrit and Zend scholar, has been lecturing to the Poona Young Men's Association on the "History of Grecian Philosophy." Explaining the Eternal Fire of Heraclitus he showed that this belief in the all pervading fire is a doctrine both of Vedantism and the Zend Avesta. In the Veds the fire is called "Vaishvanara." The "Nous" of Anaxagoras Dr. Haug identified with the "Buddhi" of the Brahmins. Empedocles of Sicily he called a great "Sadhu" (a saint), and compared him with the Dnyaneshwur of Alundi. Dr. Haug would confer a benefit on all scholars if, with a better knowledge than Victor Cousin had of Oriental philosophy, he would expound it, critically and historically, in connection with the philosophy of Greece and of the modern West.

CAPTAIN PYM, 2nd Bombay Light Cavalry, has been appointed to the special duty of superintending the Bheel Colonies in Khandeish, in succession to Captain Peter Dods, 9th Bombay Native Infantry, recently appointed by the Supreme Government Director of Public Instruction in the Central Provinces, BIRTH RETURNS .- In Bombay, in 1861, there were registered a total of 8,023 births, of which 337 children were still-born, leaving 7,686 children born alive. The number is somewhat larger females, the males bearing to the females the unusually large proportion of 128-8 to 100. The excess appears to be chiefly due to the extreme disproportion of the sexes in the Mussulman births, these being 882 males to 493 females, or 178.9 to 100. These valuable facts are given by Dr. Haines, superintendent of mortuary and birth returns. He adds that the deaths were a thousand in excess of the births, and estimates the total births at not less than 10,000 or 11,000 annually in the island. Seventy seven illegitimate births are returned, viz., 42 males and 35 females. "It is greatly to be feared that this number is but a small fraction of those which really occur, for I am convinced, from facts which come under my own observation, that the practice of infanticide is fearfully common."

TELEGRAPH TO SEDASHEGHUR .- The Bombay Government has brought before the Government of India the urgent necessity which exists for a branch line of electric telegraph, diverging from the main line near Dharwar, and connecting it with the new port of Sedasheghur and other important trading towns in the district of North Canara. The local Government has represented the great desirableness of having this branch line completed and ready for use by the time when the cotton crop of the coming season would be ready for conveyance down the Ghats for shipment at Sedasheghur.

VICTORIA AND ALBERT MUSEUM,-The foundation stone of the Victoria and Albert Museum is to be formally laid on the 19th November by his Excellency Sir Bartle Frere, K.C.B. The building, which has been for some time in progress, promises to be one of the finest structures in Bombay. Lady Frere will at the same time declare the new gardens of the Agri-Horticultural Society of Western India, which surround the Museum, to be open to the public.

CASE OF CAPTAIN MAXWELL AND LIEUTS.

ORCHARD AND HARE.

ORCHARD AND HARE.

Fort William, Oct. 13.—No. 935.—With reference to G.G.O. No. 1,948, of the 19th Nov., the following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India to H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council, No. 239, dated India-office, London, July 2, is published for general information:—

Military.—No. 239.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have received and considered in Council your letter No. 154 of May 3 last, transmitting further correspondence connected with the conduct of Capt. Maxwell and Lieuts. Orchard and Hare.

2. I observe that Capt. Maxwell is stated to have submitted an earnest and proper solicitation, praying your Government to overlook the impropriety of which he was guilty, and of which he is fully conscious; and that he has also interceded in favour of the other two officers, and has, in extenuation of their conduct, attributed their proceedings to the influence of his own example.

3. Under these circumstances, the C. in C. considers that discipline has been sufficiently yindicated.

3. Under these circumstances, the C. in C. considers that discipline has been sufficiently vindicated by the publicity with which the Government have marked its disapprobation of the conduct of these officers, and suggests that an act of elemency might now be very appropriately exercised in their favour.

THE FUTURE.

4. Your Government support this appeal, and I shall, therefore, not object to your allowing to Capt. Maxwell and Lieuts. Orchard and Hare the privilege of entering the Staff Corps upon their original applications. —I have, &c.,

(Signed) C. Wood.

With reference to the foregoing, the undermentioned officer having expressed his desire to avail himself of the privilege thus accorded, is appointed to the Bengal Staff Corps, constituted by the Royal Warrant of Jan. 16, 1861:—

Capt. Patrick Maxwell, late 37th N.I., deputy commissioner, Punjab.

THE GREAT RENT CASE.

THE long-pending case so anxiously watched through its varying phases by the European landholders in Bengal has at length been decided in favour of the just rights of a landlord. One of the immediate and natural results of the refusal of the ryots to grow indigo on the old system was the enhancement of their previously very low rents by the suffering and indignant planters. Those ryots, however, who held their lands by the right of twelve years' occupancy, demurred to the power claimed by the planters to alter the terms of their holding, and, consequently, one case out of many was selected for trial. Mr. James Hills, the well-known Manager of the Nischindepore Factories, had given notice to his tenants that he should raise their yearly rental from five annas four pie to one rupee per beegah. The rise was, no doubt, considerable, but the prices of all kinds of agricultural produce have increased so greatly during the last few years that there was really nothing unreasonable in Mr. Hills's demand. It was not as if the ryot, by an outlay of his own capital or by any remarkable effort of intelligence had improved his land to such a degree that the produce had doubled. Had that been the case, Mr. Hills would have laid himself open to the charge of acting ungenerously, and of endeavouring to reap where he did not sow. But nothing of this kind had taken place. The ryot simply received twofold the former price for the fruits of his field without the merit of any extra exertion or foresight on his part. Nor did the ryots put forth any claim on this head. The only plea advanced in opposition by their counsel was founded on an alleged falling off of the supply owing to the gradual deterioration of the soil. The Deputy-collector of Nuddea, Moulvie Yatazad Hossein, before whom in the first instance Mr. Hills brought an action against one Issur Ghose, found that there had actually been some deterioration of soil but not at all equivalent to the increase in the value of the produce. He therefore decreed the plaintiff's claim of one rupee per beegah in respect of the crops, the prices of which had incontestably risen. Against this decree the defendant appealed to a higher Court, and the case then came before Mr. Elphinstone Jackson, Additional Judge of Nuddea, who imported an entirely novel element into the relations of landlord and tenant. It having been shown that the value of agricultural produce had doubled, he decreed that the rent should likewise be doubled -further remarking, that had the increase been threefold, he would have trebled the rental, and so on. Instead of five annas four annas eight pie per beegah for his low lands, but no alteration was to be made with respect to his other lands, the produce of which had not increased in value, at least in the same ratio. As may readily be supposed, this decision gave satisfaction to neither party. The ryots declared that an allowance ought to be made for the enhanced costs of cultivation, and further protested against the assumption that because the price of produce had doubled the rental should also be doubled. On the other hand, Mr. Hills disputed the alleged deterioration of the soil, unless through overcropping by the tenant, while he was quite willing to agree with the opposite side, though from a different motive, that the proportion instituted by the Judge was erroneous and indefensible. Nor was he prepared to deny that the charges of cultivation were higher than formerly; but after making ample allowance on that head, he maintained that he was still fully entitled to demand a rupee per beegah on the lands in question. Until a recent period the cost of cultivating a beegah of paddy land was about two rupees eight | Islands-so are they called - are four in annas, plus five annas four pie for rent, giving | number :--Comoro, Mohilla, Johanna, and a total of Rs. 2-13-4, while the whole value of the crop was only three rupees, so that the ryots' profits amounted to no more than two annas eight pie. Of late, however, a beegah of rice has yielded six rupees, from which if there be deducted four rupees eight annas for increased cost of cultivation, plus five annas four pie, there will remain to the ryot Rs. 1-2-8. But if in lieu of the old rental one rupee be paid, the ryot will secure for himself a net profit of eight annas per beegah instead of two annas eight pie under the old system, so that even if his rent be doubled, his profits will still be trebled. And it must not be overlooked that the increase in the costs of cultivation arises from the enhanced price of food-the food that he grows for himself and the enhanced price of which is otherwise so greatly to his advantage. However, both parties being dissatisfied, a further appeal was inevitable, and this time it is Sir Barnes Peacock, who-assisted by Justices Bayley and Kemp-has pronounced definitively upon the question at issue.

The Chief Justice, while commending Mr. Jackson's mode of estimating the value of the land by the value of its produce, utterly condemns the principle upon which he acted. "The Act (Act X. 1859) does not say that the increased rent shall bear the same proportion to the original rent as the increased value does to the original value, but merely that the rate shall be fair and equitable." "The Judge," continues his lordship, "does not seem to have drawn a clear distinction between limiting the extent of the enhancement by the grounds of enhancement, and limiting it by a rule of proportion. It is clear that the increase may be limited in extent without adopting the rule of proportion." A sudden and temporary increase in the value of produce is not to be held as a good and sufficient pie, as heretofore, the ryot was to pay ten | tant decision will probably cause immense excitement among the ryots, but it is so clearly based upon a sensible and moderate estimate of the relative duties of landlord and tenant that not the slightest sympathy can be accorded to their groans and lamentations. They will still be far better off than they ever were before, or are ever likely to be under a Native Government, and may perhaps be induced to revert to the cultivation of indigo now that it is likely to be as remunerative as other crops. But yet who is to decide what is "fair and equitable" in the sense of Act X.? Much litigation, we fear, is "looming on the horizon."

THE COMORO ISLANDS. .

A PAPER possessed of great intrinsic interest and evincing a very high order of literary ability has been contributed to the local papers by order of the Bombay Government. It is from the pen of Major Lewis Pelly, who describes in fluent and sometimes eloquent language a small group of islands situated in the Mozambique Channel. The Comoro The first-named is considerably Mayotte. the largest, being thirty miles in length, with an average breadth of ten miles, but rude. desolate, and thinly inhabited. It is, in fact, a mere volcano in a chronic state of eruption, in consequence of which its outline is ever changing. In parts it is slightly wooded, but the want of fresh water is naturally fatal to any luxuriance of vegetation. The islanders themselves procure a scanty supply by preserving the rain water, and by scooping holes in the sand, whence they obtain water drinkable, indeed, but unpleasantly brackish. A few head of cattle are, however, occasionally exported.

Next in order, but the smallest of the group, is Mohilla, distinguished by its bold headlands. and by its generally broken and hilly aspect. It is governed by a female ruler, who is described somewhat irreverently as a "pretty Hindoo-faced person, not old, with a most unpromising-looking Arab husband, a pretty boy-child, and a wonderfully expressivelooking Madagash nurse." The chief town, Dowanee, lies along a low reefy coast, with bad anchorage, and defended by a straight wall, about twenty feet high, and idly pierced for guns. Sugar, it is said, might be profitably cultivated on the lowlands, which are quite unoccupied, and, as the island contains 4,000 inhabitants, there is reason to believe that a day's labour may be had for a day's wages.

Leaving the Island of Johanna to be the last noticed, and still tending to the southward, we arrive at Mayotte, in outward appearance not unlike Mohilla, but with every feature on a larger scale. Since the precise may be limited in extent without adopting the rule of proportion." A sudden and temporary increase in the value of produce is not to be held as a good and sufficient reason for raising the rent, but in the present case there has been a steady and sustained augmentation of prices. A fair and equitable enhancement of rent may therefore be made with strict propriety, and the amount claimed by Mr. Hills is judged to be well founded and just towards both parties. This very imporevery feature on a larger scale. Since the thirty miles, with an average breadth of four or five miles." It is also capable of exporting annually from 15,000 to 20,000 tons of sugar, if the land were brought under cultivation, whereas at present scarcely one-tenth of that quantity is prepared for shipment. population is estimated at about 7,000 souls, but there is a great and increasing demand for immigration. The few Indian Coolies who have been introduced have soon sickened and died, although "there seems no reason why Coolies should thrive less well at Mayotte than they do at the Mauritius, where every one of them enjoys the climate, makes money, throws off his ancient prejudices; though a Mussulman, drives a pork-butcher's cart; and, though a Hindoo, rears an English-looking wood cottage, plants a garden plot, and may be seen of an evening seated with his wife at the cottage door, dressed in very Englishlooking coat and gown."

Decidedly the most flourishing member of this string of pearls in the Southern Sea is Johanna, and this comparative prosperity is due to the enterprise of an English adventurer, the very type of an English colonist, and one of whom any country might be proud. The island is governed by Sultan Abdullah, whose family have held the chief power in their hands for a hundred years-no mean duration for an Eastern and barbarous dynasty. The capital is named Mootzamoodoo, though better known to strangers as Johanna, and stands on the north coast. The want of a convenient harbour is supplied by a safe and excellent roadstead, with a fine stream of fresh water close at hand. The inhabitants are about 12,000 in number, and appear to be a mixed race from different points on the African coast, speaking a mongrel tongue, but using the Arabic character to denote all sounds and dialects, whether European, African, or Asiatic. In religiou the Johannese are tolerant Mahomedans, and are tolerably free from the semi-civilised vice of drunkenness, but not remarkable for their chastity. The climate is healthy, and the soil a deep rich loam, formed of volcanic detritus and decayed vegetable matter. Both the cotton-plant and the sugar-cane may be cultivated with marked success on the lowland, while the coffee-plant thrives luxuriantly at a height of two to three thousand feet above the sea. Among the native products of the island may be enumerated cocoa-nut trees, iron wood, the Neem, the Syrus, the Banian, tamarind, orange, guava, sago-palm, plantain, and a species of india-rubber tree, besides a vast profusion of herbs and flowering plants. The trade has hitherto been very small, and last year the principal export consisted in some 400 tons of sugar grown upon Mr. Sunley's estate of Pomony Harbour, on the south-western angle of the island.

severance, of the Anglo-Saxon organising a com-munity of semi-savages. Mr. Sunley came originally to the Mozambique with some command of capital, and with the intention of operating largely in the markets of its neighbourhood. He was accompanied markets of its neighbourhood. He was accompanied or followed by four associates, of whom two died, a third was lost at sea, and the fourth broke his back. His correspondents in London failed; his agents at Noss Bé and Zanzibar operated for him at a loss. power of attorney was used to his detriment in the Mauritius; and the Portuguese authorities on the East Coast of Africa seized his schooner on plea of its having entered Angoxa. His stores at Johanna were burned down. Eventually, Mr. Sunley found himself on the Island of Johanna (then in a politically unsettled condition), without capital, and without any associate or European assistance. Nothing out any associate or European assistance. Nothing daunted, he set to work, consolidated the Governdaunted, he set to work, consolidated the Government, explored the island, obtained a grant for a period of forty years of his present estate at Pomony; cleared it, organised five hundred men, who had never laboured before, into sugar-planters and boilers; put up his own sugar-mill; erected his own steam engine; taught a Caffre boy to drive it; learned himself while teaching others the art of sugar-growing; built his own carts; broke in his own cattle; reared his own factory and dwelling-houses; cut his own roads; surveyed his own estate; discovered and land-marked his port. dwelling-houses; cut his own roads; surveyed his own estate; discovered and land-marked his port. This was not all, a small currency was required for the payment of his labourers. He bought up the copper currency at Mozambique, and restamped it in Johanna. Silver he found in the French dollar; and these he cut into quarters for the shilling cur-rency. He would not distil rum, nor allow tobacco to be grown. But he laboured early and late with to be grown. But he laboured early and late with his own hands to instil regular and orderly habits into his savage followers. He attended carefully to their complaints, both physical and mental. The results of years of this heavy labour are now visible in a most thriving estate; a contented, sober, and healthy-looking body of five hundred negroes; and healthy-looking body of five hundred negroes; and a heavy harvest of splendid cane, realising from £28 to £30 per ton at the Mauritius market. Nothing could be more beautiful than the situation of the estate itself—on the right the bright sea breaking white over the coral reefs, far out in the calm and purple sheening mass—a rocky, indented coast, green with various shrubs and trees, and cheerful with multitudes of white and pink convolvuli—then a waving breadth of heavy laden cane, sloping up to the lower hills, and here and there intersected by romantic ravines, down which sparkle the clearest streams that prattle to you of home—above, clearest streams that prattle to you of home-above and to your left, rise successive and loftier spurs leafy green quite over their ridges, and down their tangled valley folds. You look still deeper inland, and the peaks rise now abrupt and fantastic; now in fair and stately proportions; yet always green and the peaks rise now abrupt and tantastic; now in fair and stately proportions; yet always green even to their lottiest peaks (of nearly six thousand feet in height), with the foliage of many climates. Truly, it is a spot of surpassing beauty."

EAST INDIAN IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

The directors of this company state in their report, that immediately after the receipt of the contract-deed from India a printed copy will be forwarded to each shareholder. The right of the Government to purchase the works contracted for by the company will not accrue until after the expiration of twenty years from the first payment made for irrigation supplied. In many other respects, also, the provisions of the contract will be found highly satisfactory. The directors state that the information afforded at this early period by Lieutenant-colonel Rundall, the company's chief engineer, is insufficient to disclose the final character of the intended arrangements. but that it verifies the feasibility and the value of the Orissa project as a means of profitable investment. He expresses a hope that he will be able to furnish a complete description of the scheme, with detailed plans and estimates of considerable portions early in 1863; and he has requested and received authority to proceed at once with the preparation of materials, and the construction of offices, workshops, &c., while s considerable quantity of machinery, tools, and stores are now in course of manufacture in this country, and will be despatched in time to arrive at the scene of operations in June next, so that when actual construction has been commenced rapid progress may be reasonably expected. The directors gladly availed themselves of an opportunity to secure the temporary services of Major-General Sir Arthur Cotton, and he embarked for India on the 27th of last month with rating there with the chief engineer in the final | a considerable degree among the lower orders of determination of the scheme and of the plans to be recommended for adoption. By this arrangement the company will have the benefit of the joint consultation and judgment of two engineer officers of superior ability and special experience in the construction of hydraulic works in India before expenditure is incurred in actual construction. The Governor-General of India and the Lieut. Governor of Bengal, in whose presidency the company will operate, as well as the other authorities at Calcutta, and the local officers in Orissa, have expressed themselves sincerely desirous of rendering all the encouragement and help in their power to further the objects of the company, and have already given every facility to and acted with great consideration towards its representatives. With reference to the probable extent of the supply of labour, the directors state that already a number of the principle zemindars, or landed proprietors (several paying as much as from £4,000 to £5,000 each to Government annually as land-tax or rent), have expressed themselves ready and anxious to enter into contracts for the construction of those portions of the works which will pass through or affect their estates; and one has undertaken to supply 10,000 coolies or labourers whenever required to do so. With a view to render the objects and purposes of the company as widely known as possible, measures of a commendable nature have been adopted by the company's manager and chief engineer, aided by the commissioner and the collectors of the districts. Such shareholders as might desire to pay upon their shares in advance of future calls can now avail themselves of this privilege in such manner as may suit their convenience, as any portion of a share will be received. Upon a review of the proceedings which have taken place, the directors feel that they are warranted in con gratulating the shareholders upon the progress made during the very short period available for active operations, as also upon the present satisfactory position of the company and its promising future; and they likewise feel justified in express ing a hope that an early commencement of construction may be made upon a section of the intended works. A sum of £103,240 had been received on the 30th of September last on account of capital, and the expenditure in England up to the same date, and in India up to the 31st of August last, amounted to the sum of £13,111, leaving a balance of £90,129 in hand.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Specie to the East.-The specie taken by the Bombay mail steamer Massilia, on the 27th, amounted to £459,248, of which £1,500 in gold was for Alexandria, and the remainder, £48,198 in gold and £409,550 in silver, was for Bombay.

QUICK PASSAGE.—We are informed that the auxiliary screw-steamer Calcutta, belonging to the East India and London Shipping Company (Limited), arrived at Madras early in the morning of the 21st of October, being fifty-nine days out. She left the Channel on the 17th of August, arriving at the Cape of Good Hope on the 19th of September, in thirty-three days. She left there on the 24th of September, and made an unparalleled run of twenty-six days to Madras; thus performing the whole of the passage in the unprecedented short time of fifty nine days. This is the shortest voyage that has ever been recorded, and a fact that will prove to our readers that the inconvenience of a long sailing passage round the Cape can be avoided without the necessity of an overland journey, and shippers have now the opportunity afforded them of getting delivery of their goods in two months, a boon which they have never obtained by this route before.

LEPROSY IN THE EAST INDIES, &c .- The inquiry which has been recently instituted by the directions of the Duke or Newcastle into the prevalence of this sad and loathsome disease in our colonies in different regions of the globe, is about to be extended, at the suggestion of his Grace, to the several Presidencies of India, where the

the native population. Most of the countries in the East continue to be infested with it to a greater or less extent, generally speaking in proportion to the physical and moral degradation of their people. In China it is very common; there are numerous leper-houses in most of the large towns. In the Philippine Islands, in Borneo, Java, and, indeed, in almost all the islands of the Indian Ocean, including Madagascar, Mauritius, and the Isle of Bourbon, the disease is frequent among the coloured and black races; and the same remark holds true of most of the islands on the west coast of Africa-among the Cape de Verd, Canary, and Madeira groups; also of the Azores, and even of Iceland and of the shores of Greenland. The geographical extent of the disease is, perhaps, greater than that of any other like disease. As it is understood that Lord Russell has intimated his willingness that the interrogatories on the subject, prepared by the College of Physicians at the request of the Colonial Secretary, should be transmitted to all her Majesty's Consuls abroad, with the view of eliciting information from foreign countries as well as from all British possessions in different regions of the globe, there is good reason to expect that the inquiry will prove highly-interesting and instructive, and may lead to many salutary suggestions bearing on the hygienic and social condition of the peoples among whom the disease prevails.

MR. CHISHOLM ANSTEY .- This gentleman, who, it will be remembered, was suspended from his office of Attorney-General of Hong Kong by Sir John Bowring, has, after a long inquiry and at the end of a lengthened correspondence, just received the amende honorable from the present Colonial Secretary. The important paragraph of the Duke of Newcastle's letter is as follows :- " I am directed to inform you that the Duke of Newcastle is perfectly ready to express his opinion that the truth of the charges, of which you were the principal author, brought against Mr. Caldwell, before the Commission of Inquiry of 1858, has been substantially established by the recent investigation before the Executive Council, so far as the culpability of his connection with Ma-Chow-Wong is concerned; consequently, that it cannot now be said, in the words of the letter addressed to you by order of Governor Sir John Bowring, that none of those charges have been satisfactorily proved.' His Grace will go further, and say that in forcing on a public inquiry into that officer's conduct you did in that respect render a material service to her Majesty's Government and the colony of Hong Kong."

CRUISE OF THE "ARIEL."-Captain Oldfield, of her Majesty's steam sloop Ariel, who has been cruising off the West Coast of Africa, succeeded in capturing no less than twenty-six slave dhows within the last twelve months. Several had slaves on board—one fifty-four, one eighty-two, and two others 100 each. One, which was taken with a cargo of slaves on board in March last, at the very entrance of Zanzibar harbour (the Sultan of Zanzibar having given authority to search suspected vessels), produced a pass from the Sultan, but his Highness decided that she had no claim to his protection, having been guilty of violating his ordinance prohibiting the slave trade and the treaty with Great Britain; she was therefore adjudged in open durbar a lawful prize, and the negroes were sent to Seychelles, and tha crew distributed among vessels bound out of the Sultan's dominions. In the following month the Ariel chased a dhow, which made for the land near Brava, and the crew escaped and left the vessel drifting into the surf with nearly 100 slaves on board. Her position rendered it impossible to remove them, and the boats of the Ariel were in the most imminent peril, that commanded by Captain Oldfield being swamped, and the crew with difficulty saved, while the shore was lined with armed men, who with muskets and spears attacked the boats and such of the slaves as attempted to make for them. The dhow soon afterwards became a total wreck. The slaves escaped to the shore, where they were seized by the armed men, apparently Somali Arabs, and the dhow being deserted the purpose of proceeding to Orissa, and of co-ope- malady is known to exist in various districts to her destruction was completed by shelling her. She appeared to be from 150 tons to 175 tons burden. The casualties in the course of the cruise seem to have been but few. In one instance a lieutenant of the Ariel having seized a dhow, from which the crew had just escaped by swimming to shore, placed a prize crew and native pilot on board, and proceeded to sea with the dhow in company; but when within thirty miles of Zan zibar the dhow, without any assignable cause, unless treacherously scuttled by the native pilot sank, with the loss of two of the prize crew and the pilot himself. In another instance a sublieutenant seized a dhow at anchor in port Chak-Chak, with a crew of fifteen Arabs and six slaves. and it being necessary to follow another vessel the dhow was left in charge of a single seaman, the only hand that could be spared. Unfortunately, on returning, the dhow was found deserted by the crew, who had carried away the slaves, and our seaman was found mortally wounded. An encounter took place in Mombas harbour, in April, Lieutenants Clark and Fellowes, cruising in the Ariel's cutter and pinnace, with a tender in charge, having put in for water, leaving the tender outside. Observing a large dhow at anchor in the harbour, they went alongside, and asked for water, which was refused. By another dhow, of Buddeen build, water was again refused. They boarded the latter dhow, and observed that she was a slaver, and had evidently recently landed a cargo of slaves. The two lieutenants landed, and informed the Governor of Mombas of the fact of the Buddeen dhow being a slaver, whereupon the Governor accorded them his permission to seize her. Accordingly, about 4 P.V., they proceeded in their boats to seize her, when they found that since their first visit she had been run ashore. A heavy fire was opened on the boats, both from the dhow and from the shore. The officers, however, succeeded in boarding the dhow, but were not able to get her off in consequence of the tide falling fast. While on board, they had an opportunity of seeing that she had a slave deck and other slave fittings. They then returned to their boats, and were pulling back, when, without cause or provocation, the large dhow before mentioned opened a heavy fire upon the boats, and wounded Lieutenant Fellowes and two of his men. As the dhow was obviously strongly manned and armed, the officers did not think it prudent to risk their men's lives by attacking her, more especially as she received a strong reinforcement from the shore. They, therefore, stood out to rejoin the tender, on board which was a 12-pounder. That gun was transferred to the pinnace, and at halfpast two on the following morning, when the tide had risen sufficiently to float the slaver, the boats again made for the harbour. On entering it they found that the slaver had been moved up the river into a position so close to the town that she could not be attacked with out injury to private dwellings, and probably imperiling the Protestant Mission Station. officers then made for the dhow which had fired upon them on the previous evening, in order to take possession of her as a pirate, when she again opened a heavy fire on the boats, which was replied to with the 12-pounder. After ten minutes' engagement some of the pirate crew were seen to leap overboard, and others, including the wounded, to escape in their boat. On boarding her the officers found her deck stained with blood but none of the crew, dead or alive. Some swords and muskets were found lying about, the rest of her armament having apparently been carried off in the boat by the crew. The dhow had neither papers nor colours, and appeared by her build to belong to some of the Persian Gulf piratical hordes. The boats towed out the dhow, but at the entrance of the harbour she struck upon a sunken reef, and was set on fire and abandoned, the boats having lost their anchors in trying to get her off. From information subsequently obtained there is reason to believe that the dhow was the Futhel Khaire, of Sohar, in the Persian Gulf, and that she had five of her crew mortally wounded in the engagement with the Ariel's boats. She measured 80 feet in length, 17 feet in beam, 12 feet in depth of hold, and had a poop measuring 25 feet in length, 13 feet in beam, working is to be adopted.

and 5 feet in depth. She was of 190 tons burden .- Times.

TNDIA OUTFITS.-NOTICE.

Thresher's India Tweed Suits. Thresher's Kashmir Flannel Shirts, Thresher's India Gauze Waistcoats,

THESHET'S IROIA GARZE WAISCOORTS, were invented and are manufactured exclusively by THRESHER and GLENNY, and for which the International Exhibition Medal of 1862; the Exhibition Medal of 1861; and the Madras Midal of 1850 have been awarded.—The high character and universal approval of these articles have led to number of inferior iniciations, all of which are advertised under similar, but triflingly altered names, and, therefore, Messirs. Thresher and GLENNY feel it necessary to announce that the India Garze Waisteoata, the Kashmir Flaunel Shirts, and the India Tweed Suits can only be procured at their establishment.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, OR PEARL DENTIFRICE,

OR PEARL DENTIFRICE,
A white powder, is composed of the choicest and most recherche ingredients of the Oriental herbal. It extirpates all tartarous adhesions to the teeth, and ensures a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface. Its autiseptic and antiscorbute properties exercise a highly be neficial and salutary influence; they arrest the further progress of the decay of the teeth, induce a healthy action of the goins, and cause them to assume the brightness and colour indicative of perfect soungness. The breath also attains a grateful purity and fragrance.
Price 28. 9d. per box,
Caution.—The words "Rowlands' Odonto" are on the label, and "A. Rowland and Sons, 20. Hatton-zarden," on the Government Stamp. Sold by them, and by chemists and perfumers.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acadity of the Stomach, Hearthurn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Midd Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. Combined with the Acadulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effertescing Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Scasons and, above all, in Hot Chimates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found ligally benefic al.

Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) only by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

PRITCHARD'S DANDELION, CAMO-MILE, RHUBARB, and GINGER PHLIS.—This peculiar preparation of Dandelson acts particularly on the over, thus avoiding the use of increurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a sluggish state of that organ, or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well known stomachic efficacy of camonide, risubarb, and ginger, renders these pills the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a safe remedy they will find this medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all persons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience.

Prepared by W. Pitchard. Apothecary, 65, Charing-cross, London, in bottles, 1s. 1gd., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all Medicine Vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS ARE THE BEST PURI-HOLLOWAY'S PILLS ARE THE BEST PURIgases, or any other noxious matters. They strike at the root of fever, diphtheria, and branchitis, over which they exercise the most curative and salutary powers. In common colds, sore throats, and influenza, these Phils will check at once the more formidable symptoms by repressing all inflammatory tendencies, by giving regularity to the circulation, and steadying the hurried and exhausting respiration so distressing to the patient, and so likely to lay the foundation for serious diseases. Through the winter occasional doses of Holloway's Pills will prevent the lodgement of impurities in the system, and render attacks of throat and chest complaints less frequent and less dangerous,

"The 'Channel Islands' is an excellent book of its class—well conceived, well written, well illustrated, well printed. It is the produce of many hands, and every hand a good one. Nearly every thing which a man can desire to know about Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark—about their history, Geography, and natural history—Professor Ansted and Dr. Latham have contrived to tell. Altogether the contents of the volume are as varied and interesting as a well-sustained drama; and to this drama no more graceful and picturesque scenery could have been furnished than we find in the illustrations so profusely given by artists worthy of the subject and equal to their worth—Paul Naftel and M. The result is not a merely handsome volume of the old 'Keepsake' style, made to sell and be looked at, but a book of rare merit and value, made for instruction and delight, to be read with pleasure and to be referred to with profit."—Athenaum, Nov. 15, 1862.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 12th November brings sad accounts of the health of her Majesty's 93rd Highlanders. Four officers-Lieut.-Colonel Middleton, Captain Presgrave. Ensign Drysdale, and Assistant-Surgeon Hope have fallen victims to cholera. The resiment, however, has since been marched to the other side of the Indus, and the ravages of that terrible scourge have been stayed.

The latest intelligence from Afghanistan is of a very satisfactory character. Owing to the friendly offices of the Persian envoy, preliminary terms of peace have been arranged between the venerable Ameer and his refractory nephew. This is the best possible commentary on the gloomy vaticinations of the upcountry journals, panic-stricken by visious of Turcomans in Agra and Cossacks in Calcutta.

On the 1st of November her Majesty's effigy superseded the symbols of the old Company's sovereignty on the silver and copper coinage of British India. And on the same day the Money Order system in connection with the Civil Paymaster's office was introduced as an experimental measure.

phoenix-like, from the ashes of Begum attempt will be made to induce captains to Sumroo's palace. It is now about to open a waive their right to succeed to the senior list able and successful manager, Mr. Parry. This will make the fourth branch—the others being at Mussoorie, Allahabad, and Lucknow.

The Commander-in-Chief has at length succeeded in tearing himself from the dangerous delights of the Indian Capua, and has commenced his march to Agra. It is extremely improbable that his Excellency will ever again revisit the scene of his recent eccentricities, and his best friends must acknowledge that the invigorating air of the hills has proved too strong a stimulant for the susceptible veteran.

A meeting was held in Calcutta, on the 6th Nov., with the Viceroy in the chair, for the re lief of the distress in Lancashire, but with what result we are as yet unable to state. There can be no doubt, however, that the European residents, and not a few of the natives, will liberally respond to his lordship's appeal. The future prospects of the Indian Navy continue to be discussed in the local journals. and there appears to be a very general belief that the officers of that meritorious service will be liberally dealt with. A similar impression prevails in this country, and it is currently stated that a final despatch either has been or will be forwarded to the Indian Government before the close of the present year, calculated to satisfy every reasonable expectation. That the Indian Navy will be absolutely and completely abolished is doubted by no one, but it is whispered in well-informed circles that a Marine Service will be instituted at Bombay similar to that in existence on the Bengal side. It is certain that such a measure has been strongly recommended by the Indian Government, which has also pointed out the necessity of providing floating batteries for the defence of Bombay harbour. Retiring pension scales have been put forth, "on the best authority," but as they differ widely from one another their authenticity may be fairly questioned. Striking an average, however, we may not be far wrong in estimating a captain's pension at between four and five hundred pounds, and a commander's at nearly the same. The lieutenants will, of course, vary according to their rank, from two to three hundred. Mates will, probably, receive something over, and midshipmen some thing under, one hundred per annum; while pursers will naturally rank with lieutenants. Pensions, it is understood, will be commutable, either in whole or in part, and honorary promotions will accompany retirement from ser-The Delhi Bank appears to have risen, vice. It is also commonly stated that an branch at Calcutta, under the auspices of its | pension of £800 a year, by offering them immediate advantages. It is only fair to our readers as well as to ourselves to repeat that we do n t give this slight outline as in any way official, but simply as the result of many inquiries in many quarters.

BENGAL.

SIR HUGH ROSE AND THE CLUB.

From Lieut. col. H. A. Sarel, for Military Secre tary to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, to the Secretary of the Bengal United Service Club. Head-quarters, Simla, Oct. 13, 1862.

-The Commander-in-Chief in India has seen, with the greatest regret, the proceedings of the committee and of the civil members of the Bengal United Service Club, of which his Excellency has the honour to be the president, towards a member of the Club, Lieut.-col. Priestley, an officer of unblemished character, who reckons nearly thirty years' excellent service, and who has displayed gallantry in the field.

Lieut. Col. McLeod, commanding, during the illness of Lieut. Col. Priestley, the 42nd Royal Highlanders, the Black Watch, a regiment whose name is never mentioned in the army but with veneration, has addressed to his Excellency a letter of complaint against "the harsh, unfair, and undeserved treatment which Lieut.-Col. Priestley has received at the hands of the Secretary, and some of the members of the club, treatment equally painful to himself and to the regiment under his command;" and Lieut.-Col. McLeod adds that this treatment is "the more inexplicable when it is remembered that Lieut.-Col. Priestley acted throughout this painful affair with the perfect propriety of an officer and a gentleman;" an opinion in which the Commander-in-Chief concurs, and of which the proofs, in justice to Lieut.-Col. Priestley, will be made as public as his expulsion.

Since the receipt of Lieut.-colonel McLeod's letter the civil members have expelled Lieut.colonel Priestley from the Club-a measure which clubs never resort to, except in cases where members have been proved to be guilty of degrading conduct.

Neither the committee nor the civil members of the Club have ever communicated, in any way whatever, with, or have consulted, Sir Hugh Rose as to the measures to be adopted, with respect to the very distressing occurrence between Lieut.-colonel Priestlev and Major FitzGerald, and the circumstances connected with it.

As president of the Club, his Excellency ventures to think that his opinion should have been heard on a question which so vitally affected the institution of which he is the head; more particularly as the committee invited the vicepresidents, and every member of the Club, to give an opinion on the subject.

When the committee published their circular, in regard to the measures to be adopted towards Lieut. col. Priestley, the Commander-in-Chief had not even heard of the occurrence; if he had been consulted, in his capacity as president of the Club, before the committee had offered Lieut.-col. Priestley the alternative of an ignominious retirement, and before the issue of the circular calling the general meeting to take into consideration his expulsion, would have used the language best suited to so painful an affair, that of conciliation, he would have offered advice which, if followed, he feels the conviction would have upheld the harmony of the Club, and have averted the present deplorable scandal.

Under these circumstances, his Excellency feels that it is impossible that he can continue to be a member or President of the Club; and, therefore, to his extreme regret, he desires me to request you to have the goodness to withdraw his name from the books of the Bengal United Service Club .- I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

H. A. SAREL, Lieut. Col., For Mily. Secy. to H. E. the Commander in Chief.

From J. A. CRAWFORD, Esq., Hony. Secy., Bengal United Service Club, to the Mily, Secy. to H. E. the Commander-in-Chief.

CALCUTTA, October 22, 1862. Sir,—I am requested, by the Committee of Management of the Bengal United Service Club, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the Excellency the Commander in Chief feels at to be | Rs. 850, and the Assistant Secretary Rs. 700, impossible that he can continue to be a member or President of the Club, and therefore desires to withdraw his name from its books.

The committee have received this intimation of his Excellency's determination to disconnect himself from the Club with much regret.

The committee desire me to explain that the only reason why the circular, in regard to Col. Priestley's infringement of the rules of the Club, was not sent to the Commander-in-Chief was that his Excellency is not a member of the Club, the presidentship-which his Excellency held-being a purely honorary and exoflicio distinction, carrying with it neither membership, duties, responsibilities, nor privilege of voting. The case of the vice-presidents is otherwise, as only members can be chosen to hold that position.

The committee, however, request that you will inform Sir Hugh Rose that, in accordance with his Excellency's wish, his name has been removed from the books of the Club as president.

The Committee received, with much regret, the expression of the opinion entertained by the Commander-in-Chief of the acts of themselves, and of the Club at large. They are, however, supported by the knowledge that, with the exception of four officers of the Head Quarters' Staff, all the members of the Club, of both services, who expressed an opinion-nearly 200 in number,-firmly and unreservedly upheld the acts of the Committee; it follows that the Commanderin-Chief is mistaken in attributing the course adopted by the Club to the civil members alone. It is true that the desire to avoid even the appearance of opposition to the officially expressed wish of the Commander-in-Chief induced the military members of the Club to place a restraint on their inclinations, and to refrain from attending the meeting which removed Lieutenant-Colonel Priestley from the list of members.

The Committee, therefore, whilst in no way admitting the justice of any of the objections taken by the Commander-in-Chief, and satisfied that the course they have throughout pursued has been marked by mcderation, fairness, and consideration, refrain, through a feeling of respect for the high position occupied by Sir Hugh Rose, from that discussion of his Excellency's views which your letter appears to invite.-I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

J. A. CRAWFORD, Honv. Sec. Bengal United Service Club.

THE NORTH-WEST SECRETARIAT.

A short time since the Lieutenant Governor of the North-West Provinces brought to the notice of the Viceroy the inadequacy of the salaries at present drawn by the Secretary, Under Secretary, and Assistant-Secretary of the Government of the N. W., whether looked upon relatively to the amount of work done and the experience required, or as compared with the salaries enjoyed by the corresponding officers in the Bengal Presidency. In support of this complaint stone also brought forward the recommendations made by Mr. Ricketts when engaged in revising the civil salaries and establishments. It seems that Mr. Ricketts, after giving it as his opinion that the work in the Secretariat of the North-West Provinces was very nearly equal to that of Bengal, proposed that Rs. 62,000 per annum should be allowed to the Bengal Secretariat, with a proviso that no one officer should draw more than Rs. 36,000 per annum, and Rs. 55,000 to the North-western Secretariat, with a proportionate individual limit of Rs. 32,000 per annum. On a review of these recommendations the Government of India sanctioned an allowance of Rs. 66,000 per annum for Bengal, at the same time allotting Rs. 32,000 to the N.W. Secretary, and Rs. 24,000 for two Under-Under the present arrangements Secretaries. the Rs. 66,000 allowed to Bengal is divided as under :-

... Rs. 3,000 per mensem. Junior Secretary... , 1,500 Under Secretary... , 1,000

while in the North-West the Secretary draws to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the while in the North-West the Secretary draws salaries appertaining to permanent appoint.

13th instant, stating that for reasons assigned his Rs. 2500 per mensem, the Under-Secretary ments. Such is the decision of Government in i.e., Rs. 6,400 less than the sum proposed by Mr. Ricketts, and Rs. 7,400 less that drawn by the Government of Bengal. These proposals were made by Mr. Ricketts after a most careful analysis of the work performed in the two offices, and were accepted by the Government of India after careful consideration and scrutiny. The Lieutenant-Governor of the North West does not dispute these facts, but he has forwarded to the government a statement intended to show the proportion in which the work required to be performed by his Secretariat has increased since the date of Mr. Ricketts' proposal. According to this statement the description given by Mr. Ricketts of the mode in which business was transacted in the North-West Secretariat before the mutiny is no longer applicable to the system now pursued, and so far from want of zeal being manifested, the Lieutenant-Governor adds that he has on more than one occasion expressed in writing his opinion that all the assistance within their power has been afforded by the officers constituting the staff of the Secretariat. The income-tax and the new currency, as well as the new police, had also brought additional work with them, in addition to which the work formerly performed by the Military Secretary has fallen heavily on the civil department. Mr. Edmonstone admitted that these causes had also arisen in Bengal, but there were. in his opinion, no additional ones which at all warranted the discrepancy between the salaries. This, according to the statement, was more marked in the cases of the under and assistant secretaries, the salaries of which offices should, Mr. Edmonstone argued. be fixed at such a rate as to induce men of ability and standing to remain in them after such a period of service as would entitle them to the salaries of joint magistrates of the first and second gradesi. c., Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 700 per mensem respectively. Under such circumstances we agree with the Lieut.-governor that it is hardly fair to expect men to continue willingly in such posts when they suffer a direct pecuniary loss. They would naturally wish to resign, and so the Government would lose the services of trained and experienced men in an office where, as Mr. Edmonstone contends, experience and training are especially needed. The work required from these officers necessitates close and constant attention as well as a larger share of knowledge, and should therefore ensure them a greater remuneration and a higher position; and the Lieut, governor therefore suggested that the salaries of the secretariat should be revised as under :-

Secretary ... Under Secretary ... ... Rs. 32,000 per annum. 14,100 • • • Asst. Secretary 9,600

Such was the substance of the Lieut.-Governor's application, and in reply to it the Government of India has, we learn, made a partial concession. With regard to the salary of the Secretary to the Government of the N.W.P., the Governor-general has, we believe, refused to sanction the proposed increase of Rs. 2,000 per annum, on the ground that the salary of that official was already equal to that of a civil and sessions judge, thus giving the Lieut.-Governor the whole range of the service from the grade of commissioner of division, the salary of which appointment was Rs. 3,166 per mensem, from whence to choose an officer for the post of secretary. In addition to this the Viceroy ruled that the proposed increased pay being less than the salary of a commissioner, would not enable the Lieut .- governor to retain the services of an officer entitled to that promotion. With regard to the under and assistant secretaries. however, an increase has been sanctioned to the extent proposed by the Lieut, governor, inasmuch as the grant of such increase is supported by the recorded opinion of the supreme Government in favour of allowing Rs. 24,000 per annum for junior secretaries. But at the same time this increase will not, we believe, come in force till the 1st of April, 1863, in order to avoid what the Government considers highly objectionable—i. e., a special grant for the purpose of increasing the matter; and in the face of the late serious efforts at reduction, we can afford to rest satisfied that it has been well and wisely given after due consideration of a subject on which the best information is at their command.—Englishman.

SIR SYDNEY COTTON AND THE PARSEES.
To Major Gen. Sir Sydney Cotton, Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath, commanding division, Peshawur.

Honored Sir,—We, the undersigned Parsee merchants and residents of the Camp of Peshawur, cannot allow you, Sir Sydney Cotton, to depart without first testifying to you our sincere regret

It is now nearly nine years since you came amongst us to command the troops at this, the gate of India, and surrounded as we are by turbulent and warlike tribes, our homes and property have never once been molested, which state of peace we are fully sensible has been entirely due to your watchful care.

We have always met with your kindest support and patronage, for which we most heartily return you our humble thanks.

We shall never forget either when the mutiny (in the year 1857) of the army devastated other provinces how secure we felt while you, Sir Sydney Cotton, were amongst us.

In leaving us for your home, we beg to assure you that our entire community regret your departure, and wish you a happy and prosperous voyage, with long life in your native land.

Your sudden and early departure being unknown to us, we are unable to show you our admiration and regret in a more substantial form, and, therefore, we hope you will accept these expressions of our gratitude to you, though we are fully aware they convey but a poor idea of our feelings.

We have the honour to remain,

Honoured Sir,
Your most obedient and humble servants,
(Signed,) JEHANGEER and Co.

Camp, Peshawur, 17th October, 1862.

From Major General Sir Sydney Cotton, K.C.B., Commanding Peshawur Division.

To Messrs, Jehangeer and Co., Messrs, Cowesjee and Co., and other Parsee Merchants and Residents of Peshawur.

Gentlemen,—I am very proud to receive at your hands this highly complimentary address emanating as it does from the most respectable of all the mercantile community of Peshawur.

Loyal and devoted always to the interests of the British Government, and alive to the requirements of its armies in the field and in quarters, Parsee merchants have proved themselves to be the most enterprising of all, and in countless instances, gentlemen, you, unmindful of your own safety, have rendered the most able and valuable assistance in our campaigns.

In Peshawur you have always been, as a body, most respectable, as you have been useful, to all classes, civil and military, and we entertain for you, therefore, the highest respect.

I feel deeply your warm and affectionate expressions towards myself, and most grateful, 1 assure you, for your wishes.

Go where I may, your address of this day and your general demeanour for years past towards myself and family will not be forgotten.

Gentlemen, I leave you all with feelings of regret, trusting that it may please Almighty God, the Sovereign disposer of the affairs of men, who alone watches over us in times of danger, to preserve you in health, contentment, and happiness, pursuing in security as heretofore your honest and honourable avocations.

I subscribe myself, Gentlemen,

With great respect, your obedient servant,
(Signed) SYDNEY COTTON, Major-General
Commanding the Peshawur Division.

THE RESOURCES OF THE PUNJAB AND CENTRAL ASIA.

It was the declaration of Abufazl, the historian of the Great Akbar, that in the Punjab are to be found the choicest productions of Iran, Turan, and Hindostan. This is no oriental exaggeration, for the Punjab is, more than it has ever been, the market, as it used to be the battle-field, of these countries. From Persia, from furthest China, and from India the choicest goods flow to Umritsur, and there, mingled with the native products of the province, are now exchanged for the cottons, the cutlery and the specie of the Far The report on the Punjab for the past year, while it is a treasury of facts compiled into a most interesting narrative of the whole administration, contains information on the trade of the province and its relations with Central Asia of unusual importance at the present moment. The extension of tea, flax and cotton cultivation; the discoveries of Captain Montgomerie during his heroic survey of Little Thibet; the explorations of Dr. Cleghorn in the wooded ranges of the hills; the opening up of the navigation of the Indus: the extension of the railway from Umritsur towards Mooltan; the general increase of canals and metalled roads; the growing contentment, energy, and intelligence of the agricultural and trading classes, with the increase of specie and rise of prices-all denote rapid progress, and point to a bright future for the land of the five rivers which only internal commotion will mar.

Hitherto saltpetre and oil-seeds have been the only articles of raw produce exported from the Punjab. But nothing more is wanted to throw these into the shade than the facilities for irrigation and cheap transit which are being fast supplied, and English skill and capital. Beginning with the native products of the province, its fertile soil is specially adapted for a surplus growth of wheat and barley, while its hilly slopes are the garden of the indigenous vine. It is no exaggeration to believe that a quarter of a century hence Himalayan wine will be at least as well known as Australian, and that Punjab food-grains will flow down into Hindostan and the Decean to supply the vacuum created by the extended growth of cotton. Thus, we believe, rather than by growing much cotton, will the Punjab take its place as a producer. But even the growth of cotton is extending, if we may judge from the fact that last year the export from Kurrachee rose from £8,569 to £119,197, an increase to which the Indus territories contributed. There are at least half a million of acres under cotton cultivation, yielding 20,000 tons of the cleaned fibre. The Great Sult Range is able to supply Asia with this indispensable commodity. At present only five mines are worked, and they yield an annual revenue of nearly a third of a million sterling. The certificates given to the traders who have paid the regulated price are used as a paper currency. But iron will in time become even more valuable than salt. The magnetic ore, equal to Swedish, abounds close to the Himalayan sanitaria and tea districts, as well as in the Salt Range and in the Afreedee and Mewattee hills. Sixty bars of Kangra iron were declared in England by the first manufacturers to be equal to Yorkshire, and there is only one drawback to its working, which, however, the means of transit will gradually remove-the want of coal. Punjab lignite, even when it can be used for fuel, is found in too small quantities to be of practical value. In Spiti it would be profitable to work the antimony which abounds. There is no reason why the Punjab should not produce as much indigo as the more southerly provinces. Last year, for the first time since 1857, large quantities were exported direct to England, the amount passing through Kurrachee having risen from £36,086 to £140,364 in value. Inferior as the cakes are from the native mode of preparation, the colour is good, and only English supervision is re-quired. This and other dyes produced in Moolan and the Derajat were celebrated in the time of Alexander the Great. A most successful experinent has been made in the growth of flax. The Government grant of a thousand pounds for two vears and the skill of an English agent at Sealkote them in its cultivation and purchases their crops, have already made the Punjab as important to the linen as the rest of India is to the cotton manufacturers of England. Two tons of Goojranwala flax sold in England for upwards of £92, yielding a profit of 47 percent. The "Belfast Indian Flax Association," like the "Manchester Indian Cotton Company," has accordingly been established. But more important than either cotton, indigo, or flax, and for political as well as commercial reasons, is tea, with which the Kohistan and the Kangra Valley are fast being covered. Not only are there some thirty English settlers in that valley engaged in its cultivation, but all the native chiefs have taken it up, no less than 307 having applied for seed last year. We are too apt to look to Europe as the market for Indian tea, forgetting that in India itself and still in more Central Asia, every man would drink tea if the cost of the coarse varieties were as trifling as it promises to become. Burnes tells us the love of the Bokharces for tea is without a parallel. Nothing but the poverty of the people of Cashmere and Ladakh limits their consumption. Feople within a hundred miles of Kangra pay such fabulous prices for the "brick tea" which is brought from China by the caravans of Maimachin and Yarkand, that sea-borne tea has lately been imported through Umritsur. By Leh over the Karakorum range there is a practicable route from the Punjab to Bokhara; and from Peshawur there is an easier, but longer, road to the To the tea planters of the Doon, same place. Almora, and Darjeeling this is a still more important question.

So much for the native products of the Punjab. But the tea, the cloths, and the cutlery which find their way into Central Asia will be more than paid for by the articles given in exchange for them. In the valley of Puga, in Ladak and Chinese Tartary, on the edges and in the shallows of the salt lakes is found the tinkal or borax. Through Rampore and Sultanpore, often over precipitous pathways and inaccessible heights, sheep and goats bring it on their backs to the plains. It sells, unrefined, in Lahore at threepence a pound; and 486 lbs. of the refined article, which cost £5. 17s. 8d. at Kangra, were sold at £7. 9s. in England. But more important than this are the raw silk and rich wool. The former may be yet successfully produced in the submontane districts by Mr. Cope, and we know that in the time of Justinian silk came from Sirland; but at present it is procured almost exclusively from Bokhara, which is so anxious for our tea The silk manufactures at Lahore, Mooltan, and Bhawulpore are most important. Still more valuable are those of the wool, which not only passes from Affghanistan through Khelat and Khogdar to Kurrachee for export, but finds its way to the fair at Rampore from Churmurti in Chinese Tartary. Of this "the quantity is inexhaustible," we are told. The white, drab and dark lavender pushm, or down, found next the skin of the Thibetan goat, sells, for shawls, at seven shillings a pound when cleaned, and that which is produced in the semi-Chinese provinces of Tarian and Kichar, and is exported through Yarkand, is so precious, that the Chief of Cashmere keeps a strict monopoly of the article. The shawlweavers of the Punjab are thus limited to the inferior wool of Chanthan, which they get through Leh, and adulterate with the produce of the sheep of Kirman in the south of Persia. Hence they cannot compete with the Cashmere shawls, which, weighing 71bs., cost on the spot 4300, of which £30 is for material, £100 wages, £50 miscellaneous expenses, and £70 duty. If we look at the coarser wools, the valleys of the Punjab rivers supply grazing grounds unequalled elsewhere, and the authorities have tried to improve the quality by the introduction of Merina rams. A truss of Merino wool, produced in Huzara, was. valued in England at 1s. 6d. a pound.

quired. This and other dyes produced in Mooltan and the Derajat were celebrated in the time of Alexander the Great. A most successful experinent has been made in the growth of flax. The Government grant of a thousand pounds for two years and the skill of an English agent at Sealkote who supplies Riga seed to the peasantry, advises cism is invited to assist by the very fulness and honesty of the report before us. £110,575 was spent on canals in the past year, and we have to chronicle the gratifying fact that not only the Maharajah of Puttialla but several small landholders are about to construct irrigational works on their own account. Roads were carried on, at a cost of £172,778, the most important, for the traffic we speak of, being those in the valley of the Sutley between Simla and the Chinese frontier. The railway has driven the ekkas" off the Lahore and Umritsur road, and 1864 will see it completed the whole length of 218 miles to Shere Shah Ali Ghat on the Chenab at Mooltan, where a flotilla will keep up the communication, between the deserts of Scinde, with the Kotree and Kurachee line. For sixpence at present thousands of natives, of whom nearly half are females, travel thirty two miles. In the first twenty-five days after the line was opened, there were no less than 47,318 passengers. Capital is being raised for the line to Delhi, which is to run nearly parallel to the Trunk Road by Umballa, Loodiana, and Jullundur. Meanwhile steamers make their way up the Indus from Kurrachee to within twelve miles of Peshawur, and where of old only two boatloads of pilgrims for Mecca started from Attock with its nearly completed tunnel, there is now a brisk trade for eight months of the year.

While pathways for commerce with Central Asia are thus being prepared, Captain Montgomerie is extending our knowledge of its most inaccessible spots. He has topographically surveyed Little Thibet, with it's mighty Baltoro and "Beafo ganse " glaciers, the former thirty-four miles long, the latter sixty-four, with a breadth of from one to three miles. Ladak has been triangulated even beyond the Chinese frontier, and the positions of Haule, the chief place of the Cashmere Chief east of Leh, of Adum, the capital of Zyanskar, and the snowy peaks to the south of the Chomoriri Salt Lake, have been fixed. The Puga borax fields, the Upper Indus, and several of the largest salt lakes have been topographically surveyed in spite of the jealous Tartars. Several points in Khagan and to the north of Swat have been fixed, and the survey is spreading in the direction of Chitral, Gilghit and Yasseen. Observations have been taken at points 28,000 feet high. In one year 12,000 square miles have been triangulated, and 14,500 topographically surveyed .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—An upcountry contemporary writes:—"There can be no doubt that the necessity for completely remodelling the system now in force has long been patent, for at present this department is by far the worst managed under Government, not even excepting the Post-office. We hear it stated that the Government seriously entertain the purpose of appointing a commission to report upon the department, and if so, it may be safely asserted that a more important subject, or one affecting public interests to a greater extent, never claimed the attention of a commission."

THE MAHARAJAH OF PUTIALA is earning an enviable reputation as a reformer. He has at a stroke cut away by the roots one of the most monstrous and inhuman customs which prevail among the Khutree sect of Hindoos. Whenever a man dies, the wife must mourn for four years. and during that time maintain a most miserable seclusion; she must not eat in public or uncover her face all that time. With a sentence Putiala has abolished this, and announced that fifteen days shall suffice hereafter as the limit of such barbarous privation. The contagion of this reform has spread to Delhi; the leading people have been encouraged to address the chief for information as to how they should shape their course in an innovation so civilised and so entirely desirable. - Motissilite.

Mr. J. B. ROBERTS, Coroner of Calcutta, and Deputy Superintendent of Police, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Fagan as Junior Magistrate, vacating the latter of the abovenamed offices, but retaining the Coronership.

THE FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT .- Mr. Bernard resigns the Under-Secretarysbip on becoming Judge of the Small Cause Court at Nagpore. Mr. Harrison, Auditor General, is on his way to England in a critical state of health. Mr. Harvey who is officiating for him, will be put on the shelf in May next. Mr. Birch, Deputy Auditor General at Bombay, contemplates taking his pension after the cold weather. Mr. Balmain, Deputy Auditor General of the Punjab, is at Mussourie, on two months' leave, after which he proceeds on duty to Burmah, with the view of inspecting the Treasuries there; and when that is accomplished will relieve Mr. Erskine at Allahabad, who re tires from the service in March on "quarter pen sion," to which he is entitled after fifteen years' service. Mr. Chapman, now officiating at Lahore for Mr. Balmain, goes home on furlough after completing a tour of inspection on which he started yesterday, and will be succeeded in his substantive appointment at Allahabad by Mr. Probyn. Mr. Waterfield is going to Bombay, to act for Mr. Lodwick, Civil Paymaster, who had obtained three months' leave o absence, at the expiration of which time Mr. Waterfield will go home on private affairs Mr. F. Lushington, Deputy Auditor General, Bengal, and Mr. J. L. Lushington who holds the same office in the N. W. Provinces, are both absent in England, from whence Mr. R. Taylor, Civil Paymaster of the Punjub, is expected to return in a few weeks, who will then probably succeed Mr. Chapman as officiating Deputy Auditor and Accountant General in that province, Khetter Mohun Chatterjee, Assistant Civil Paymaster of Bengal, continuing to officiate in the former gentleman's proper appointment. It is supposed on Mr. Harvey's enforced retirement in May, that Mr. F. Lushington, should be then returned, will act for Mr. Harrison as Auditor General, Mr. Mangles being then confirmed as Deputy Auditor General at Madras; and on Mr. Birch's retirement Mr. Sandeman will succeed to the similar office at Bombay. With the exception of Mr. Birch at Bombay, and Mr. Sandeman in Bengal, we believe, no member of the Financial Department performs the duty of the office that rightly belongs to him. - Lahore Chronicle.

RAWUL PINDEE, Oct. 19 .-- You may have heard of a case of murder here, which is rather an extraordinary one. The facts, as far as I can un derstand, are as follows :--- "There were two mar ried sergeants in one of the batteries of artillery their wives fell out. Complaints were made by one of the men, and on the case being brought before the commanding officer, one of the women was sentenced to seven days' cells. On this the husband of the woman sentenced went to his barrack, took down his carbine, and going over to where the other sergeant was, shot him dead. He then returned to his barrack, and having replaced his carbine in its place, went outside and requested to be taken up, as he had just shot his enemy dead. His request was so strange that at first no one believed his story; but the dreadful fact was soon proved beyond a doubt, and he is now in confinement, awaiting his trial for murder. His wife, who had been exceedingly violent, has been lately handed over to the care of the civil authorities, and is in the gaol. The criminal's name is Bolster, and the act which he committed was perpitrated in such a cool determined manner that there seems not the slightest chance of his The escaping the punishment he has earned." cold weather here has at last set in, bu not six days ago it was anything but pleasant morning or mid-day. There is a talk of a grand party being given to General Cotton, who is en route for England .- Englishman.

THE SALOOMBUR EXPEDITION.—According to the Agra Journal, if a force is obliged to move out against Saloombur it has been decided to send the following:—The Rajpootana Siege Train, 2nd class, and Engineer Park from Neemuch, 2nd Bombay Cavalry; 72nd Highlanders from Mhow; Wing 106th Regiment; 13th Native Infantry; Meywar Bheel Corps. This force is strong enough to overawe and prevent any attempt at opposition.

KATMANDOO, Oct. 17.—I have little or no news to give you from this dull part of the world. Several salutes of heavy guns were fired from the ramparts the other day, on the occasion of the birthay of H. H. the Maharajah Dhiraje of Nepaul, and on every side was heard the sounds of tomtoms and other barbarous instruments celebrating the event. The parties who lately conspired against the life of the minister, and tried to gain over the Ghoorkha Government to their assistance, have all been captured, and are now in close confinement, pending trial. The weather is at present delightfully cold.

STEAMERS FROM CALCUTTA TO BOMBAY .tender of the Burmah Steam Navigation Company, of Calcutta, for a line of coasting steamers from Calcutta to Bombay touching at such ports as Beypore, has at last been accepted by the Government of India, and the great scheme we recently sketched is complete. It will now be possible to sail in the steamers of this company from Singapore to Bushire, touching at every intermediate port on the coast. Madras will thus be con-nected with Bombay by railway to Beypore and by steamers thence to the Western capital. The new French lines of steamers from Calcutta and Hong Kong to Marseilles are also at last a fact, the first having left the French port. The rates for passengers and goods will be published immediately, but are not likely, we understand, to be much below those of the P. and O. Company. The steamers, however, will offer a new convenionce to the public on this side of India, since they will leave so as to give Calcutta three mails a month to Marseilles. And the result of competition must ultimately benefit the public. - Friend of India.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITIES. — The undermentioned are the successful applicants for Civil Service Annuities on the 1st of November, 1862:—J. I. Harvey, Esq.; T. Sandya, Esq.; G. F. Harvey, Esq.; C. T. Davidson, Esq.; Hon. G. F. Edmonstone; E. E. Woodcock, Esq.; E. De Latour, Esq.; A. Littledalc, Esq. (R.); F. A. Lushington, Esq. (R.); and F. B. Gubbins, Esq. (R.).

ACCIDENT TO SIR HUGH ROSE.—His Excellency the Commander in-Chief very nearly met with a serious accident the other day. In riding from Simla to Nurkunda, as he was turning a corner of the road where the "khud" is very precipitous, he suddenly came upon a drove of mules. His horse, excited, reared and fell back on his rider, most fortunately in the centre of the road; had it been against the parapet nothing could have saved him. His Excellency received no greater injury than being a good deal shaken and bruised WASTE LANDS .- We (Friend of India) are glad to be able to assure applicants for waste lands in the North-West that the 18th rule, which gives the auction purchaser possession subject to any future legislation regarding the claims of third parties, is more ominous in appearance than reality. The rule simply embodies one of the most objectionable paragraphs in Sir C. Wood's despatch, but as a matter of fact the claims of third parties, whenever they exist, are already always disposed of satisfactorily before the sale. The draft of the Bill on the subject, ready to be laid before the Imperial Legislature two weeks hence, provides for the trial of such claims, but the clause is formal. The Bill is a very short one. We regret that the honourable Mr. Edmonstone should provide in it for a road and chowkedaree and not an educational cess. The question had been raised by Sir Charles Wood whether the last cess is not a tax on imperial revenue. Whatever may be the theoretical decision on this point all three cesses are in the same position, and should either be all inserted in or all left out of the Bill. If they are all purely local taxes freeholds will always be subject to them, and no legal enactment is required for one more than for another.

SUDDER ADAMLUT JUDGES.—His Excellency the Governor-general notifies that the judges of the Sudder Adamlut, in the North-western Provinces, shall take rank, in accordance with former usage, immediately above Civilians of the First Class.

DARJEELING, Oct. 24 .- The Lieutenant-Governor and staff and the general of the division have just arrived here. I believe the great question of our waste lands will be settled before he (the Lieutenant Governor) leaves us. Mr. Beadon is at once taken up with these hills. He is living with Mr. Barnes, in the house that was the property of the late Sir Thomas Turton. It is to be hoped that Mr. Beadon will inquire how the cart road has been so neglected. I am informed that in all this month not more than a 100 feet has been done. Coolies are getting six rupees a month, and overseers are making thousands. A ball is to be given to him on Monday night at the (Native) theatre. A large party from Calcutta is about to visit this pretty station next month. One of them (a lady) will take sketches of the principal places for the Queen. It appears that her Majesty was greatly attracted by some sketches taken by the late Lady Canning .- Englishman.

JHANSI, Oct. 19.—The mornings at present are delightful. A good deal of fever amongst the natives. The European invalids started for Cawnpore yesterday afternoon. Two companies of the native regiment have relieved the same number of troops at Oorai, some seven marches off. I was told by the Kotwal of Jhansi that six hundred people died of cholera this year. We can hardly wonder at this, as it is in a filthy state; the people look poor and wretched; the houses seem but half occupied. Who ever saw any town under a native Government otherwise?

Bengal Medical Service Annuities.—The members of the Bengal Medical Service who have had annuities assigned to them on the 1st November, 1862, are the following:—Inspectorsgeneral W. Thomson, A. Wilson, H. A. Bruce, and J. Balfour; Surgeon-majors, A. Campbell (R.), R. C. Guise, G. C. Wallich (R.), and T. A. Wethered.

NATIVE LIBERALITY AT JEYPORE.—The Delhi Gazelte gives the following list of subscriptions to the Lancashire Relief Fund collected at Jeypore:
—His Highness the Maharajah of Jaypore, Rs. 6,000; Pundit Sheodeen, Prime Minister, Rs. 200; Nawab Fyz Ali Khan Bahadoor, Commander of Jeypore troops, Rs. 150; Thakoor of Buggroo, Rs. 100; Thakoor of Ackrole, Rs. 100; Thakoor of Doodoo, Ks. 100; Nursingdas, Rs. 50; Moonahee Kishensuroop, Rs. 50; Gunga Buksh, Rs. 50; Sooltan Singh, Rs. 50; Suffee Meea, Superintendent of Police, Rs. 50; Pundit Rampersad, Rs. 50; Jowahir Lall, Rs. 25; Balmokund, Rs. 25; total, Rs. 6,000.

ACT VIII. or 1859, in the modified form in which it has been introduced into the Province of Oudh, is extended to the Central Provinces.

TRADE OF CALCUTTA.— The "Trade Returns of the Port of Calcutta for the year ending 30th April, 1862," have been published in the Calcutta Gazette. Total imports, Rs 16,97,67,892; total exports, Rs. 15,90,80,985: total value of the trade of the port for 1861-62, Rs. 32,88,48,877.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, Oct. 24 .- Sickness i now rife at Agra, where cholera and fever claim their daily victims. Allahabad is also unhealthy. but improving. A low kind of fever and dysen tery have been committing sad havor among the poor classes generally in and around that station. Campore is unusually healthy; not a single case of cholera, so far as I know, has been registered. The "road locomotive" experiment has again been revived in the N. W. Provinces, and, this time, under the patronage of Government, who, in a spirit of unwonted generosity, advanced Rs. 20,000 of the public money to enable a Mr. Gower, of the railway, to play ducks and drakes with it in "scheming"-I think that's the me chanical term-three traction engines, to run between Cawnpore and Lucknow. You must re member the instance of an enterprising Yankee who purchased one of Bray's traction engines: he ran it into a gentleman's kitchen, frightened the cook into fits, and then retired stern firstafter the manner of backing out at a Royal presentation-through the garden wall. In fact, the machine was unmanageable, and so I think will the Lucknow ones prove, after frightening all the horses on the road, and playfully committing other little agreeable eccentricities.

AN IGNOBLE SQUABBLE.—A nice little squabble has turned up at Cuttack between the chaplain, the commissioner, and the commanding officer, about what time they should go to church on Sunday evening. The "shine" originated about The commissioner said that the the lamps. lamps made the church so hot, that instead of feeling in a little heaven below, he felt very much like being in another place which is famous for being very hot and very much lower. Accordingly, he wished to have evening service in the afternoon, but then the commanding officer interfered and said that his men could not march to the church in the afternoon, and that the evening service must either be on Sunday evening, or else before breakfast on Monday morning. chaplain seems to have been rather helpless in the matter; and indeed there has been a sad falling off in ecclesiastical discipline of late years. In olden time if the commissioner refused to go to church he would have been fined for the first offence, and imprisoned with hard labour on a repetition of his delinquency; and we all remember the terrible and significant lesson which was given on a similar occasion to an old English gentleman, all of the olden time :-

In the present instance the case was referred by the chaplain to the archdeacon, by the archdeacon to the bishop, by the bishop to the Bengal Government, by the Bengal Government to the Home Secretary, and by the Home Secretary to the Governor-general, who ruled that the commanding officer was in the right; so that at last the commissioner will be obliged to go to church in the evening, much in the same way that after successive references to the dog, stick, fire, water, ox, butcher, &c., the little pig in the nursery story was ultimately made to go over the stile.—Englishman.

THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE STAMP OFFICE, recently submitted to the Government of Bengal by Mr. Crawford, appears to be highly satisfactory. The proceeds of the sale of Stamps during the year 1861-62 amounts to upwards of a crore of Rupees, exclusive of those of the adhesive Postage Stamps. The abovementioned Report contains several valuable suggestions for improvement in the department, the result of experience derived from Mr. Crawford's late visit to the London Stamp Office. Amongst other things, the Superintendent recommends that Bombay should be supplied with Stamps from Calcutta. In consequence of the recent increase of responsibility attached to the office of the native Khazanchee of the Stamp Office Mr. Crawford has proposed that the amount of his security should be increased from Rupees 60,000 to one lakh, and that his salary should be increased from 260 to 500 Rupees a month.

Lucknow, Oct. 24.-Colonel Bruce, the In pector-General of Police, who was here last month, has reduced the expenditure of the police The mounted sowars from thirteen lacs to ten. have all been disbanded, I hear, and if the whole force were to be the same, an end would be then put to the frequent robberies, thefts, and burglaries of which the native inhabitants complain terribly, and very many of them cast their suspicions on the police officials, but are afraid of complaining against them lest they should be snubbed. At Cawnpore, they say, the state of things is worse than here. An individual who was for a long time superintendent of the gaol here has lately been found out to have embezzled a considerable sum of the Government money, some 25,000 or 30,000 rupees. In Rajah Outfuth Ras's kotee, in the city, treasure was found amounting to two lacs of rupees; the digging mania still continues.

THE INDUS TUNNEL.—It is stated that the prohibition of the Supreme Government against the continuance of the Indus Tunnel works has been withdrawn to the extent of allowing the drift to be completed. There are not more than 300 feet to be bored, and no doubt Capt. Sandiland will use his utmost endeavours to push the work to completion.

THE 20TH HUSSARS received a telegram on the 29th October directing them to march to Agra to be inspected by the Commander in-Chief. The cavalry camp of exercise at Umballah will not be formed, the Finance Committee having objected to it on the score of expense. We (Delhi Gazette) hardly understand how such a camp can be a source of expense; do the soldiers and horses eat more in a camp of exercise than in barracks? The 19th P.I., part of the Commander in-Chief's escort, came into Agra on the 27th. The Chief himself is expected about the 8th or 10th November.

Assistant-Surgeons.—His Excellency the Governor-general in Council has ruled, on a reference from the civil paymaster, N. W. Provinces, that an assistant-surgeon transferred from a regiment to a civil station shall receive travelling allowance between the two appointments; but not on any subsequent transfer of the same kind. If we are not mistaken, this is a liberal innovation on the previous rule, according to which a medical officer received travelling allowance to his first appointment, from the presidency at which he landed, but, in case of his joining a regiment or military appointment, found his way to any civil station to which he was subsequently appoined at his own expense.

MOFUSSIL CONSTABULARY.—It is said that in Budget Estimate for the year 1862-03 the sum of 40 lakhs of rupees has been allotted for the new Constabulary Police in the Mofussil, out of which the sum of Rupees 50,000 has been reserved for the maintenance of a few schools hereafter to be established, for the purpose of training up young men for the constabulary force.

Mr. Wingfield will, on arrival in India, be in all probability appointed to the residency at Hydrabad. He has expressed a wish for the appointment, and it is almost certain that he will get it. The emoluments are, we believe, somewhat larger than those attached to the Chief Commissionership of Oudh; besides, there is not half so much to be done, and an easy, yet active, life is what Mr. Wingfield, in consideration of his health, now seeks for.—Oude Gazette.

THE New Coinage.—From the 1st November the date on which the new silver and copper coinage was issued for circulation, the Governor-general directs that in all future public correspondence and accounts the word "rupee" only be employed to designate the Government coin of that denomination.

COTTON CULTIVATION.—The response made during the current year by the cotton producing districts of these provinces to the demand for cotton is thus stated:—Meerut, 27 per cent. increase on preceding year; Rohilcund 25 per cent. do.; Agra, 31½ per cent. do.; Allahabad, 20 per cent. do.; Jhansi, 22 per cent. do.

SER GEORGE COUPER, BART., CB., Secretary to the Government of the North-western Provinces is appointed to officiate as Judicial Commissioner in the Province of Oudh.

WASTE LANDS-MADRAS AND MALACCA.

On the 24th of September last the Governor of Madras in Council issued orders in compliance with a letter from the Government of India, dated 15th August, asking for the rules under which Waste Lands in Madras are to be sold. The Madras Government direct the Board of Revenue to adapt the rules passed under Lord Canning's resolution to the provisions of Sir C. Wood's despatch; to report to what extent arrangements for purchasing Waste Lands under that resolution have been already "completed" since these arrangements are legalised; and also to declare to what extent a Permanent Settlement may be carried out in the Presidency. The Board are told that the subject will demand careful and deliberate consideration, and that their views upon it "should not be laid before Government until they had time fully to study the question." This seems, to those who know the Board, a plain invitation to put off as long as possible. But as the Government of India has expressed a wish that the lands be sold "with the least avoidable delay," the Governor in Council proceeds to lay down rules for the sale of wastes in the Neilguerries as an exceptional case. It is to these rules we ask the attention of our readers.

"Until further orders" such lands are to be sold at auction at the upset price of Rs. 5 per acre of wooded or shola soil, and Rs. 24 of open soil. Except that a hint nowhere is given as to the maximum area of grants, and the very unbusiness-like warning that "all lots that may be applied for will not of necessity be disposed of," nothing would seem to be more satisfactory. But, just as in the North-Western Provinces, purchasers of Waste Lands do not buy the feesimple but only the liability to be persecuted in the Courts by third parties who may choose to prefer claims to the land, so in Madras the purchaser does not buy the fee-simple, but only the right to be assessed at a rate much higher than existing grantees have ever paid. Hitherto grantees have paid the rate of one rupee of assessment per acre all round. This is declared to be "clearly too low," and is doubled on all wooded land. "This, of course, is distinct from, and in addition to, the price at which the land st. 1,000 a year, while came may be bought at auction." That is, purchasers, as in Scotland, buy an estate subject to a heavy feu duty, which they must redeem after having bought the land at auction. That there may be no mistake we give the very words:

"All lands will be put up to auction bearing assessment, but it will be open to purchasers to bey the freehold at twenty-five years' purchase of the assessment. This redemption price will, in all cases, be in addition to the price which the land may have fetched at auction, as well as to any assessment that may have become payable on the land between the date of sale and redemption. Were the fee-simple to be put up to auction originally, the upset price, which in case of timbered land would be its. 55 per acre, would be so high as to oircumscribe competiarre, would be so high as to circumscribe competi-tion, whereas any one who may have bought land bearing assessment can at any time convert it into freehold by the payment of twenty-five years' land-tax."

Was there ever such madness?-and that, too, perpetrated by a Governor who ruled a colony where land is sold outright at five shillings an In the other Presidencies, and under even Sir C. Wood's despatch, the purchase of land at auction includes the fee-simple, that is, as the Bengal rules say, "the full, hereditary, and transferable proprietary right, free for ever from all demand." It is fortunate that these utterly prohibitory rules, so opposite to the liberal provisions of Sir Charles Trevelyan, do not apply to the whole Presidency. The spot selected for their operation is only the Neilgherries, the grandest hill range in India, with the most glorious plateaux covering 700 square miles, while the Himalayas have only ragged peaks, and with a climate which combines the English summer with the Italian antumn.

In Malacca Colonel Cavanagh has acted with wisdom. The fee-simple will be sold by auction "at the fixed rate of three dollars per acre, or, as regards grants of ten acres and upwards, at the option of the applicants, on lease for 999 years, at the rate of a dollar and a half per acre, with an annual quit-rent of fifteen cents. per acre." A lease of 999 years is simply a freehold with feu duty, but that too may be converted after five years for a dollar-and-a-half per acre. But such a lease is burdened with the provision that onefourth of the grant must be cultivated within ten years, so that the fee-simple will always be pre-Existing cultivators whose rent is a tenth of the produce, and those who hold their land under commutation deeds, may apply on the same terms as purchasers of Waste Lands. A royalty of one tenth of all mineral products will be exacted, and space on the sea-coast and banks of rivers will be reserved for the public. Our Malacca Settlement is just the size of Yorkshire, containing a thousand square miles. Iron, gold, and tin abound, but the soil is rightly described by the Portuguese writer, De Barros, as " terra esteril," or barren. The population is estimated at 55,000, or fifty five to the square mile, but they are crowded in the town and its vicinity. There are nearly 3,000 Europeans and their descendants in the settlement. More than a half of the people are Malays. The most active are some 10,000 Chinese, who prosper there as they do everywhere out of their own country. Last year the land revenue of Malacca was only Rs. 12,169, and the total receipts Rs. 1,70,771. Rice thrives well, and coffee, cotton, and tapioca cultivation is succeeding. The settlement is just a hundred miles from the Equator. The import trade was £451,210 last year, and the export £358,574. The tin mines are most valuable. More attrastive to the agriculturist is Province Wellesley, attached to Penang, which has an area of only 140 square miles, and is already occupied by a large number of most energetic capitalists. Rice, sugar, and tapioca flourish luxuriantly, and the cotton experiments on two estates have been most successful. It is to be hoped that these new rules in Malacea, following the Land Act passed by the Indian Legislature last year, will go far to redec the injustice of the Dutch and the errors of Mr. Fullerton, one of the Gevernors, who, that he might propogate the ryetwary system, bought up the tithes paid to certain fresholders created by the Datch, and burdesed the settlement with £1,000 a year, while causing it to netrograde will

THE HON. THOMAS PYCROFT WAS SWOTN A member of council for the Madres presidency on 29th October as successor to the Hon. W. A. Morehead, and took his seat under a salute from the ramparts of St. George.

APPOINTMENTS .- Mr. A. J. Arbuthnot to be Chief Secretary to Government; Mr. E. B. Powell, M.A., to be Director of Public Instruction; Mr. E. Thompson, M.A., to be Principal of the Presidency College; T. Gopala Row, B.A., to act as Professor of Mathematics in the Presidency College, until further orders. THE KALIGOUK SANATARIUM.—It would appear from recent action in the matter that the wildgoose scheme of the sanstarium for European soldiers on Kaligouk, or Curlew Island, has been 4 scotched, not killed," and that there is still some lingering vitality in the mistaken enterprise. It will be remembered that, as far back as the month of June, 1861, Captain Fraser, of the Engineers, Superintendent of the Alguada Reef Light house, proposed to commence operations on Curlew Is land, with a party of two hundred convicts from the Moulmein jail, for the purpose of clearing, draining, and making roads upon the island. In February last orders were accordingly issued in the Public Works Department to carry out the preliminary steps, and to communicate with the local authorities at Moulmein regarding the supply of convicts. Resulting from this action, the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah has lately forwarded to the supreme government a letter which he has received from Captain Fraser, reporting the steps which that officer proposes taking amongst which is the establishment of a complete jail, with establishment, guard, &c., on Curlew Island: the convicts to number from two hundred to two hundred and fifty, as a permanent arrangement. Before issuing orders or sanctioning further expenditure on the wild scheme in question, the Governor general has, we are glad to hear, directed that the opinion of the military, and we suppose, military medical department, be taken as to the primary question of at all establishing a sanatarium on Carley Island for Europeans. This is a wise and provident step in these times of economy and careful expenditure of the public money, a considerable portion of which will be saved from useless squandering, if his Excellency will but move one pace further. If, in addition to the two departments above mentioned, the government will refer this matter of the Kaligouk Sanatarium to the Marine Department also, and take the advice of the many experienced sea-faring men in its employ who are thoroughly acquainted with Curlew Island, its chimate and aspect at all seasons of the year, and the Bay of Bengal during the south-west monsoons, conclusions as to the ineligibility of the island in question for any establishment of the kind will be at once arrived at which will sweep away the foolish scheme at once and for ever. All public money expended now-a days should be cautiously laid out, with as near an approach to certain utility as is attainable in human undertakings; and surely counsel ought to be taken in this Curlew Island matter of the very department whose members are especially qualified to advise the Government before enveloping laklis of rupees in storms, fogs, mists, waves, and jungle, never again to meet the public eye, or afford any results except the death of any unfortunates who might be sent to look for health, and find their fate on the wave-lashed and weatherbeaten home of the curlews. We had thought that we were done with this crackbrained project of a sanatarium for Europeans far down in the tropics, and high up in the storm-riven clouds of the Bay of Lengal; but perseverance in riding a hobby on the one hand, and the anxiety of Government for the welfare of its European soldiers on the other, have given to this project a vitality which it is not easy for those acquainted with the subject to understand.-Englishman.

SECUNDERABAD, DECCAN.-Secunderabad is in a shronic state of drills and parades, in anticipaion of the coming of the Commander-in Chief. On the 29th October there was a large brigade at science and medical hygiene be neglected at hill which "good conduct medals" were given to some | stations, the most that can be expected from them of the men of the 1st Royals and the 18th Royal Irish. All the troops in cantonment were present as well as the Hyderabad Contingent from Bolarum; at a rough calculation there were about 6,600 men out. Subscriptions are being raised pretty briskly for the relief of the distressed operatives in Lancashire; public, private, depart mental, and regimental lists have been circulated. and a concert is to be given for their benefit by one of the heads of departments in the residency. Salar Jung subscribed 1.500 rupees—double the amount would not have hurt him much, one would fancy. However, all his spare cash, I suppose, will be required for his reception of the Commander in-Chief, which is to be a very grand one. We have seen very nearly the last of the monsoons; the average fall of rain has been fair; grain is still very dear. The Murray case is still in abeyance. The young lancer officer, who got himself into trouble the other day, is out of hospital, but still under close arrest. There is a curious rumour affoat here that there is a ghosai in the city of Hyderabad who has the power of changing the sex of a child at will. The story goes that the ghosai had a child living with him who was claimed by a couple professing to be its parents. On their affirming that it was a boy, he proved it to be a girl; a short time after the girl (as it was supposed to be) became a boy, and on the parents resterating their claim the supposed boy became a girl again. At last the case was actually taken before Salar Jung himself. What he thinks and says of it I have not heard.—Bombay Times.

BOMBAY.

MILITARY SANITARIA.

Sir Hugh Rose seems to feel convinced that if the question of military sanitaria in the Bombay Presidency were thoroughly gone into and considered, it would be found that the per centage of military sickness might be reduced to a proportion which would render the European troops onethird, perhaps a fourth, more efficient than they actually are. The whole of the Deccan is dotted over with high isolated hills, such as are most suitable for sanitary purposes. While Poorundhur, with other peaks of the same range of hills. is quite free from fevers of an intermittent or remittent type on account of its situation in relation to the surrounding country, being isolated and the barracks built on the declivity of the mountain, Mount Aboo gives rise to these diseases, "as the station is located in a basin some miles in circumference, but surrounded all sides by higher eminences than the altitude of its site." Great care should be altitude of its site." taken, first of all, in the selection of the hill sanitaria, as in this presidency we can afford to make a choice; and secondly, when the hill has been chosen, we should be very careful to have the station built on the top of the hill, or on the slope or declivity of the eminence, after a careful survey of the prevailing winds and rainfall. We attach great importance to the proper conservancy of our hill sanitaria, and we think it would be well in all cases to follow the plan pursued at Mahableshwar, and appoint a medical officer as superintendent of the station. We observe that Colonel Young, in a letter to the Secretary to the Government of India, with regard to the sanitarium at Parisnath, recommends that a medical officer be selected to take charge of the sick and invalids, who could hereafter, as necessity arises, be appointed superintendent, with magisterial powers, and with a general control of the station. This is an important suggestion, and one that ought to be carried out in all cases. The medical officer should be responsible for the conservancy of the station, as well as for attendance on the sick in hospital. Dr. W. J. Moore, in his work just published on "The Diseases of India," laments that too much is expected from hill climates; and remarks that-" no locality at home is healthy without the sanitary condition being attended to; and we cannot expect that Indian stations or mountains should be exceptions to that law." If senitary, will be refuge from heat during the two or three of morning and evening foot exercise with comsoon sanitarium it has peculiar advantages. tried to remain there all the monsoon, and have found it a delightful residence. The climate is cool though moist; and even in the midst of the mists of July and August there is a free circulation of air. The wind whirls the mist into the air. and tosses it about in a way that makes one feel active as he gazes at it.

Punchgunny is another hill station of which much might be made as a sanitarium for troops. The rain there is even lighter than at Poorundhur, and it is on a much more grand and extensive scale. We might also have some of our educational institutions for European children established there, where they might be healthy, happy, and rosy, instead of sickly, puny, and listless, as we see them in the plains. Dr. Moore says:— The mortality of children in India is enormous -in Bengal 84.2, in the Bombay Presidency 70.7, and in Madras 39.8 per 1,000 per annum; while in the most unhealthy of our manufacturing towns at home it only reaches 22." In hill stations the mortality among children is reduced to an almost incredible extent. At Kussoulie, in the Lawrence Asylum, two children died in two years out of 136 inmates. At Ootacamund the mortality is the same, while in the asylum at Mount Aboothere was only one death during the first five vears after its establishment. Now. Punchgunny has been fairly tested, and the climate has been found to be everything we could wish for auch schools. It is not so far removed from Bombey as to be reckoned inaccessible to parents, and a branch railways multiply over the country it will be more and more resorted to by those who, while they retire from the service of Government, yet hot months of the year. When we last visited Poorundhur in June, 1860, great care was taken by Captain Ker, then superintendent of the station, to secure cleaniness throughout the sanitarium. We do not think anything was left untried to secure this object, and though he was not himself a medical officer he always took into his counsels the medical officer in charge. Government cannot be too careful with regard to the ordering of our sanitaria. Whether on plains or hills, malaria will prevail if there are not strict sanitary regulations, and if these are not rigidly enforced. The station of Poorund-hur is fitted naturally for a sanitarium. It has no jungle, and its isolated position, in the midst of the open country, secures its free ventilation. while Wazir Ghur, rising on the East, protects it from the bleak, dry land winds of the Deccan. In the "Transactions of the Medical and Physical Society for 1861," the medical officer in charge tells us that the climate is good, fresh, and bracing, and well suited to most European constitutions; having no tendency to produce the diseases to which Europeans are prone in India; but is, on the contrary, the most powerful agent in the cure and prevention of many of them. It is more temperate than many hill stations, that is to say, the rain-fall is less than at most. The hot season is much tempered by the influence of the westerly or sea-breeze. It is far from oppressive, admitting fort, being cool enough to prevent the heavy perspiration which in a great measure nullifies the benefit of exercise; and under the deep shadows thrown by the hill, exercise may be pro-longed as late as nine o'clock in the morning. The cool season is so much tempered by clouds and occasional drizzling rain as to be free from that extreme dryness which characterises the Deccan plains. This climate is especially suited to the constitution of children, both native and English, as is strongly confirmed by the absence of the epidemic diseases of children. There are no sources of malaria, owing principally to the natural facility for good drainage, the nature of the soil, the absence of the underwood, and the sanitary arrangements established. As a monstation lies at the foot of a height that shelters it from the south, so that it escapes the fury of the first outburst of the monsoon; and no water lies, as the declivity causes it to run down the side of the hill as soon as it falls. Several families have wish to remain in India and have their families about them.

While we notice these hill sanitaria, we must not forget that there are diseases in India for which hill stations are entirely unsuitable. All organic diseases are increased by removal to high climates. Dr. W. J. Moore says on this subject : -" Marine sanitaria are of immense service as restorative to health, in many cases of superior efficacy to hill climates. For the organically diseased, those long resident in the country and suffering from the atrophy thereby induced, for liver affections, dysenteric disease, the sea coast is preferable to the mountain range. The great heat of the climate is tempered by the sea breeze; the nights are rendered cool from the same cause; and water being in front, or in some instances nearly surrounding, the generation of malaria must be reduced to a minimum." He recommends that Marine sanitaria should be placed on high cliffs jutting out into the sea, to the base of which the water reaches even at low tide, as the effluxia from mud, which is periodically uncovered, is very prejudicial to health.

In conclusion, we would again urge upon the attention of Government the subject of these sanitaria. They have the highest military opinion in India in favour of their establishment. They have Sir Hugh Rose's testimony that care in this respect would add greatly to the efficiency of the Indian army. "The subject," he says, "is an all-important question in a military, political, and financial point of view."

For the benefit of our own railway company we subjoin an extract of a letter from Lieutenant-Colonel H. Yule, on the subject of the sanatarium at Parisnath :- "The agent of the East India Railway Company having applied for a site for a barrack, the Lieutenant-Governor has set apart a convenient portion of the ground for their occupation. A hospital for the convalescent workmen and officers of the company will accordingly be constructed on Parisnath." Let our local railway officials go and do likewise. They will lose nothing by attending to the health of those under them. and will find that, if they care for their servants, really respectable men will become more common than at present in the lower ranks of the service. Let them have a site selected at one of the hill stations in the neighbourhood of Bombay, and erect a building to which invalids might resort. At present the expenses of a trip to Matheran and Mahableshwar are so great, that it is impossible for those of slender means to go to either of these stations, let the necessity for change be never so urgent .- Bombay Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS

NUSSEERABAD, Oct. 21.-We, in common with everybody else, have had an extra quantity of rain, about 36 inches, more than fell in the two last years put together, but I think we have done. At Aboo they had over 120, and still falling. suppose it must be attributed to this unusual season that we have had so much sickness, which quite equals that in other stations, where it has obtained more celebrity. The 28th regiment for some time past has had a steady average of 200 in hospital, and 150 convalescents, exclusive of those sent for change to Tarraghur, the sanitarium, and the daily admissions are rarely under 20 from fever. Though many are discharged, a number come back again, and all work is at a stand-still, from the general weakness of the men, which renders them unable to bear any exertion. The 17th N. I. have had an increased sick list. The troop of H. Artillery has got through the season uncommonly well.

LADY FRERE continues to suffer from indisposition, and is at present at the Government Bungalow Malabar Point, Bombay.

LIEUT. G. A. JACOB.—Consequent on the appointment of Captain Scrivener as Paymaster to her Majesty's 103rd Royal Bombay Fusiliers, Lieutenant G. A. Jacob, of the 22nd Regiment Bombay N.I., Assistant Superintendent of Schools has been appointed to act as Superintendent of Army Schools, in addition to the duties of Assistant RAJCOTE, Oct. 31.—The rumoured appointment of Major J. T. Barr as political agent of Kolapoor has been received here with great satisfac-That this most excellent, worthy gentleman was the "victim of circumstances," all who have even the most superficial knowledge of this benighted province must admit. Had Major Barr, however, listened to the voice of reason from one whom we have not mentioned, the friend of Kattyawar would have eventually left the scene of his labours under altered circumstances. Nevertheless, whatever may have been the conduct of Government in this un fortunate affair, it reflects credit upon the liberal administration of Sir B. Frere in promptly making the amende honourable to an injured public servant of long, unexceptionable sustained integrity. Marramunjee, the Thakoor of Rajkote, paid the debt of nature on the 26th in the 28th ear of his age. It appears that he was suffering from liver complaint contracted by a long course of dissipation. He will be succeeded by his son Bhowba, a promising young lad, five years of age. During his minority, however, as in the case of his father, the affairs of state will be managed by his grandmother, a shrewd, intelligent, matronly lady. An old native female centenarian, aged 108, has also gone to the haven of departed souls. She was a resident of this province during her life time, and the cycle of changes she wit nessed during a generation were recapitulated with an accuracy as if the occurrences of yesterday. Much ascerbity is evinced throughout this province owing to the fictitiously high rate of exchange which now obtains between the current native coin (korees) and the runee. When it is borne in mind that monetary transactions are all in korees, the public imposition becomes so manifest that the only surprise is that such a public gigantic swindle was allowed to remain so long unchecked by those in power. Now, however, that representations have been forced upon the Political Agent by the Rev. Mr. Mitford, the officer commanding the station, the head of the postal department in this province, and others, each and all deprecating the flagitious system of spoliation by which the jam, from whose treasury the coin issues, derives a profit of nearly 40,000 rupees a month. The rate of exchange to day is about 21 korees per rupee, or about eleven annas and a fraction per rupee. I regret to state that, from the unprecedentedly heavy fall of rain this season, sickness in all its phases prevails more or less in this pro vince.—Bombay Times.

THE SHOE QUESTION AGAIN .- The long-pending shoe question, never yet satisfactorily settled, threatens to be again brought on the carpet by an occurrence, which a correspondent of the Summachar Durpun describes as having taken place, on the 16th Oct., in the Court of the Judge of Surat. An influential young Parsee gentle man from Bombay, who attended the Court that day on business, was, on his entering the room, stopped by the judge and desired to take his shoes off if he wished to sit in the Court. The Parsee declined to do so, stating that he had English shoes and stockings on, and that the homage of walking barefooted is not exacted even in the High Court of Judicature at Bombay. The judge told him that he would be guilty of contempt of Court if he did not put his shoes off, and that if he did not respect the hookum of the Court, he should expect no respect from it. The Parsee was at last forced to find a seat on a bench instead of a chair, which he might otherwise have occupied. The following day, in the presence of the Parsee, one Vishnoopunth Bulwunt, a witness, was permitted to enter the Court with his English shoes on; and this unequal application of the "shoe regulations" is said to have much disturbed the equanimity of the fire worshipper.

Mr. Smales.—An interim order of protection has been granted by Mr. Justice Couch to Mr. Smales (ex paymaster of the Inniskilling Dragoons), on the production by the insolvent of a medical certificate.

BHEEMA RAO, the man who captured Rao Sahib, a rebel, is to receive a jagheer, in lieu of he £500 from Government.

SHOLAPORE, Oct. 4 .- All Sholapore is in a ferment, and scarcely aught is spoken of but the late captures made by Captain Nuttall, the superintendent of police, who has now in his custody the adopted son of Bajee Row, and brother in the same degree to the Nana of Bithoor. This man, calling himself Madoorow Sahib, has come, it is said, all the way from the Nepaul frontiers, where, he says, the Nana is, and for some months was dodging about in different places, a great part of which time was spent at the Hindoo shrines, at Punderpoor, and other places. During this time he was not idle, but was using all the means in his power to spread disaffection and create rebellion. His emissaries were about, and the extent of the web he had knitted will be imagined when I inform you that Sholapore first, next Nuggur, then Poqua, were to be enclosed within its meshes; and at the time of his seizure by Captain Nuttall, at Punchgaum, a village somewhere about thirty miles distant from this station, most treasonable documents were taken from his person, and among them was a proclamation offering a reward for the head of every European which should be brought in to him. His calculations were suddenly upset, and his schemes subverted, when Captain Nuttall made his appearance with a small body of police before the eyes. of the astonished Madoorow Sahib, and took him in custody. At the time of being made a prisoner he was dressed in the garb of a Goosawee, and little expected detection, much less to be specially waited upon by the superintendent of police; and had, therefore, no time to make away with the evidences of his guilt, which, I understand, contain some valuable information and give the name of the place which was to have been the place of rendezvous for the grande armée. According to Madoorow's calculations, four days from the date of his capture was to elapse when Sholapore was to be sacked, its troops annihilated, and the unfortunate Europeans of the place doomed to the murderer's knife. According to him Sholapore was to be another Cawnpore; but he has been disappointed, and I hope will not escape hanging for his kind intentions. The efficient state of the police of this district, or rather the intelligence of the guiding hand, can be imagined when it is known that for the last four months this Madoorow Sahib was spotted and cautiously followed, until the evidence for his condemnation was complete. He is now kept within the compound of the Superin. tendent of Police's bungalow, strongly guarded and heavily ironed, and instructions are awaited from Government as to his future disposal. Two other pandies are also in custody at the same place; one gave himself out to be a pundit, and for two months he had been living in the regimental lines of the 8th N.I. About twenty days since he went to Bombay, stayed there a few days, and came back to his former quarters. It was not long, however, before he was pounced upon by the military authorities, who had received intimation, I understand, from Bombay, that he is one of the fiends who doomed helpless women and babes to violent deaths during the mutiny. and was now trying to raise the fire again from the almost extinguished embers of the mutiny of 1857. The third was seized in the town, and the charge against him is also treason and conspiracy.—Bombay Times.

St. Andrew's Kirk.—Subscrptions to the extent of about £1,400 have been made for the building and endowment fund of an orphanage, in connection with St. Andrew's Kirk, at Bombay.

CAPTAIN A. J. Pym, of the 2nd Bombay Light Cavalry, has been appointed to the special duty of superintending the Bheel colonies in Khandeish, in succession to Captain Peter Dods, of the 9th Bombay Native Infantry, who was a short time since appointed by the Supreme Government Director of Public Instruction in the Punjaub.

Major R. Shaw, Examiner of Commissariat Accounts, is about to retire from the service. There are three candidates in the field to fill up the appointment which he will vacate, viz., Major J. B. Dunsterville, Deputy Commissary General, Majors A. Gray and H. W. Holland, Assistant Commissary Generals.

DURBAR.-In consequence of birthday having this year occurred when the Royal family were in mourning for the late Prince Consort, the durbar usually held at Poons by the agent for sirdars on that day was postponed until the 1st November, the anniversary of her Majesty's proclamation announcing that she had assumed the sovereignty of her Indian possessions. On Saturday a durbar was accordingly held by the Baron de Hochepied Larpent, acting agent for sirdars, in the court house at the Sungum, on which occasion all the sirdars resident at and in the neighbourhood of Poona assembled at three o'clock in the afternoon to do honour to the invitation. Amongst those present were the Nawab of Beylah, Tatia Maharaj, Khunderow, Rastia, Khan Bahadoor Syud Cumaloodeen, Principal Sudder Ameen, Rao Saheb Moro Raghonath Dhumderay, Khan Bahadoor Framjee Nusserwanjee, Deputy Magistrate of Poona, Rao Saheb Moroba Canoba, judge of the Small Cause Court, Khan Bahadoor Pudumjee Pestonjee, Rao Saheb Anna Saheb Poorundhery, the Fouzdar and other native officials, and about one hundred and seventy-five of the principal inhabitants of Poona. At the conclusion of the ceremony of presentation, Baron Larpent personally presented utter. pawn, and wreaths of flowers to the first and second class Sirdars, and to the "Khan Bahadoors " and " Rao Sahebs,"—all those of inferior degree having had the same attention paid to them by the assistant agent for Sirdars, Mr. Melvill; after which the durbar broke up and the barra logue returned to their respective residences, highly gratified with the courtesy and urbanity of the agent and his assistant. The arrangements of the durbar were all that could be wished, and each one present received the honour due to his rank, to his position in the community.—Deccan Herald.

NEEMUCH, Oct. 26 .- The Chief of the Sul loomba is the representative of the eldest branch of the Oodeypoor family; you will read the account of the chivalrous self-abnegation which transferred that gaddee to the younger branch in Tod's Rajastan, I believe. The chief has lately died, and his widow, with the consent of all her feudatories and people, adopted a son, the present chief, who now holds Sulloomba. The Chief of Bheedur is ninth cousin ten times removed of the old dead chief, and claims the gaddee! He is a courtier always at the Odeypoor court, and has got round Major Eden, and persuaded Gen. Lawrence of the soundness of his claim. So the English Government is to send out a force to crush the adopted heir, and instal the far off cousin on the throne. The Bheels and Meenas, who are traditionary subjects of the Sulloomba chiefs, take the side of the young adopted chief, and if we forcibly induct the Pretender, they will doubtless turn him out when we turn our backs and so the annual expedition to Sulloomba will doubtless figure in our estimates for some time to come. The native feeling here is strongly in favour of the rights of the adopted son; his own subjects are equally attached to him. The natives still hope that the Governor general will put his veto on the whole thing, and leave the people to settle their own grievances .- Bombay Times.

MR. W. H. HAVELOCK, c.s., has assumed charge of his duties as Acting secretary to Government in the Political, Judicial, and Educational Departments, vice Mr. Shaw Stewart, appointed Collector and Magistrate of Tanna

COTTON FROM KURBACHEE .- The quantity of cotton imported by rail into Kurrachee in 1862 will exceed 54,000 bales. Not a bale was exported from Kurrachee two years ago. The exports from Kurrachee for 1861-62 are as one to nineteen of the total exports from Bombay during that year.

THE LATE MR. J. J. BERKLEY, C.E .- The members of the Mechanics' Institute, at a special meeting, recorded their high sense of gratitude and deep obligation to the late Mr. James John Berkley, chief engineer of the G. I. P. Railway, and have conveyed to his widow the expression of their sincere condolence in the loss she has sustained.

-Cotton and how to obtain it is a subject of such vital importance that it becomes the duty of everyone who can throw the least light on a solution of the difficulty to step forward and ventilate their views and experience. Let cotton be treated as indigo has been in Bengal, the supply would then approach the demand. If European or native capitalists were to locate in different parts of the country favourable, as regards soil and climate, to the growth of the plant, farm the land and either work it as an independent concern or engage the tenants upon advances to lay down a certain proportion of that particular crop, on the understanding that the produce would be purchased at, say, 30 per cent, below the local current market value, or at a rate fixed at the time the advances were made, a steady constant supply would be always at command, and the violent fluctuations in the market corrected. One thing is very certain, that in the cotton-growing districts it will be impossible to purchase cotton except through the "middle men" (Banians), who pass it from haud to hand several times before it reaches the hands of the exporter: the Banians being the men who advance both money and seed to the cultivators, To oust these individuals from the monopoly, which benefits neither the cultivator nor exporter, the only weapon that could be brought to bear with effect is the possession of the land upon which a cotton crop could be raised. Indigenous cotton is one of the easiest grown crops; but as it is not always to be depended on, the cultivators limit the extent of land occupied by it. They do so also for another reason, that in the matter of cotton they are at the mercy of the Banian who made the advance on the crop, who takes it at his own rate, no matter what it may be worth in the local bazaar, it being usual in the agreement between the parties for the moneylender to claim either crop or cash, as he may choose. Under the system where the farming capitalist advances without interest, the cultivators would, no doubt, be glad to extend the cultivation of cotton, and might be induced to expend a little more labour on it, so that an article superior to what is usually sold in the bazaars might be produced. Although the character of the staple might not be materially improved for some time, yet it would be delivered clean and unadulterated, considerations which do not trouble the native dealers, but make a wonderful difference in the value of the article at Liverpool. The next inquiry would be, where is land procurable? Where the tenure is safe and where the terms of the holding would be reasonable, where capitalists could work without vexatious interference from native officials, and where common-sense law is administered effectively, and without an unneces sary expenditure of time, to obtain all these advantages at once would be doubtful. Take the question of the locality of the land first; we would na turally look out for it as near the export market as possible, then along the different lines of railway as affording the best and most rapid means of transport—Guzerat on one side, the Southern Mahratts Country on the other, with Kandeish and Berar and the Vallies of the Taptee and Nerbudda, the large cotton fields of Central India. Where the ryotwarree system is in force there would be little chance of obtaining land in sufficient quantity to work on effectively, or to have any direct dealings with the cultivators. Capitalists must open up a new field, and hold it in the zemindaree rule. Inquirers for such a field may find it bor dering on the G.I.F. Railway, from the Taptee to Jubbulpore, in the Non-Regulation Provinces, first in Nimar, north of the Sautpoora Mountains, and in Beitool to the east; with thousands of acres of magnificent soil, now a perfect waste, covered with jungle, in the Hurda, Hooshungabad, and Nursingpore Zillahs, and land to any extent in the Bhopaul and Indore States immediately north of the Nerbudda. There is land. now for the tenure. In the zillahs above-named it is zemindaree without permanent settlement that is now being effected throughout the district. Jungle land is held at a merely nominal rate of annual rental. For instance, some hundreds of villages, each, perhaps, embracing an extent of

COTTON CAPABILITIES OF THE NERBUDDA VAL- | 1,000 acres, half of which may be first-class soil. pay an annual rental of Rs. 2 each to Government. This may appear absurd, but it is a fact. No doubt if an offer was made by intending farmers the same villages might be rented from Government on reasonable terms to the farmer, and a considerable increase of revenue to Government, and the tenure might be made by Government at thirty or fifty years' lease, with a fixed rental for that term. Lastly, the working of the law. In the Non Regulation Provinces noticed, at the head of the Government Commission we have Mr. Temple, a sufficient guarantee in itself that the capitalist who farmed land, and who by money and example would tend to improve the district, would receive every assistance in forwarding his undertaking. Again, in this commission redtapeism and routine are the exception and not the rule. The ancient conservative system is exploded, and the tone being given in higher quarters, the native officials are as good a sample as could be naturally expected, and at all times more ready to assist than stand in the way of progress. Thus we have all that can reasonably be desired within easy reach. One difficulty alone presents itself; very little local labour is obtainable, but that might be overcome by importing it. Surely it would be easier to get coolies to go to Central India than to the Mauritius, and the cost for their conveyance by rail a mere trifle; and to any one who purposed going extensively into such a business Chinese labour might be imported with advantage, for the farming transactions would not be confined to cotton alone, for which ordinary labour would do. If English merchants keep to the rule they have laid down for themselves, that it is not their vocation to raise cotton, but only to export it, are there no others in such a place as Bombay to take up the producing branch? It has the advantage, in the main, of being more profitable, with less risk. Besides, the production and export might be combined, and cotton despatched from Central India direct to Liverpool, the grower dealing with the spinner's broker.-Correspondent of Bombay Times.

MILITARY COMMANDS. - Major-general E. Green, c.B., has been appointed to the general staff of the army in succession to General Hale, and been posted to the Scinde division. Majorgeneral M. H. Smith, c.B., commanding the Scinde division, is transferred to the Poona division of the army.

THE TOWN DUTY COLLECTIONS OF BOWRAY for 1861-62 amount to—Customs department, Rs. 2,94,453; railway department, Rs. 75,101; total, Rs. 3,69,555. The collections of the preceding year were, Rs. 3,55,780.

MR. R. WEST, of the Civil Service, has been appointed to succeed temporarily Mr. L. H. Bayley, barrister-at law, who has resigned the appointment of Deputy Secretary to Government in the Legislative Department.

ENS. W. J. DENTON, H.M.'s 43RD (LIGHT INFANTRY) REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Adjutant General's Office, Her Majesty's Fritish Forces, Calcutta, Oct. 13th, 1862.—Head Quarters, Simla, Sept. 27th, 1862.—No. 144.—At a General Court Martial assembled at Fort William, on the 9th June, 1862. Ensign Wellington James Deuton, of H.M's 43rd (Light Infantry) Regiment of Foot, was attained on the following character. arraigned on the following charge :-

arraigned on the following charge:—
Charge.—With conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having been shamefully intoxicated in one of the public rooms of the mess of the 45 d Regiment Light Infinity at the allow on the night of the 25 d. Incoming 1865. Dun Dun, on the night of the 25th December, 1861, and then aggravated his mi conduct by having, in and then aggravated his hi conduct by having, in the hearing of the European sentry, addressed to Asst. Surgeon Good, of the regiment, who was en-deavouring to induce him, Ensign Denton, to leave the mess house, the following highly improper lan-guage, viz.: "Go to hell and be danned," or words to that effect.

Additional Charge—With conduct unbecoming

Additional Charge --With conduct unbecoming Additional Charge — will conduct the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Calcutta, on the 3rd of April, 1862, whilst in arrest and awaiting trial for the offence, stated in the original charge, been sham fully drunks when for embarkation on the flat Konais, and there-by made it necessary that he should be carried on by made it necessary that he should be carried to board by soldiers of the regiment. Finding.—The Court is of opinion that the prisoner, Ens. W. J. Denton, of H.M.'s 43rd Light Infantry Regiment, is Guilty of the charge preferred against him, and also Guilty of the additional charge.

Sentence. — The Court sentences the prisoner,
Ens. W. J. Denton, of H.M.'s 43rd Light Infantry Regiment, to be severely reprinanted, and in addition to be reduced to the bottom of the list of en-signs in his regiment.

(Signed) E. R. Maiswarmo, Col., President.
Fort William, 11th June, 1862.
Revised Sentence.—The Court, having carefully considered the contents of the letter from the Jud c Advocate General of the Army, begs respectfully to adhere to its former sentence.

(Signed) E. R. MAINWARING, Col., President.

Fort William, 14th Aug., 1862.

Confirmed but not approved.
(Signed) HUGH Rose, General,
Simla, 19th Sept., 1862. C. in C. in India.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C. The prisoner was found Guilty, in the first in-stance, of being drunk in the mess-room, and apply-Asst. surg. Good, in the hearing of a sentry of his regiment, who also saw him drunk and staggering.

2. Secondly, of having been publicly and shamefully drunk at the place of embarkation of the regiment and carried on board by soldiers of his regiment whilst in arrest for a presions shameful inment, whilst in arrest for a previous shameful instance of drunkenness.

8. The Court have quite lost sight of the fact that an officer who had, on two separate occasions, been seen in a state of shameful intoxication by the men of his regiment, on one of them having grossly insulted a brother officer, on another having been literally carried on board, on account of his inability to move from excess of intoxication, could not possibly command the respect of his men, or exercise with advantage to the service the authority over them which belongs to his position.

4. The C. in C. observes that the President and members of the Court can neither have been wellacquainted with military law or the spirit and rules of discipline, when for such repeated and aggravated acts of ungentlemantike and unmilitary conduct, acts of ungentlemanlike and unmilitary conduct, they award the very inadequate punishment of the loss of two steps of rank and a reprimand, a sen-tence which fails wholly as a warning and an example.

The Officer Commanding the Presidency Divi sion will assemble the members of the Court Martial. and read these remarks to them in the presence of his stat and the field officers of the garris n.

6. Ensign Denton will be released from arrest, his name is to be transposed in the list of ensigns of the 43rd Regiment of Foot, and in future will stand next below that of Ensign William Clark.

LIEUT. J. B. CHATTERTON, 41st REGIMENT

BENGAL N. I. Head quarters, Simla, 23rd October. At a General Court Martial assembled at Benares on Wednesday, the 1st of October, 1862. Lieut. John Balsir Chatterton, of the late 41st Regiment Bengal Native Infantry, was arraigned, and charged as Charge.-With conduct unbecoming the character Charge.—With conduct unbecoming the character of an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Benares, by excessive indulgence in intoxicating liquors, rendered himself unfit for duty, from the 18th of August, 1862, until the 20th day of the same month, or thereabouts.

Finding.—The Court finds the prisoner, Lieut. John Balsir Chatterton, of the late 41st Regiment Bengal Native Industry, suffry of the charge preferred against

Native Infantry, guilty of the charge prefered against him

Sentence.— The Court sentences the prisoner, Lieut. John Balsır Chatterton, of the late 41st Regi-ment Bengal Native Infantry, to be placed at the the list of lieutenants, in the late 41st bottom of Regiment Native Infantry.

Appeals.—Milatary Establishments.

Oct 29.—No. 866.—The How the Gov. in Council is pleased to republish, in supercession of all orders existing on the subject, the following rules, pre-scribed by the chief of the military finance depart. and sanctioned by the Govt. of India, on the course of procedure to be observed in reference to appeals complaints:-

1. Any officer or individual who objects to a disallowance made by a disbursing officer will appeal through him to the examiner, and the disbursing officer is bound to forward the appeal. 2: Appeals from the decisions of examiners will, in like manner, be made through those officers to the controller of military finance; and if his decision be considered by the appellant as not conclusive, the controller will forward the case to Govt., or will refer appellant to the head of his own department, to the adjt. gen. of the army, acting under the C. in C. sorders. If the last-mentioned authorities con-G.'s orders. If the last-mentioned authorities consider the appenda proper one, it may be forwarded with an expression of their opinion for review, or for disposal under the orders of Govt. But no officer will be allowed to make a direct reference to the water to showed to make a direct reference to the adjit gen, unless the examiner shall have refused to forward his appeal. Under any view, the right of special is open to all officers, it being however, distinctly laid down that all unnecessary appeals or references to Govt. are prohibited.

3. If the Comreller decide in favour of the appellant without the Examiner being convinced of error. the latter will clearly and succinctly restate the case, and the grounds of his dissent, to the Controller, and if the Controller's decision does not remove the Examiner's doubts, the case will be submitted for the orders of Government, the Controller sending a copy of the reference to the Chief of the Military Finance Department.

4) All appeals other than those mentioned in Glasses 1 and 2 above, whether personal or written, are to be made to the Controller, and all complaints in respect to delays in auditing or examining accounts, whether of stores or moneys, should be made to the Controller, who will investigate them and see to their settlement under his orders. Appeals must invariably pass through the stages above prescribed; if any be omitted the receiving officer will return the specul for correction of the irregularity.

These rules cancel and modify the existing orders on the subject as in margin. [Para. 10, page 55, Jameson's Code; Para. 29 and 38, page 57, ditto; Para: 45, page 220 of 3rd App. to ditto.]

CASH BALANCES.

Though a man who keeps a good balance at his banker's may fairly be considered a safe and prosperous man, the same rule does not necessarily apply to public bodies, who frequently have large sums in hand, either from want of judgment or because the motive for expenditure has passed away. Few persons, for instance, would argue that the Indian Exchequer is overflowing, with a handsome surplus to dispose of, because the Cash Balances just now exceed eighteen millions, whereas two-thirds of that amount were regarded as more than sufficient for all the requirements of the Government when Lord Dalhousie was Governor general. It is at once seen that the greatly increased expenditure of the present times necessitates a larger balance in hand than would have been either expedient or justifiable ten years ago. In like manner no sensible man would be disposed to award much praise to those who are answerable for the fact that the sum of £80,000 is lying idle in the Calcutta Treasury, simply from fear of the bugbear Responsibility. The leading Calcutta journal has very properly urged the local Government to take action in this matter, and to utilise the means now going to waste because it is nobody's business to turn them to account. Owing to the munificent charity of the British public very large funds were collected for the alleviation of the misery caused by the late famine in the Upper Provinces. In consequence, however, of the liberal measures adopted by the Indian Government, most efficiently complemented by the generous sympathy of the English residents in that country, the worst crisis was overcome before the arrival of help from home. In ignorance of this, the open-handed people of England continued to give freely to the support of their distressed fellow-subjects in the East until a surplus was formed to the extent of £80,000. The late Lord Mayor, it seems, shrunk from taking back this balance and appropriating it to the relief of the suffering population of Lancashire. His lordship's scruples, as it seems to us, were ill-timed and uncalled for. It was no longer possible to apply the money to the purpose for which it was subscribed, and equally impossible to return it to the subscribers. Nothing could be done with it in India except to lay it aside against the future eventuality of a similar calamity, whereas in this country it could at once be employed in the most praiseworthy and useful manner. The Calcutta authorities amount to the Secretary of State, as soon as The murdered man was a collecting Sircar,

City Magistrate, while much praise is due to the editor of the Englishman for persistently keeping the subject before the public eye, and thus enlisting the all-powerful co-operation of the leading journal at home.

There are other charitable funds which also show Cash Balances, of which their managers would do far better to dispose at once. There still remain assets to the old Fund that was subscribed for the relief of disabled soldiers and sailors at the conclusion of the great Napoleonic war; nor is the Times' Crimean Fund yet exhausted. But these, after all, are as nothing in comparison of the large capital that represents the Indian Mutiny Relief Fund. At the close of last year very nearly a quarter-of a-million sterling was permanently invested in Government Securities, while something over £8,000 was kept in hand to meet casual contingencies. Now, we venture to say that it was never the intention of the subscribers to this Fund to have their donations capitalised, and an expensive system of management-it is estimated at upwards of £11,000-maintained in sæcula sæculorum. They gave largely and promptly that large and prompt relief might be administered to the sufferers, but it assuredly never entered their heads that, while scanty alms were suspiciously doled out to those in actual distress, a quarter-of-a-million was to be invested in order to make ladies and gentlemen of orphans then at the breast. Another time people will hesitate before they yield to the impulse of the moment, nor will they again stint themselves under the idea that they are assisting fellow-creatures in a state of utter bereavement, when they remember that only a few thousand pounds were applied to that purpose on the most urgent occasion on record, while a quarter-ofa-million was quietly set aside to teach the piano and potichomanie to the children of the rank and file. But even if this immense capital be neutralised, why is not the balance of £8,000 handed over to the Mansion-house Fund for the Lancashire Operatives? It is an insult to common sense to talk of new applications. If the Committee had done their duty, no fresh applications would be possible. As it is, we expect to find a new subscription list opened for the relief of sufferers by the Mutiny. At least it would not be more surprising than the assertion that, owing to fresh applications, the balance of £8,000 cannot be applied to the best of all possible purposes. It is not always folly to part readily with money.

CRIME IN CALCUTTA.

IF we may draw any decided conclusions from Mr. Wauchope's able Report on the Police Administration of Calcutta for the year 1861-62, crime flourishes more luxuriantly on the banks of the Thames than on those of the Hooghly. During the twelve months under notice only three murders were committed, and one of these took place in the course of a drunken squabble. One case reminds us of our own police reports, except that the Commissioner of Police ventures to declare that he has no moral doubt of the guilt of two individuals who were arrested, are likewise to blame for not remitting the but acquitted from want of sufficient evidence.

they discovered the timidity of the chief and was waylaid in the evening on his way home. He had on his person the sum of 500 rupees, which the murderers were unable to carry off, though they effected their own escape, notwithstanding that a large number of natives were close to the spot, not one of whom, however, made the slightest effort to intercept their flight. A European inspector, who was on duty not two hundred yards off, came up, of course, when it was all over, and it is significantly remarked that had it not been for a recent reduction of the police force there would have been a chowkedar, or watchman, on duty at the mouth of the dark lane down which the murderers fled. The attempt to reconcile efficiency and parsimony produces only one result, whether in Europe or in Asia. The third case of murder appears to have been of a very atrocious character. A shawlbroker lures a shawl-merchant into his house. where he kills him, and buries him in a grave ready made for the purpose, and into which a quantity of salt is thrown with a view to deface the features of the dead man. The crime was discovered and the murderer executed.

Of manslaughter there were only eight cases, and none of them in any way remarkable, except, perhaps, the following one. A European deserter being conveyed in a dinghee in the custody of a police sergeant, gave the latter a shove and caused him to fall overboard. He immediately jumped into the river, however, to save him, and very nearly lost his own life in the vain attempt. Being brought to trial he was naturally acquitted.

Cutting and wounding, which at one time was an extremely prevalent offence, has almost entirely ceased, there having been only five cases in the whole year. This improvement is attributed by Mr. Wauchope to the closing at sunset of all punch-houses and liquor-shops, in which drunken quarrels most frequently begin. Another cause, no doubt, is the dispersion of the "loafers"-"a European population living by crime." At the commencement of 1861 there were three hundred of these disreputable vagabonds in Calcutta, but the assiduous attentions of the police have compelled them to go forth into the Mofussil, leaving scarcely ten of their number to enjoy the pleasures and opportunities of the Indian metropolis. Highway robbery might almost have been entered as a blank, the only instance being that of a chuprassie, carrying official despatches by a soldier utterly drunk, who was immediately arrested by the police.

Thirty-five cases of burglary were reported, but for the most part they were quite insignificant,-an entry into the house being effected by cutting the string fastening of the matdoor, when a few vessels of brass or ornaments of silver are quietly abstracted. In one instance, indeed, a large amount of property was stolen from the premises of Messrs. Thacker, Spink, and Co., but the Commissioner considers it "very questionable if the case was one of burglary at all." Then, a burglary is often reported to cover a breach of trust. If a pawnbroker, or a silversmith, or any other person entrusted with valuable property, falls under the dominion of his organ of secretiveness, he conceals the coveted goods, and, knocking a hole through the wall, complains to the police of a burglary having been committed. Not unfrequently, however, the fraud is so clumsily managed that detection follows immediately. At one time so small a hole is made that even a child could not have got through; at another, in addition to: the actual hole, it is seen that another had been begun from the inside, and that the operator had left it unfinished from coming upon an unusually hard piece of wood. But it must not be supposed that the professional thieves of Calcutta are less adroit than their brethren in other parts of the world. Let two examples suffice to rescue their reputation from unjust suspicions:-

"A woman was accustomed to sleep on the top of her chest looked, and the keys deposited in the recess of a woosten be I alongside. On waking one morning she found the chest op ned and her pro-At first she did not recollect having off the che t for a moment during the night, but at fast remembered she had done so for a short period and slept on the bed in which the keys were kept. This robbery was committed by a burglar hept. This robbery was committee by a bangain mamed Keemye, who, on entering the house, stole the k-ys from the bed, and when the woman moved off the class, opened it and decamped with the class, opened a classification when his off the class, opened it and decamped with the property. In another case a shopke-per kept his money in an iron-box, which was deposited in a large wood o class with the keys of the ron-box. The was den class was lacked, and on the top of all was One night on waking up he thought his bed was one unit straight, and on examination found the chest on which he slept b oken open, and the keys of the iron box missing. He sent for the police, who, with great difficulty, forced open the box, and discovered his money had been stolen, as he be-lieved, while he slept on the che t. I afterwards ascortained that a servent, in collusion with a very celebrated burgler named Petumber Glose, had induced the shopke-per to go up tairs for a short time before retiring to his bed on the top of the chest, and during his absence the burglar entered and carried off the money.

Simple thefts were tolerably numerous, being set down at 2,683, or slightly in excess of the preceding year, and the property stolen is valued at 136,520 rupees, of which not one-half was ever recovered. The only remarkable point connected with these offences is the not uncommon practice of drugging women of the town in order to rob them of their ornaments. Offenders of this stamp are stated to belong to the respectable classes, and Mr. Wauchope observes :-- " Professional murderers of women are also seldom of the lowest class. A Sircar receiving a good salary was executed not long ago for a murder of this description, and I have the most complete evidence against a writer in an English mercantile house for two murders of women which he committed in Calcutta. A reward of one thousand rupees was offered at the time for his apprehension, but he has succeeded hitherto in eluding the search of the police." In Calcutta, as elsewhere, particular forms of vice prevail for a while like a fashion, or an epidemic.

"One ear hackery-men steal the loads entrusted to them; in another Cooles appropriate property given to them for conveyance; and in the present year the number of domestic thefts by servants has been very great, and the police are quite helpless in their prevention, and nearly so in their detection. The theft is generally not discovered till some time after it has occurred. The master does not know whom to charge; and, as the police have no power to make an airest on their own bare suspic on, the servants have every facility to concent the stolen property. Servants are hired without inquiry and without certificates from their previous employers. Taking advantage of this laxity, I recollect some of our professional thieves going into service as table attendants, and the result may be imagined. One celebrated thief served as kidmutgar in no less than seven nouses under different names, and in each he succeeded in stealing a large amount of property. In not one of them did his master know anything of him except his assumed name. He was eventually transported."

covered that the documents presented to him | From this was deducted the dividend of 31/2 per were fabricated, wrote across them the word "Forgery." The fellow had the assurance to bring an action against him for libel and defamation, and actually recovered twentyfive rupees damages for the injury done to his character. The reports of thefts, moreover, are as often false and exaggerated as in the case of burglaries.

"Jewellers report the theft of gold and silver given to them to make up into ornaments; pawn-brokers of valuables pledged far below their value Masters charge their servants who have left them when long deterred hopes of pay have made their hearts sick, and faithless paramours are accused by their mistresses to force their return. police are continually harassed, not so much in the endeavour to recover the stolen property, as in ascertaining Whether a theft has actually been committed."

We further gather from the Commissioner's Report that during the year 1861-62 "16,662 persons were brought up for trial by the police and by summons, of whom 178 were convicted and 75 acquitted at the sessions, and 9,786 convicted and 6,148 acquitted by the magistrates of Calcutta, 475 having been released without trial. Property valued at 1,58,699 rupees was reported to have been robbed and stolen, of which 62,289 rupees, or nearly 40 per cent., were recovered by the police." The general conduct of the police is described as satisfactory, though "one European and twenty-two native police-officers were convicted and sentenced to imprisonment by the magistrates; fifteen Europeans and 104 natives dismissed from the force, and 3,394 fines inflicted for neglect of duty, of which forty-one were on European officers." On the other hand, 1,346 rupees were paid by the Government as rewards for good service. The Executive Police of Calcutta and the suburbs consist of 1 commissioner, 1 deputycommissioner, 7 superintendents of divisions, 52 European inspectors, 45 European sergeants and constables, 156 native officers, 2.715 native constables, 6 mounted police, 116 manjees, dandees, and peons of the river police. The mounted police are employed solely in the conveyance of messages. During the year, it is stated, very nearly seventy thousand charges, complaints, and applications were made to the Executive Police.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

The report states that the Company stood possessed on the 80th of September last of stock in ships, less the amount set apart for depreciation, amounting to £2,157,956; freehold and leasehold property in England and abroad, £110,412; stock of coals, naval and victualling stores, amounting to £348,370: also cash at. bankers, investments, bills receivable, balances in agents' hands, and debts due to the Company, £766,543; making the total assets £3,383,281. The capital received from the proprietors to that date amounted to £2,100,000, and on debentures to £134,200; total, £2,534,200. The liabilities of the Company in bills, payable and otherwise, amounted to £471,354, making the total capital and liabilities £3,005,554, showing a surplus of £377,727. This surplus was represented by the balance at the credit of the guaranteed insurance and general reserve fund. The gross revenue of the Company from all sources for the year ending the 30th of September last amounted to £2,223,060; and the expenditure, including interest on debentures, with the reserves for incorance, wear and tear, and depreciation for the same period, amounted to £2,061,865, leaving a net, cent. paid for the half-year ending the 31st of March last, £73,500, and the same amount recommended for the past half-year, making together £147,000, leaving £26,494 carried to depreciation account. The proprietors' underwriting account showed that the annual premium of 5 per cent. on the estimated value of the floating property of the Company for the year was £105,000, out of which was proposed to be deducted £81,000 payment to the proprietors at the rate of 4 per cent. leaving £21,000 carried to the guarantee, insurance, and general reserve fund, making the total amount of that fund £377.727. Since the date of the last report the directors had contracted for three new screw shins, of about 2,000 tons each. builders' measurement. Those vessels were to be fitted with engines of 400-horse power. Poonah was launched on the 8th of November, and was now being fitted with her machinery; the Carnatic would be launched on the 8th inst. and the Rangoon in the month of February. There were thus seven new ships, averaging upwards of 2,000 tons each, in progress for the maintenance and extension of the Company's operations. The great system of postal communication now carried on by the Company's steamers had nover been worked with more regularity than during the last twelve months. The directors recommended the usual dividend of 31 per cent. for the past half-year, and 4 per cent. from the underwriting account, making in all 71 ner cent., which would be payable, free of Incometax, on the 26th inst. Mr. Arthur Anderson bes been elected chairman of the Company, in the place of the late Mr. Willeox, and Mr. C. H. C. Plowden to fill the vacancy in the direction.

ENFACED PROMISSORY NOTES.

The following answer has been returned by the Secretary of State for India to a request made by Messrs. Crawford, Colvin, and Co., Forbes and Co., Matheson and Co., and others interested in East Indian Securities, for greater facilities in the means of retransmitting to India Enfaced Promissory Notes of the Indian Government:-

"India-office, S.W., Nov. 28, 1862. "GENTLEMEN,-With reference to the letter of the 23rd of June last, signed by yourselves and others, requesting that in future the interest due upon renefaced promissory notes of the Indian Government may be made payable either at Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, at the option of the holder, I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to inform you that, having communicated with the Government of India on the subject, Sir Charles Wood does not object to the introduction of the change proposed; but that, in order to give time for the necessary preparations at the Bank of England, he is of opinion that it should not take effect until the 1st of January, 1863. I am to add, in order to prevent misapprehension, that, when new notes are required in lieu of cancelled notes, they can only be obtained, as heretofore, from the Loan-office at Calcutta.-I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

"T. G. BARING"

CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.

The report states that on the 28th of June last a portion of the scaffolding and of the temporary brick pillars erected at the Piallee for placing the girders of the bridge gave way, and though of course the future stability and security of the bridge itself will be in no way affected by this occurrence, it has rendered necessary a renewal and strengthening of the preparatory works, which has occasioned an unfortunate delay. This accident will not retard the opening of the line for a longer period than two months beyond the contemplated time; thus substituting the 1st of January, 1863, for the 1st of November, 1862. Arrangements were in course of being made in India to establish a communication with the Mntlah in the beginning of November sufficient to enable the proprietors of the town lots to commence operations at the new port immediately after the rains. The screw-pile jetty for the Muslah, which has received the sanction of Govern ment, will be shipped in the course of next-month. profit of £150,104. To this was added £14,390, Vessels will thus he enabled to deliver their estable balance from last year, making £173,494. goes at once to the railway waggons for conveyance in two hours to Calcutta. The Government have secured a large plot of ground adjoining the terminus at Calentta, on which they are now engaged in erecting a market for the accommoda tion of the firewood, fish, and vegetables to be conveyed along the line to Coloutta. The directors have raised in shares the whole of the additional capital voted by the shareholders at the last meeting, making the total capital raised in shares and debentures £400,000. The capital account to the 30th of September showed that £378,793 had been received, and £371,788 expended, leaving a balance of £7,005. The amount received for interest from the commencement to the 30th of June last was £34.207.

THE MANUFACTURING DISTRICTS RELIEF FUND.

We beg to call the attention of our readers to the following circular which is being issued by the Central Relief Committee, Manchester, to clergymen and ministers throughout the kingdom. Some time must necessarily clause before the whole are issued, but there is no reason why it should not be at once adopted where practicable :-

FUND FOR THE RELIEF OF DISTRESS IN THE MANUFACTURING DISTRICTS.

"Town-hall, Manchester, 28th November, 1862.

"Rev. and Dear Sir,—The rapid increase of the distress in the manufacturing districts induces the Committee appointed for collecting subscriptions to express a hope that you will kindly consent to carry out the suggestions contained in the accommission of the control of the suggestions of panying resolution, either by a weekly general collection in your church or chapel, or by placing boxes in some prominent place at the doors, for the boxes in some prominent place at the doors, for the special purpose. It is estimated that by this means no less a sum than £27,000 weekly will be available for the purposes of relief, if but £1 weekly be transmitted from every place of worship in the transmitted from every place of worship in the kingdom. The Committee are aware that in mo-t churches and chapels collections have already been charches and chapels collections have already been made in aid of one or more of the funds for the relief of the existing distress; but it is earnestly hoped that the urgency of the occasion will induce all classes to make personal sacrifices, and that you may have no difficulty in acceding to the present proposal without in any degree interfering with your ordinary funds. The Committee would venture to suggest that some means be adopted to bring the subject specially before your congregation weekly, with the view of urging each individual to contribute some from a penny per week upwards though this channel. We penny per week upwards through this channel. We shill feel obliged if you will kindly favour us with an early renly, addressed as directed below, and remain, yours respectfully.

"ABLL HEYWOOD, Mayor, Chairman.

"JOHN WM. MACLURE, Hon. Sec.

Resolved .- "That a circular be addressed to every clergyman and minister of religion in the kingdom, urging the importance of instituting a weekly or monthly subscription for the relief o: the distress in the cotton districts, and that such circular shall be signed by the mayor, and state the mode in which payments be made."

Subscriptions may be paid through any banker to the credit of the Fund with Mesers. Heywood Bros. and Co., Manchester (whose London agentare Messrs. Masterman and Co.), or they may be remitted by post, addressed to the honorary secretary, J. W. Maclure, Esq., 21, New Cannonstreet, Manchester. Drafts, cheques, post office orders, &c., should be drawn in favour of Hey wood Bros. and Co.

THE NEW INDIAN FINANCE MINISTER.-The following letter has been received at the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, from Sir Charles Trevelyan: - "Grosvenor-crescent, December 3, 1862 .- Sir,-I have had the pleasure of receiving your letter stating that the directors of the Chamher of Commerce of Manchester have unanimously resolved to present me with an address on my appointment as Financial Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, and requesting me to name a convenient time for receiving it. I feel highly honoured by the resolution of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, and knowing how much the interests of our manufacturing districts are bound up with those of India. I should have had much satisfaction in conferring with the directors upon any subjects of present importance, but this is rendered impossible by my having to embark at Southampton with my family to-morrow morning. Happily the public discussions relating to India have been so frequent and ample of late that a substantial ngreement has been arrived at as to the wants of that great country and the principles upon which it ought to be governed; and I shall have the privilege of co-operating as a member of Lord: Elgin's Government in giving practical effect to plans in which the interests of England and India are equally concerned.—I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient humble servant, C. E. TREVEL-YAN.—High Fleming, Esq., Secretary to the Chamber of Commerce, Manchester."

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The specie taken by the Ripon, India and China mail packet, on the 4th inst., amounted to £264,114, of which £21,275 in Gold was for Alexandria, £5,000 in gold for Caylon, £3,430 in gold and £125,050 in silver for India, and £6,000 in gold and £103,359 in silver for China and the Straits.

PLANTATION COMPANY.—A prospectus has been issued of the Plantation Company of Western Hindostan, with a capital of £270,000, in shares of £5. The company propose to cultivate coffee, cinchone, and other products, on some estates in Madras, comprising 6,000 acres. The first issue of shares is to be limited to £50.000.

No. 248, Gresham House, Old Broad-street.

The Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Bank Corporation (Limited) is established for the purpose of extending the legitimate facilities of Banking to the extensive and rapidly-improving provinces of Sciede, the Punjab and the Delhi territory.

These provinces are not only important from their geographical positions, but from their commercial relations—communicating on the east with the valley of the Ganges, on the west and north-west with Persia and Central Asia, and on the sunh-west with the Indian Ocean at Nurrachee. Scinde and the Panjab cover an a ca of 130,000 square miles, and contain a possible on exceeding that of Great Britain.

Kurrachee has been declared to be a warehousing port from the 1st September, 1862, and i., acc.-rdinz to the Kryport of the Chamber of Commer e for 1861-62, "probably the easiest to approach of any in the world; so much so, that there is not a sea-going pilor attached to it."

The following statistics, take from official sources show clearly how rapidly and steadily the external trade of Scinde has augmented:—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Total
1543-44	121,150	1 010	122,160
1848-49	344.715	107.133	451.8 9
1853-54	508,793	376 310	885,103
1858-59	1.540,600	1.044.200	2,584,800
1861-62	1.604.830	1,361,724	2.966.534

Mr. P. M. Dalzell, the Collector of Customs at Kurrachee, states that "this remarkable increase is not attributable to an fortuitous cause, but is perfectly natural, and proves how cast the resources of the country must b." As regards the Punjab, the trade of Umritsur alone has been officially valued at three and a haif millions sterling per annum. Umritsur is the chief emporium for the commercial relations not only with Persia and Torkey, but with Marseilles, Paris, London, and other European cities.

Delhi must also, with railway communication, become a great central entreph in Upper India, similar to Umritsur in the Punjab, though on a vasily x-ended scale. Its trade in 1860 amounted in value to £4,000,0 0 sterit g.

The support of the Directors of the Schiede, Punjab, and Delhi Railways, and the Indias Steam Flot Ila (the united capital of these undertakings amounting to six millions stering) has been secured to this bank, and application has be made for the privilege of circulating the notes of the Governmen, and of participating in the other advantages conceded to backs in india.

An increase of humbing facilities in this great section of

and of participating in the other advantages conceded to banks in India.

An increase of banking facilities in this great section of our Indian empire has for some time been a desideratum. So far back as 1.54, Sir Bar le Frere, then commissioner in Scinde (now Governor of Bombay), in his official report for that year, observed that "A banking establishment is also required, but this might be left to the regular course of trade to supply."

The success of banks connected with India appears by the

ROBERT GORDON LATHAM, M.A., M.D., F.R.S., &c.

The Illustrations drawn on Wood expressly for the Work, by PAUL J. NAFTEL, Member of the London Society of Painters in Water Colours.

"The 'Channel Islands' is an excellent book of its class—well conceived, well written, well illustrated, well printed. It is the produce of many mands, and every hand a good one. Nearly every thing which a man can desire to know about Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sars—about their lastory, Geography, and natural lastory—Professor Ansted and Dr. Latham have contrived to tell. Altogether the contents of the volume are as varied and interesting as a well-sustaines drama; and to this drama no more grace of an apicture spee scenery could have been furnisher than we find in the thus rations so profusely given by artists worthy of the subject and equal to their worth—Paul Naftel and M. Petgre Le Lièvre. The result is not a mere y handsome volume of the old 'Ke psake' style, made to sell and be looked at but a book or rare ment and value, made for instruction and desight, to be read with pleasure and to be referred to with profit,"—Athenæun, Nov. 15, 1862.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories submitted into Cohectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company, On six sheets Size, 5 ft. 6 in high; 5 ft. 8 in, wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case £2, 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3, 3s.

The theet kept in view in compiling this map has been to The object kept in view in compiling this man has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this our ose the manes of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectionates, with their rames, are distinctly indicated. The redways and telegraphs are laid down, and the took roots conspictionally coloured. The newly-needing district in Burnoli is included. To avoid, however, the contaston consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted and that a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN AND CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY.—CHANCE, LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo cloth, 15s.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Contens the apolite. . . . Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by sevely man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that noth ng mew and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady or ogress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics itself, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1862.

"Many a tauxist this ansurance."

MEMORABLE EVENTS of MODERN HISTORY. By J. G. EDGAR. Author of the "Boy-bood of Great Men," &c., &c. With Illustrations. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"A practical writer, with a high sense of his obligations as an instructor of children. Mr. J. G. Edgar never makes a contribution to juvenile literature that does not deserve a certain measure of commendation. We can conscientiously recommend it "Memorable Events" as a work at the same time entertaining and useful."—Athengum, March 6, 1862.

"Mr Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaftected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enviable talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-hearths, and of so de-cribing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. His last ('Memorable Events') is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agreeable, highminder, and relable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and failure."—Spectator.

By Ducan Forbes, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes atout fight for the Hundoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilized and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than chessplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative y mology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the mainers and cu-toms of different countries, to a degree that would not be stall anticipated by a person who conten eabimself by reading the tide-page. All this information is given, not in any annated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Herald.

"Mr. Young is well-known as the author of undoubtedly the best treatise on the 'Theory of Equations' which is to be found in our language—a treatise distinguished by originality of thought, great learning, and admirable perspicuity. Nor are these qualities wanting in the work wich we are reviewing.

Cons dering the difficulty of the task which Mr. Young has undertaken to discharge, and the extent of useful knowledge he has succeeded in imparing accurately and lucidly in so small a compass, we can without hesitation comend this work to the public as by far the heat elementary course of mathematics in our language."—The London Review, April 6, 1861.

MAILS TO INDIA.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—These for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 1sth of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including muls for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southannton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates fills on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay mail of the 27th November announces the death of the Maharajah of Patiala, which took place on the 13th of that month. At the most critical period of the Sepoy mutiny, and at a time when the position of the British in Upper India appeared almost untenable, his Highness loyally and faithfully adhered to his engagements, and by his example confirmed the wavering allegiance of the minor States. His services were of the highest order, and were frankly recognised by Lord Canning. As a member of the Governorgeneral's Council the Maharajah displayed both dignity and intelligence, and his administration of his own territories has ever been marked by mildness and sagacity.

Lord Elgin has been winning golden opinions from the Calcutta community by his debonnaire demeanour and good-humoured speech at the great meeting held on behalf of the Lancashire operatives. The speech itself will be found elsewhere. It lacks the stateliness, the clearness, the conciseness of Lord Canning's oratory, and is chiefly remarkable for an easy bonhommie which is always acceptable when displayed by persons of exalted rank. subscriptions amount to £3,600, including a donation of £200 from his Excellency, £100 from the Lieut.-governor of Bengal, £500 from Messrs. Grant, Smith and Co., #400 from Messrs. Kettlewell, Bullen, and Co., £300 from each of several mercantile firms, and a iew considerable sums from native gentlemen. The Government has wisely resolved to accept the responsibility of placing at the disposal of the Mansion-house Committee the balance of the fund remitted from this country for the relief of the starving population of the Doab. A ball is likewise advertised to be given in the Town-hall, under the patronage of the Governor general, and the vice-patronage of the Lieutenant-governor, when, no doubt, a handsome addition will be made to the fund already collected for the alleviation of the cotton famine.

A hurricane, attended with the loss of at least fifty-two lives, visited the Seychelle Islands on the night of the 11th of November. "Trees," says Colonel Pelly, "were torn up by their roots in all directions, cliffs and masses of earth had slipped down from the hills, burying whole families in their houses; a river had been forced from its natural bed, and had burst through the town, carrying people and houses before it into the sea. The French religious establishment at Mahi was swept away in an instant, burying the Sisters of away in an instant, burying the Sisters of of as likely to supersede the seasons of Charity, some scholars, and a priest, who were George Grey, who will now have leisure to seemingly in the act of morning prayer when visit his friends the garotters.

One sister was swept through the house fell. the town in the torrent, and was picked out just before reaching the sea.

The Commander-in-Chief had passed through Agra after reviewing the troops at that station, and appeared very little the worse for the recent sun stroke by which he was prostrated on his return from Cheenee to Simla. It is to be regretted that Sir Hugh did not avail himself of the excuse for resigning his high office, and thus spare himself the indignity of a recall.

The Bombay Government has appointed a commission to report on the proposed demolition of the ramparts of the town, and on the construction of land defences. Sir William Mansfield has written a very important Minute on the subject, to which we shall refer hereafter at greater length. The same Government has also under consideration a scheme for annexing the island of Salsette to the town and Collectorate of Bombay, and to bring every part of the thus enlarged suburbs near the town by iron roads.

Rumours are afloat of early changes in the Ministry, though not of a nature to lead to a dissolution of the Cabinet. It is currently reported that Sir Charles Wood will be one of the first to be removed from his present post, and this out of deference to the mercantile community connected by trade with India. Now, one of the most potent and chief reasons urged for not depriving the East India Company of the Government of that empire was, that the Secretary of State for the time being would always be liable to have pressure put upon him for the adoption of measures in which private interests, rather than the welfare of India, would be consulted. Sir Charles Wood has all along taken the part of the natives, rather than that of the Manchester school, and of the non-official residents in India. He has thought more of administering even-handed justice to all, and of maintaining the rights of 150,000,000 of his fellow-subjects, than of gratifying the whims, and improving the balance-sheet of a score or two wealthy capitalists or enterprising spectors. The consequence is the revival of ulators. the agitation for his removal from the Indiaoffice to the War Department. We trust, however, that Lord Palmerston and his colleagues will not be guilty of the deplorable weakness of yielding to the machinations and bluster of the Manchester School, wholeled by their former victors and of emboldened by their former victory, and of allowing the Government of India—and, in-deed, of the British Empire—to drift into the hands of men who postpone patriotism to pelf, and whose only standard of right and wrong is profit and loss. Sir Charles Wood, we hope, will be able to hold his own, and to weather the storm also. Rumour, indeed, points to an able and excellent nobleman as his successor, and if Sir Charles must go, no true friend of India would object to see the Duke of Argyle. installed in the India-office; but for political reasons we deprecate any immediate change. Sir Cornewall Lewis, we may add, is spoken of as likely to supersede the faineant Sir

A GIRDLE ROUND THE EARTH.

The Russian Government make the marvellous announcement that telegraphic messages from all parts of Europe will be received at St. Petersburg for Pekin. Soon the lightning wire will touch the Pacific at the mouth of the Amoor. Thence there is a regular series of islands, such as the Aleutians, separated only by a slight distance from each other, which the aborigines of America doubtless used in their emigration from Asia, when they carried with them such traces of civilisation as the Aztecs and Incas presented to the eyes of the early Spanish conquerors. Thus America will be linked with Asia, and the wire may pass down our colonies of Columbia and Vancouver to San Francisco, which is already in communication with New York. It will then only remain that the abandoned Atlantic cable be reattempted by the route from Labrador to Iceland and the Scottish Isles to fulfil literally the boast of Puck-

"I'll put a girdle round the Earth In forty minutes.

Difficult as it is for even the imagination to realise this result, is it more so than to remember that England and America did send a message by the old cable, and that Calcutta did for days beat pulsations through to London? Ten years will certainly see this accomplished, and the nineteenth century will deserve still more the anathemas of the poet, though in a sense of which he never dreamed-

> "Nil mortalibus arduum est Cœlum ipsum petimus stultitia."

Such being the case we naturally ask ourselves if English skill and capital cannot do for Calcutta what Russian energy will soon accomplish for Pekin? Why should not Melbourne and far Dunedin be en rapport with Liverpool and John o' Groat's? Are our great China merchant princes to depend for their communications with England on a Russian line of wire? It is difficult to say in what position the question of a telegraph through the Euphrates valley is at present. We are pushing on the wire up the east coast of the Gulf of Persia which Nearchus found so inhospitable, and where so many Greeks died of thirst. We find even the savage Jam of Beyla polite, and the Mekran chiefs courteous, and shall always do so as long as our black mail is faithfully paid. No sight is so rare in Khelat as silver. One of our London correspondents tells us that the cable, 1,200 miles long, is being prepared by the Home authorities, with the aid of seven of the wisest electricians. As yet Sir M. Stephenson's Company has not succeeded in extending the cable further down the Red Sea than Jubal, but there can be little doubt it will be carried to Aden. At the worst a land line might be adopted, when the only piece of sea cable required would be across the mouth of the Gulf of Persia, to join the Mekran coast wire. As it is at present, we receive telegraphic intelligence from London only fourteen days old, and the question now is, how is the boon most cheaply and permanently to be extended to the Straits, China and Australia? To solve this a company has been established which professes to represent forty banks and firms trading with China and Australia. Their object they declare to be "to establish telegraphic communication between India and Australia and between India and China, the effect of which will be to bring Australia and China into nearly instantaneous communication with India and with each other, and within sixteen days of Great Britain, besides converting the communication, which is now once a month only to Australia, and once a fortnight to China, into a weekly one to each country.' They first propose, starting from Rangoon, the terminus of the Indian system, to lay a cable a distance of 1,200 miles to Singapore, touching at Amherst for Moulmein, King Island and Penang. Once at Singapore they propose to proceed colonies as well as the Spanish settlements, and making us dependent on the French. Starting again from Singapore they are anxious to extend the Dutch line, which at present works so badly between that island and the east end of Java, to Brisbane, the capital of Queensland, on the east of Australia, which is the present terminus of the Australian telegraphic system. Mr. Gisborne has before projected this series of lines, and the Australian colonies are willing to give a subsidy of £50,000 for their share, but they are inclined to prefer a land line along the route lately discovered by Burke and Wills, and re-traversed by Landsborough and McKinlay. It would certainly be preferable for the present lines in Australia to be continued to the Cambridge Gulf from Adelaide or to Port Essington from Brisbane, for, as a rule, sea lines are to be avoided. The company propose to lay cables three and ahalf times as heavy as that which has failed in the Red Sea, which weighs one ton to a mile. The difference in weight is made by the extra thickness of iron wire outside the core. The iron wires will be covered with a coating of jute, bitumen, and hydraulic mortar to resist corrosion and chemical action.

As an intercolonial conference is about to be held at Melbourne, the subject will be discussed, and, we trust, action of some kind will be taken. India will then become the Eastern centre of talegraphic communication, and the effect on her trade, prosperity, and political intelligence will be enormous.-Friend of India.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

The year 1857 with its numerous horrors and constant threatenings of immediate collision and attack necessitated the first formation of a Volunteer force. Since that time the movement, which in this country had been prompted by crisis that seemed about to involve the life of every European in India, has spread to England, and has become one of the most celebrated in recent history. The Russian war and the Indian mutiny had called forth the spirit and energy of the British nation more than any events since the news of that terrible battle which placed Europe at the feet of the first Napoleon and hastened the dying moments of Mr. Pitt. The ardour with which this movement has been carried out is a sure proof that if trade and commerce have been during the last generation the main features of our national life they at all events have not deadened that spirit without which we have no guarantee for our greatness. It was said that Napoleon, one day boasting of his success in Italy and influence in Europe, was reminded by a distinguished English statesman, then on his way to China, that he had accomplished something more than victory and conquest, he had made England a military nation. The retort was complete, and bears witness to the real cause and origin of the Volunteer movement. It sprang from the restless and aggressive policy of that sovereign, whose empire was peace but whose policy was war, who in commencing the Italian campaign boasted that he was the only potentate in the world who went to war for an idea, and soon after terminated it by the annexation of a province.

The reorganisation of a Volunteer force in India seems to be the result of the movement in England spreading to Englishmen abroad. The spirit of war is the predominant passion of the hour, and its curse is felt in every quarter of the world. The two extremities of East and West are torn with the convulsion of a sangninary strife, and bear witness to its horror and desolation. Europe teems with armed men, and European nations face bankruptcy and ruin rather than dis-band a single soldier. With the commencement of the cold season we have in India indications of the revival of the Volunteer spirit in different parts of the country. In Calcutta 250 members are already enrolled, and the rules which are to be strictly observed, on pain of dismissal from the force, Per str. and to consist of a captain, a lieutenant, an ensign, five sergeants, and four corporals; the commandant to be a military officer, elected by the whole indeed, I look around me and see the distin corps, subject to the approval of Government. guished personages who surround me on this The arms and accourrements will be provided by Government, on the responsibility of the commanding officer. Ammunition for the purpose of target practice, and blank cartridges for parade, must be indented for, within certain limits, by the commanding officer. Should a larger amount be required than is sanctioned by the Government, the funds of the company will be resorted to We hope that the corps will prove successful, and hail its establishment as a step in the right direction, and an indication of a general desire on the part of the European community to be able to defend themselves with spirit if called upon to do | I recognise them as the representatives of a class so. The example will no doubt be adopted in many parts of the Mofussil, where Volunteer corps do not already exist, and it is easy to fore see that it will prove of considerable service, both in a social as well as a political point of view.

In fact, we are already able to chronicle the enrolment of the Behar Mounted Rifle Corps, the Lieut. governor expressing his high appreciation of the loyalty and public spirit which produced the tender of their services. The marked satisfaction of the Government was shown by meeting the movement with a grant of arms, ammunition, and accoutrements. A cavalry officer is to be appointed as drill instructor, and the general commanding the Benares division will arrange for an annual inspection of the corps. Thus encouraged, the corps met together for the first time at Muzufferpore on the 20th of October last, and commenced their military duties under the superintendence of Lieut. Metcalfe. We understand that the corps presented a most martial appearance, that the fine climate of Tirhoot had imparted an unwonted health and vigour to the members, many of whom had been from ten to sixteen years in the country, and that the military bearing of the commander was equalled by the active energies of the lieutenant. The meeting, which lasted for three days, was a reunion of inhabitants of the same district, who would otherwise rarely meet. The example may well be followed by other districts, not merely for the public purposes of the corps, but also as a means of establishing friendship and good will amongst a particular fraternity.-Friend of India.

PUBLIC MEETING IN CALCUTTA ON THE DISTRESS IN THE COTTON DISTRICTS OF ENGLAND.

On Thursday evening, the 6th Nov., a great public meeting, called by the Sheriff, was held in the Town Hall of Calcutta. The hall was crowded as it seldom is, all classes of the community, European and native, official and non-official, being present. Accommodation was provided for ladies also. A few minutes after nine o'clock his Excellency the Viceroy arrived, attended by his staff, and at once took his seat in the Chair of State. On his right, on the platform, were H.H. the Lieut.-governor of Bengal, Mr. Cowie, the Sheriff, Rajah Deonarain Singh, and Mr. Jen nings, Master of the Trades' Association; on his left, Archdeacon Pratt; Mr. T. Cowie, the Advocate-general; Mr. J. H. Fergusson, merchant; Mr. Bullen, President of the Chamber of Commerce; the Rev. Dr. Duff and Rajah Rhadakant Deb. In front were the members of Council, the Chief Justice and Judges of the High Court, General Showers, and the Secretaries to Government. We abridge the report of the speeches from the Englishman. Lord Elgin's occupied nearly an hour in delivery, and Dr. Duff's somewhat more than an hour. The meeting broke up at twelve o'clock :-

Lord Elgin, who was greeted with loud applause, said:—The circumstances which have brought us together this evening are painfully present to the minds of all of us who are here as sembled; so much so, indeed, as to render it un necessary for me to occupy your attention at any length, or in fact to do more than remind you of the purpose for which we have met-(applause). I am sure also that were it necessary to offer any would, at some time or another, bear abundant applied to relieve home distress. I have no hear clusive of officers, who are to be elected by the men, | matters of detail in order to stimulate your zeal (interest—(loud applause). I go further, and in the cause, the gentlemen who will follow me would relieve me of all difficulty. platform, and whose support I may rely on in discharging the duty of your chairman; when among them I recognise statesmen who have already rendered great services to India, and those who give promise of a future career which will entitle them to a nation's gratitude, I feel still more how much lighter my task will be-(hear, hear). I gather also the same confidence from seeing round me a class of gentlemen, independent so far as regards the conduct of any public offices, but who have gained an honourable name in commercial pursuits - (hear, hear). who are endeavouring to apply in India that capital, enterprise, and energy which is the characteristic of the British character-(hear, hear). I see others, again, who have gained distinction by labours which have involved a life-long struggle against ignorance and the vice and crimes that arise from ignorance, men who labour with a zeal that never flags, and who speak with an eloquence never known to fail, and who cannot fail to find that in the future their efforts will have borne fruit-(hear, hear). Thus surrounded, I feel that the task which has devolved upon me as your chairman is but a light one; but, nevertheless, I trust that I may be permitted to say at the outset, and I speak merely for myself, that it is to me a source of sincere gratification to preside at such a meeting as this, and to find that, notwithstanding the occurrences of a few years ago, the object we have in view is supported as to-night by all classes and conditions of our fellow subjects-(hear, hear). I cannot avoid saying that in this matter a debt of gratitude is due to the Chamber of Commerce and my excellent friend Mr. Bullen, for the preliminary efforts they have made by collecting subscriptions to relieve our famishing countrymen. At the same time I feel happy in having this opportunity of expressing the sense I entertain of the interest and sympathy which has been exhibited in this cause by native gentlemen-(hear). Several chiefs have given most handsome subscriptions, and only quite recently I have received information from the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab that he has remitted to the Lord Mayor of London Rs. 20,000, subscribed by the Chiefs of Puttialla, Jheend, and Nubba. It is well that we should be thus reminded that whatever differences there may be between individuals or between races, it is shown on this occasion that we are all united in one common bond-that of aiding suffering and misfortune-(hear, hear). It is a remarkable fact, and an instructive one, that in our own language the very expression "humanity"-which in its first meaning includes the whole family of mankind, in its second meaning and classes of the great family—is significant implies this bond which brings together all races forgotten the conduct of the British public during the famine which occurred in the North-West Provinces only two years ago? A large district of India was subjected to a frightful scourge, and when fellow-creatures were in distress, how did the British nation come forward?-I do not wish to revive or to dwell (hear, hear). upon the painful considerations which have rendered it necessary to take steps on behalf of our famishing countrymen in Lancashire; but I think that I have a right to remind you of the charity exercised at home when distress prevailed in this country. There had been occurrences upon which I will not dwell, but this I may say, that I do not think that it would be too much to assume that relief was received from England from many persons who themselves had been rendered mourners by losses sustained through the passions which were rampant in the evil times to which I have alluded; and I believe much has been given to relieve the sufferers in the Northwest by Englishmen who themselves had suffered from occurrences comparatively recent, but who felt that their mite put into the treasury of God

I say that, in my opinion, the operatives in Lancashire have claims upon us founded on special grounds. Whether we look to the cause of the calamity which has befallen them, ex to the heroism with which it has been endured. we must admit that it is a calamity almost without a parallel in the annals of human suffering. It has not been a calamity attributable to any one of those mysterious and overwhelming dispensations of Providence which generally follow imprudence or want of foresight. This calamity has been brought about by causes and by deeds over which the sufferers could have exercised no control, and against which no foresight could have provided. I myself know America well. I have spent some of the best years of my life, and have received much kindness there; and interested in the welfare of the people of that country, as I naturally must be, I cannot but feel regret when I compare its present condition to its former one. When I see that, in a country which was formerly one of the highest apparages of the British Crown, now the black flag is to be raised. and to float over its once peaceful fields and hanny homesteads, I cannot refrain from deeply regretting that such should be the case-(hear, hear). The spectacle, however, which we have more especially to contemplate to-night, a sad one, is an instructive one. From it we cannot fail to draw the lesson that conciliation, mutual support, and forbearance, or even at times compromise, constitute the lubricating oil of the pivot upon which human affairs turn. There is something inexpressibly sad and heartrending in the consideration that in England there are at present thousands of hard-working frugal labourers, persons who have been in the habit of laying by year after year something to support themselves should the evil day arrive, or who have saved small sums to purchase some cheap and modest ornaments to add to the comfort of their homes, and that they are now compelled gradually to part with everything. First with the ornaments I have mentioned, then with their little savings, and finally by becoming stipendiaries, to part with that jewel of great price. perhaps the most precious in their casket, and the one most reluctantly parted with by an Englishman-I mean the sense of self-reliance and honest independence - (loud applause.) There is one thing which this event teaches us, which I think should be borne in mind by every employer of labour. We are taught from the conduct of these suffering fellow citizens that now, above all times, all endeavour should be steadily directed towards the improvement and amelioration of the condition of the operative classes. During the last four years great efforts have been made in that direction. Education has been earnestly promoted; laws against combination have been withdrawn; those laws which have removed the restrictions upon the importation of cheap food, changes founded upon the soundest principles of political economy, have been introduced, but more still has to be done. And when we add the consideration that, on the other hand, restrictions have been placed on capital by such enactments as the Factory Acts, I think we have opened up & very interesting line of thought. There is another consideration which I think ought to weight with us in India, and which I think would strengthen this appeal in behalf of these suffering and deserving classes, and about which I should like to say a few words if your patience is not exhausted-(loud cries of hear, hear; and cheers). It has been said that this calamity in England is India's opportunity. Now, I am not going to ask whether or not India, in this crisis, has done all that she ought to have done, nor am I going to discuss the question. This, havever, I will say, that the Government of India strongly feel that it is their bounden day to do everything that they can do which can in any way enable India to take advantage of any opportunity which may be afforded her. It has been suggested, in reference to the occasion of our meeting to-night, that a surplus which remains of the fund subscribed at home should now be tation in making this declaration most emphatically, that our principles-principles I believe of true political economy, and which should regulate the conduct of statesmen-do not lead us to the conclusion that we can ourselves apply that fund. I do not deprecate discussion. On the contrary, I wish it, and I am grateful to those persons, whether they be public writers or others, who, by applying their reasoning faculties add to the general stock of knowledge on this important subject. I think that, as a general rule, and having regard to the interest of truth, discussion as a means of influencing opinion is the only strue appeal to reason as distinguished from · feeling. At the same time discussion should abe conducted with calm coolness; but let me not be misunderstood. If public writers think that they cannot argue with eloquence without slowing feeling, for God's sake let them give utterance to their opinions. It would be much . better than to deprive us of the spark which concussion with thirt may kindle and which may give rice to illumination from which we may all gather light-(hear, hear, and laughter). Ι myself rather swallow a whole bushel of chaff than lose the precious grains of truth which may be somewhere or another scattered in it-(cheers and hughter). To return, however, to the question of remitting to England the surplus of the fund raised for the relief of the sufferers during the famino of 1860. That was a proposal which met with the frankest and most perfect consideration of the Government of India, and in reference to it I frankly say that the suggestion was a much easier one to make than to be adopted by the Government of India. At the time when that surplus remained it was not impossible that another crisis might occur in which it would prove of great service for the relief of sufferers who might drave been considered entitled to aid from it. I am always myself desirous of being perfectly frank, and I take upon myself the responsibility of saving for myself that I did not think that under the circumstances we were justified in so coplying that fund. Circumstances, however, have since materially changed, and I have only this day received a communication from Bombay informing me that, thanks to the gracious inter vention of Providence, the apprehended drought has not occurred, and there is little probability of any assistance being required from that fund. Under these circumstances, we have thought it regist to inform the Lord Mayor of London that when the exact amount of the surplus is calcu Cated, he will be at liberty to apply it in any way he thinks will meet the views of English subscribers, and if he draw upon us for our suffering fellow-countrymen in Lancashire we will honour the draft.

His lordship resumed his seat amidst loud and protracted cheering.

The Venerable the Archdeacon of Calcutta, seconded by Mr. J. H. Fergusson, moved the first resolution:—

"That this meeting, deeply sympathising with the population of the manufacturing districts in the districts which has overtaken them through the interruption of the usual supply of raw cotton from America,; and recognising the duty of all fellow-subjects of these suffering people to conribute towards the relief of their distress, resolves that a public subscription be opened for that purpose, and that the funds as collected be remitted for distribution to the Lord Mayor of London."

for distribution to the Lord Mayor of London."
The Archdeacon reviewed the extent and nature of the misery in the manufacturing districts, showed that the distress was to be considered as showed that the distress was to be considered as all England's, and not Lancashire's merely; and made a strong appeal to the native community to subscribe largely. When he sat upon the Famine Relief Committee in Calcutta, associated with them was annive gentleman, with whom, after one of their meetings, he had fallen into conversation upon the benevolence of the work upon which they were engaged; and he pointed out to him that Christianity compelled Christians, if they had any conscience, to engage in such undertakings. He replied that the Shasters teach the same: and a plied that the Shasters teach the same: and a rever before seen of order and freedom from riot, day or two afterwards he very obligingly sent the Archdeacon a letter, with some slokas, from the Shasters, beautifully written in the Devanagri, and the English below, setting forth, as the gentleman conceived, this great duty. He mentioned the fact, he said, simply to add that nothing would gratify him more on the present occasion than to see the effect of the Shasters, and to find appended to the list a string of some hundreds of names of the wealthy native gentlemen of Bengal, most of whom had built up their fortunes under the protection, and through the commerce, of the British rule.

Mr. Bullen moved the second resolution.

"That this meeting desires to express its ad miration of the exemplary fortitude with which the sufferers have hitherto borne their severe privations, which strengthens, if it were possible, their claims to the assistance of their fellow subjects."

He thanked his Excellency for the resolution to which he had come as to the disposal of the Famine Fund, and had little doubt that the Lord Mayor would not hesitate under such circumstances in taking upon himself the responsibility suggested in the offer of the Indian Government. He felt equally sure that, were it possible to poll the votes of every individual subscriber to this fund, there would be almost if not entire unanimity in favour of its being so applied; and that if it were made available for the relief of the present distress, England would not be backward in replacing it, should the time again unhappily come when it was needed in this country.

The Rev. Dr. Duff seconded the resolution in a speech of great eloquence. He saw on every side, in newspaper articles and public and private letters, and heard in universal talk, discussions and disputes about the causes of the distress, their sympathy with which had brought them together, and he saw with regret that too often in these discussions the unhappy results in misery and distress to thousands were neglected. He saw endless debates about conflicting remedies, and still, meanwhile, the one outcome which was before them, the prevalent distress, was neglected. Time would bring new duties in this matter, when it would be incumbent on statesmen and philanthropists to investigate those causes and devise preventives for their recurrence. Meanwhile, their present duty was plain before them. It was idle to discuss whether millowners had all done their duty or their best towards it, and even though one such were to be found at his fishery in Norway or another shooting in the North, so be it! Yet before God and man they had to consider each for himself how and in what manner it was best to meet the call made upon their human sympathies, and rouse India to listen to the cry of wretchedness ringing in their ears. His invitation was not to bandy discussion, but to the rescue! Seeing a house on fire and inmates at the top inveloped in smoke and threatened by flame, they would not stop and discuss around the ladder lying at their feet whether the cause of the fire lay in the carelessness of the inmates, or whether, perchance, it could be laid at the door of the municipal commissioners. Witnessing the sad accident on the river which had lately deprived them of some of their valued citizens, with a boat in reach and rowers ready, who would have waited on the shore to decide whether the steersman was in fault or the passengers too careless, or if the river police ought to have been at hand? The cry and the natural response was,—to the rescue! It needed not to harrow them with details, unhappily too plentiful, of individual cases of dire distress, of uncomplaining suffering even unto death. They had but to think upon some such single case and multiply that by thousands, even by hundreds of thousands. He drew a strong picture of the suffering of parents dying without a murmur, yet with strong nature appealing through their dying eyes for their children saved so far from actual starvation by their own self-sacrifice. He expatiated upon a spectacle such as the world had never before seen of order and freedom from riot.

selves, and regarding which they were wholly blameless. He traced this wonderful state of things to education, which had been made a reality among the people; and to a religion which, under the new order of things with archdeacons preaching in the streets and bishops ministering in unconsecrated places, had taken a real hold among them. He pressed the claims of such a suffering class reduced from comparative affluence to a bare subsistence in the face of an approaching winter, and claimed for them, not as a mere duty, but as a privilege from his hearers, a liberal, a more than liberal subscription. No "little mites" for him in such a cause, unless they were really like the widow's mite, which was indeed her all. He did not urgo for merely what could be spared from superfluous luxuries, but such a subscription from each as should involve some sort of self-sacrifice short of which would be a failure of duty. His eloquence then burst forth into an exposition of the retributive workings of Providence among a selfish people; he followed up that with glowing sketches of the blessed visions which would open to them of happiness and safety spread among their suffering fellow-men and fellow-subjects by a full and free exercise of their bounty; and concluded with a fervent invocation of God's blessing upon their united efforts, amidst warm applause.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal then moved that the following gentlemen be appointed as a general committee:—

The Hon. C. Beadon, the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., the Hon. H. B. Harington, the Hon. W. Grey, the Hon. Sir M. L. Wells, the Hon. H. V. Bayley, the Hon. C. B. Rajah Radhakant Deb, in seconding the resolution, said: — Our Hindoo nation has been proverbial for its benevolence and generous feeling; year by year, season after season—nay, day by day, its members of various sects feed hungry mouths, clothe naked limbs, and in various shapes bless the needy by their open-banded charity; the poorest amongst them even collect around him like the patriarchs of old; all the scions of his family glory in supporting them under the severest privations. Cen such a nation—can the Hindoos remain in lethargic rest when and they feel they can alleviate it by their efforts? No; they have only properly to understand the object that claims their benevolence, and they will never belie their national character. Here is a noble opportunity, my friends, to show our characteristic kindly feelings, not merely to our fellow creatures, but towards those who helped us in the hour of distress with what they had earned by the sweat of their brow. It is a most sumptuous feast of generosity; let us all join to partake of it by contributing our mite to this

"In faith and hope the world will disagree, But all mankind's concern is charity

The Advocate-general then proposed the fourth resolution :-

'That this executive Committee be charged to place itself in communication with influential residents of cities and stations in the interior, soliciting their co operation in carrying out the Objects of this meeting."

Rajah Deonarain Singh, speaking in Hindustani, recalled the noble generosity of England to India in the famine year. Now, he said, if we in our turn try to assist those of our benefactors, who are now suffering, and who saved us with a liberal hand in a most disastrous and perilous time, it should not, I think, be thought a mere act of liberality or charity; it should rather be considered as what is due from us. The tie of gratitude binds us strongly to the people of England; besides, it is an established axiom that to assist men in need is the duty of all persons.

Mr. Kilburn, seconded by Mr. Jennings, moved the fifth Resolution.

"That the thanks of this meeting be respectfully offered to his Excellency the Viceroy for presiding on this occasion."

His Excellency returned thanks for the vote of thanks. No duty could possibly be more agreeable to him than one which brought him into contact with the representatives of the Calcutta community, and though his position would not always allow him to interpose, he was always on such occasions as the present most heartily at the service of the Calcutta community. His Excellency also thanked the Lieutenant governor and Mr. Bullen for the way in which they had spoken of his conduct in the matter of the famine fund, deprecated the idea, which, he said, was generally entertained that the amount was a very large one, reminded his hearers that many claims had still to be met, and that only the surplus after such claims had been settled could be made use of, and concluded by a repetition of hearty interest in all matters connected with Calcutta, and a promise that on all great and important occasions similar to the present he was at the order of its inhabitants .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS

THE STAFF CORPS .- We (Englishman) stated on a recent occasion that the Secretary of State for India had sent out an order prohibiting the employment of officers of H.M.'s British regiments in local appointments in India, unless those officers would join the Staff Corps of the Presidency in which they might be serving Furthermore, we now learn that the Governorgeneral and the Commander in Chief have sent home to the Secretary of State for India a recommendation, which we have not the slightest doubt will be attended to, to the effect that all officers of H.M.'s British army serving away from their regiments in any employment whatever in India be called upon at once to elect between joining one of the Staff Corps or vacating their appointments and rejoining their regiments. The intention and object of the recommendation in ques-tion, and of the order from the Secretary of State for India, which should certainly follow it, are perfectly fair and just. When the Staff Corps were established all the officers invited, or permitted, to join were given to understand, if indeed they were not actually promised, that all departmental and staff appointments would, in future, be filled from the cers. The consequence has been that, relying on these inducements, a larger number of officers have, in the case of the Bengal Staff Corps, elected than can be provided for, and thus the members of the corps find themselves disadvantageously situated, when compared with a large number of their brethren, who, still belonging to British regiments, are filling staff appointments of every description all over India. The new order expected out from England in compliance with the recommendation of the Governor-general and Commander-in-Chief will at once remedy this state of atlairs, as doubtless large numbers of the regimental officers who are employed as here described will decline to join the untempting Staff Corps, and will consequently vacate their appointments, which will then fall to the share of those whom we think to be their rightful owners. Certainly the Staff Corps should, in the matter of staff appointments, be the first and the best served; it is their right. And if, after all the officers of that corps are provided for and satisfied, there should be any surplus of appointments, let them by all means be given to the regimentals and the locals. This notice of what we believe to be a coming order will give those concerned plenty of time to consider the course which they will pursue after it shall have been issued-a course which, to whatever side it may tend, ought not to be adopted without the most serious consideration, as it involves no more or less than the entire after-career of the chooser in his profes-

THE "ERYMANTHE."-This splendid steamer. one of the Messageries fleet intended for the Galle and Calcutta line, anchored in the roadstead of Galle on the 31st October. She is a new ship, of about 1,800 tons burthen, and 400horse power, but although commodious and powerful as you may guess from these figures, she is berthed but for eighty passengers. Built in France, she has had all the most recent improvements introduced, both in the engine-room and elsewhere. Outwardly she bespeaks a commander jealous of the neat and trim appearance of his ship, and in the saloon and cabins all that is best calculated to conduce to the comfort of passengers has been provided with a liberal hand, and in a very superior style. The saloon in particular strikes the visitor. Spacious, lofty, and airy, a score of mirrors inserted as panels, give effect to the delusion of space thrice the real extent. The principal cabins are situated on either side of the saloon, and have each two permanent berths and two couches. the latter capable of being transformed into tem porary berths. Those cabins, however, are meant for two passengers only, those of the first class paying the highest fare; and as they are particularly roomy and well ventilated, they are necessarily superior to the principal cabins in the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamers which are fitted with four permanent berths. The cabins of the second class are placed forward, each having four berths. With this single difference they are similar to the cabins of the first class. When I have added that the baths and other appliances are numerous and complete, I think I have exhausted my subject as respects accommodation. With the sleeping apartments ends the distinction between the first and second class passengers, and here it is where the new company will have the pull over the old, without any apparent reduction of the fares. The glass from which the second class passenger imbibes his wine is of precisely the same cut as that which will be used by the first class passengers. The wine itself will be decanted from the same bottle; and the salmi or ragout, of which each may partake, will be taken from the same dish. In other words, the first and second class passengers will mess equally. Here, then, is a very considerable advantage. The successful is a very considerable advantage. merchant and planter—and shall I add, editor, cæteris paribus-will not hesitate to pay a Peninsular and Oriental first-class rate for a cabin in which he will have but one companion, while the less auriferous civilian or soldier will be only too Staff Corps, entrance into which would be held to glad to save £10 or £15 by sharing a cabin with | English judges; the true cure, Christianity

I have been assured that the commissariat arrangements will be such as to leave no grumbling latitude; at all events there is no reason to anticipate anything below the Peninsular and Oriental standard. Unlike that company, in the Messageries Imperiales service, the commanders of the vessels, officers of the Imperial navy, are directly responsible for the provisioning as well as the navigating of their vessels. The fares include a liberal allowance of sound claret, fullbodied sherry, bona fide British beef, and true cognac, while those inclined to pay extra for it may indulge their fancies from a rich selection of genuine French wines .- Ceylon Times.

St. Andrew's Day.-The Scotchmen of Calcutta are in a difficulty. St. Andrew's Day unfortunately falls on a Sunday. What is to be done? As true blue Presbyterians they scorn, as their fathers did, to observe any Saint's day otherwise than after the old national fashion of haggis and whisky. If they were only Englishmen they would probably be content with going to church, but being justly proud of their nationality, and inclined to protest against the uniformity before which all national distinctions and social festivities are disappearing, they determine to give vent to their home-sickness on Monday. the 1st of December. This will cause the postponement of the University examinations for one day. The Hon. W. S. Seton-Karr will make a good chairman.

Mr. Frazer, civil judge of Lucknow, has issued this notice: "Be it known to all concerned, that any person who can give information respecting any instance of bribery or corruption between parties to civil suits and the Umlah of the civil court, may, in person, and on any court day, present a petition on the subject to the civil judge, at the opening of the court, on plain paper." THE COLD SEASON. - The whole official world of the Indian provinces seems to be abroad. It is long since the favoured of the Punjab desended from the hills, and it is possible that India may soon realise the fact of the existence of a Postmaster-general, and Bengal be aware that there is such an officer as the Director of Public Instruction. Commissioners and district officers begin to arrange for their tours; and the subordinates who have enjoyed a resuite during the rains prepare for the ordeal of inspection. The relief of regiments has begun, and Commanders-in-chief as well as Brigadiers and Inspectors-general of Hospitals are on the wing. Sir Hugh Rose has said farewell to Simla for a few months, and will soon revisit some of the scenes of the exploits recorded in his Central India despatches. Sir Hope Grant moves northward to meet him. Sir W. Mansfield has left, not a moment too soon, to inspect the always doubtful fortifications of Aden. Since the French have got Osboc it would be well to look also at Perim, while now efforts must be made by the Bombay Government to counteract the encouragement given by the French to slavery among the Somali tribes, in spite of Lord Dalhousie's treaties with the chiefs. Sir W. Denison has rounded Cape Comorin, and graciously received deputations from the natives and missionaries of Tuticoreen, who seem to us the only people that believe in him-perhaps because they have something to expect from him. Legislation on two days of the week will keep the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal busy after his extensive tour through Eastern Bengal and visit to Darjeeling. Just when the re-animated officials begin to feel exhausted with their cold weather tours, Lord Elgin will begin to move slowly from Agra to Simla, to hide himself in the Hills, unless the usual fatality summons him, like his predecessors, to action in the plains. Simla in 1863 promises to see once more the brilliant days when Lord and Lady William Bentinck added hearty enjoyment to a distinguished circle which revelled in the rich talk of "Tom Macaulay." Meanwhile Calcutta Regislation threatens to pour down in a torrent still more impetuous than we anticipated when Sately we raised a warning note. If Mr. Harrington is now so active as in less than an hour to introduce and expound eight Bills, ranging from a sheriff officer's fees to the amendment of the tariff, what have we to expect now that the real law member has made his apppearance ?- Friend of India.

THE LATE BENGAL ARTILLERY .- It may now be said that the last distinctive institutions of the late Company's Bengal Artillery are being wound pp. and will soon finally disappear. The artillery donot at Meerut was closed on the first day of November, and all the stores were sent to the Agra magazine. The superb artillery band at Meerut will soon be dissolved, and the magnificent mess-house at the same station will be in the market for sale. Brigadier Swinley's command at Meerut ceased also on the day the depot was broken up, and he took up his new command as Brigadier-general of Artillery, with his headexarters at Lucknow. The office of the Assistant Adjutant-general of Artillery has left Meerut for Agra, and Major Frith, who was officiating in Major Johnstone's place, has gone to take command of a battery at Allahabad. The battery of Armstrong guns, under the command of Major Light, is ordered to leave Meerut for Umballah. Thus is broken up and dispersed, with all its accessories, the headquarters of the late Bengal Artiflery; and it now only remains to send a portion of that arm on service out of India, in ender to thoroughly royalise it and to leave it, so far as its former name and distinct existence are econcerned, nothing but the recollection of a long series of glorious exploits thickly strewn through the history of the British conquest of India. En distanan.

THE CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS have formed a fund from which to supply uniforms to deserving youths who may wish to join their ranks, but cannot meet the expense. The strength of the corps is now 250, so that drill officers will be supplied by the State.

DARJEELING, Nov. 7 .- Since the Lieutenantgovernor has left us some of the residents here, and in the stations round about, have received the following notice: - "Your application for land is for the present reserved from the operation of the rule for the sale of waste lands, but the application will remain filed pending orders.—(Sd.) H. E. WAKE, Superintendent." Thus one year has gone, and our capital is nearly expended—all by a simple decision, and men of wealth will now get our land. The delay is too bad. Even if you get land you have to wait the office people's pleasure in granting you the usual letter of assignment. You may dance attendance at the office for a long time, but neither letter nor pottah can you get. The excuse is, "The establishment is so small and the work is so great." The cart road will never be done under the present officers-such dirty jobs do you hear of. No wonder the road is now as backward as it was last November. The Government ought to insist upon contracts being given, and it would prevent officers trading, buying houses, land, &c. The fact is this, the station is going to the dogs, all through the officers that are appointed to look after it. The station roads are dirty and out of repair. Natives are going about our Mall with small-pox, and Europeans are seen in the act of fighting on the road. Such is Darjeeling in November, 1862!-Englishman.

Tumlook, 7th Nov.-We are in a position to state that Government will most probably close the manufacture of Pungah salt after this season, should Cheshire salt continue to be imported in the manner it has found its way into the market during the last six or seven months. Prepara tions for the current season's manufacture are being made, and we understand the salt agent intends to visit the Aurungs very shortly in order to make further arrangements. The terms offered to the Molunghees, who may be willing to manufacture salt for Government, are different from those of other years. Hitherto, the Molunghee used to receive advances for the salt he engaged to manufacture, and he had only to entertain a sufficient number of coolies in order to fulfil his agreement. The salt, as soon as manufactured, was delivered to the Mofussil officers, who were responsible for it until it was transported to the golahs. By the present terms the Molunghee will have to lay out his own capital, and the salt, after it has been manufactured, will be transported by him at his own risk to the depôt, where it will undergo the process of drying, and then stored. The Molunghee will be required to produce the depôt officer's receipt before he is paid for his salt, so that under the present terms no one will possibly enter into engagements with the Government unless he be a man of substance. This alteration is introduced by the Board with a view to do away with the advance system, and the measure, if successfully carried out, will be highly beneficial in its results, for there will be many advantages gained by its introduction, viz., the bhungah or weighing establishment in the Mofussil will have no longer to be entertained, and in the event of the whole Taidad of the year being contracted for, there will be no necessity for keeping so large a Poketanee temporary establishment as has been retained: but we have doubts whether the greater portion of the Molunghees will be able to meet the expenses of manufacture and transport from their own pockets .- Hurkaru.

ARCHERY AT LUCKNOW.—Lucknow, as another evidence of its public spirit, has an Archery Club, managed by a ladies' committee. How much better than the uniform custom of driving in India, by which ladies are deprived of all healthy exercise. Half the illness in Calcutta would be removed if ladies who cannot ride would walk, or play gentle rackets, or form an archery club, or use their limbs and muscles somehow.

GANGES STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The affairs of the Ganges Canal Steam Navigation Company are to be wound up under the Limited Liability Act; the company being unable to meet its liabilities.

CHERBA POONJEE .- In the beginning of the present month, most of the residents having left the station for different places of more security and comfort, and the officers off to Jowai with the main body of the troops, the unlucky remainder have been in a state of panic, so far as regards the women, and something very like it even in the sterner sex. The force at the station on the 8th of November was about fifty rank and file of the 44th N. I., under command of two lieutenants; and some of the wiser of the inhabitants not unnaturally consider that, in the present state of the hill districts, and in view of the insolent assurance of the Jynteans, such a limitation of our force is very like a temptation to those amiable parties to come down in numbers and plunder the station. A body of from two to three hundred of them were known to have come down to the Bhoolagunj at the foot of the Hills, and after prowling about there for several days, they made an attack on Tharria Ghaut on the morning of the 8th Nov., plundered it, killed two men, and destroyed the furniture and other property of two resident gentlemen. the previous evening it had been reported in Cherra that the rebels intended this attack on Tharria, and a party of the 44th N.I., with some men of the police corps, in all about forty men, were sent off under command of Captain Worsley, of the police, to intercept them. When the news arrived in the morning at Cherra of the success of the rebel raid, the detachment of the 44th was sent down, and the station left with not a trained soldier of any sort in it, excepting the four or five sentries on guard at the gaol, the hospital, and the magazine. In the evening, however, they were reinforced by a hundred men sent up as a guard for the Commissioner, Major Houghton. first news of the assault and plunder had been brought up to Cherra by the dak man, who was actually chased by the rebels, and had to leave the high road and get up by another route. Considering how well-informed their scouts keep the Hill men, and how ill-advised our authorities seem to be, on the other hand, of their movements, we wonder with whom would have lain the responsibility of a disaster had the rebels, flushed with their success at Tharria, pushed on at once to Cherra?-Englishman.

SURGEON - MAJORS' ALLOWANCES. major Franklyn, medical member of the Commissariat Commission sitting at the Presidency, in sending in his bill for pay and allowances, drew upon the Government for the Presidency house-rent of his rank-that of a lieut. colonel. He represented that he was away from his regiment, ordered on the public service to the most expensive place in India, and that in choice of quarters he ranked with a lieutenant-colonel. The Government decided that the rank of Surgeon-major was all nonsense as regards any claim to pay, allowances, or emolument whatever; that the grandeur and dignity of the title ought to be quite sufficient for the lucky and exalted possessor, and amply compensate him for any pecuniary loss or injustice, real or imagined; and, in fact, stopped very little short of reminding Dr. Franklyn that he was on an equality with a baronet. Finally, the doctor was adjudged the Presidency house-rent of a captain, it not having been considered at all advisable that he should be lodged in the same liberal and comfortable manner as his equals in rank in the Commissariat Commission; and he receives the same sum of money to provide himself with a house in Calcutta as he would at Pind Dadun Khan or Bunnoo.

GAS IN CALCUTTA.—Arrangements are now completed for lighting with gas the road from Park-street to the Chowringhee-gate of the Fort, along the old course from Government-house to the same point, and from the first of December the Water-gate, Calcutta, and Coolee Bazaar gates, as well as several buildings in the Fort, will be also lighted. This is the first introduction of coal gas on a large scale into any Government establishment in Calcutta.

MR. CAMPBELL, late judicial commissioner of Lucknow, took the customary oaths and his seat as a judge of the High Court of Calcutta on the 11th of November.

Assistant Surgeons .- We (Englishman) are glad to have to congratulate the worst paid class of military officers in this country-the assistant surgeons of H.M.'s British forces on the grant. late and tardy though it be, of justice and equal treatment as regards their brother officers of the Indian army. In the middle of the year 1858, by order of the court of directors, a rule came into force, granting to all assistant surgeons in their service, of and over ten years' standing, the same staff allowance for medical charge of regiments. batteries of artillery, &c., as was drawn by full surgeons, viz., Rs. 300 per month; and the Indian assistant surgeons have for the last four years been paid accordingly. Some time ago an assistant surgeon of one of H.M.'s British regiments in this presidency, seeing and feeling the injustice of the distinction between two bodies of officers of the same class, and serving in the same country, put in a claim for the increased rate of staff allowance, he being in charge of a regiment and over ten years in the service. The claim was refused. The medical officer persevered and went up to Government. The Government referred the matter home to the Horse Guards and the Secretary of State for India, and the result has been that the latter functionary has sent out an order granting the Rs. 300 staff allowance to all royal medical officers, in the same manner as it is enjoyed by those of the Indian service. This boon will not, it is true, be of very wide or frequent application, nor very costly to the State, as the assistant surgeons of the royal army are, as a general rule, promoted to the higher grade before they have served ten years; but nevertheless it will be welcome to that body of officers, who, as a class, have hitherto derived less pecumiary advantages from service in India than any other in the army. The assistant surgeons of H. M.'s British forces serving and to serve hereafter in this country, are indebted to Dr. Govan for the national perseverance with which, in pushing his own claim, he vindicated theirs to equal advantages with the Indian medical officers, but there still remain many disadvantages and drawbacks under which the Queen's assistant surgeons in India suffer, and which we would hope to see swept away by the long delayed, and now almost forgotten, amalgamation scheme, whenever it may come into existence.

THE VICEROY'S LEVEE on the anniversary of the birthday of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, was less numerously attended than on the former occasion. The mistake was made of not officially declaring the day a public holiday. The scene, however, lost none of its brilliancy, and all classes none of their cheerfulness. from the fact that full-dress uniforms were not found to be a burden, the weather now being equal to an Italian autumn. From the animation which pervaded the staff of high officials around the Viceroy, it was evident that they did not fail to take advantage of so favourable an opportunity for studying the faces, bows, and general bearing of the public as they passed his Excellency. There is no position so good for the seeker of the humorous in human nature. Carlyle alone could philosophise upon it with due evnicism.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT .- We (Hurkarn) underatand that the actual expenses in the Medical Department at the Presidency of Bengal, N.-W. Provinces and the Punjab, for the year 1861-62, appear to have been about one crore and twelve takhs of rupees. The probable expenditure, as provided for in the Budget of the year 1862.63, has been estimated at about one crore and fortytwo lakes of rupees, which shows an increase of thirty lakhs of rupees over that of the preceding year. This increase may be accounted for by the several medical establishments which the Government has in contemplation to institute in addition to the existing ones in the territories of Oude, Bohilcund, and the Trans-Sutledge States, where medical arrangements are still considered to be insufficient and incomplete. Besides this a pretty large sum has been reserved to meet the expenses to be incurred in affording medical aid in the tea growing districts of Assam, Cachar, and CENTRAL ASIA.-A Porsian letter, translated by the Lahore Chronicle, represents the Ameer of Cabul as in every way victorious. The people of the district of Herat have acknowledged his sway, those of Samarkand have sent a friendly mes sage, and promised to prevent the Persians from moving, and Persia has sent a vakeel beseeching the Ameer to pardon Sooltan Jan, and promising to pay the Ameer's expenses back to Cabul. He has built two strong forts and other works round Herat, and has 4,000 pioneers daily at work. The old man, still young in spirit, sends this message to his nephew and son-in-law:-- Fight it out until you have been overpowered. Even then shall I give you bread. But behave like a man, and do not show cowardice, for the Afghan name is at stake. Do you remain seated inside, and me out here; let us see who is beaten." must be remembered this is a native account, but the words are characteristic of Dost Mahomed. and remind us of the age of chivalry.

THE ISHERPORE POWDER, WORKS are lying idle. waiting, it is said, for new and improved machinery from England; but we believe it is by no means certain that they will ever manufacture the "villanous compound" again, as considerable supplies of English-made gunpowder are being sent out to this country. The ship Middlesex, just arrived, has brought out three hundred barrels of English gunpowder, with which she is now comfortably lying off town. The Government is of opinion that, if we are all to be blown up into the air, it is itself the best operator to carry out the performance, which should not on any account be left to private pyrotechnists. Any ship captain bringing out a quantity of gunpowder over a few pounds, on his own or on mercantile account, is obliged to bring to at Moyapore and lodge the dangerous stuff in the magazine there, before coming up to Calcutta; but the Government assumes to itself the right to bring off town, and into the midst of the shipping, a quantity of gunpowder sufficient to blow the neighbouring shipping and the adjacent quarter of Calcutta into "smithereens," and save us all the trouble of looking any further after our sublunary affairs.

SIMLA, Nov. 7.—The Commander in Chief returned from his excursion to Cheeni on the evening of the 5th, apparently none the worse for his rough ride and heavy fall beyond Muttiana. He left this for camp at eight o'clock this morning, and was to reach Kalka by dinner hour—smart work—190 miles, in twelve days, with only a day's rest, and this done chiefly with hired hack horses. One or two of the staff waited his return, and the 6th was no day of rest to them. Most of the houses at the western end of the station, where Lord Elgia will reside, have been hired for next season. Several parties have been made up and proceeded to Rampore to see the gathering at the fair, which commenced yesterday, and will last for ten days.

LIEUT, JACKSON. - His Excellency the Com mander in chief has directed the general officer commanding the Lahore division of the army to assemble a court martial at Moultan in the last week of November for the trial of Lieut. Jackson, of the Royal Engineers, for the murder of Mun noo Khan, at Dera Ishmael Khan, in July last The delay which has occurred in bringing the prisoner to trial was occasioned by considerations beneficial to his interests, that is to say, to enable him to procure competent professional advice, which he has secured in the person of a barrister of the Bombay bar, who could not arrange to reach Mooltan at an earlier period than that fixed for the trial. Major Nicolls, one of the witnesses for the prosecution, has lately died, but there are three other European witnesses, each of whom from their respective compounds, and without communication one with the other, saw the assault committed. The native servants of the prisoner who assisted in flogging the deceased Khitmutghar are now in gaol, charged as accomplices in the alleged murder; but in the event of their evidence being required, the authorities have decided to admit them as Queen's evidence, but should it not be required, they will in that case be likewise tried by the regular civil tribunal.-Lahore Chronicle.

UNCOVENANTED ASSOCIATION FUND .-- An institution, termed the "Uncovenanted Association Fund," has been established at Nynee Tal. Tho objects are similar to those of friendly societies in England. Members of the North-West Provinces' Uncovenanted Service are asked to subscribe at the rate of one per cent. on their salaries to a fund which will aid members and their families who suffer from temporary sickness or want of employment, not the result of moral turpitude. It is proposed that those who are aided shall not in any case receive more assistance than the half of their former salaries, and for no longer period than twelve At Madras a similar association has been established. At Calcutta the subject is under agitation, " and it would be a reflection on the acknowledged vigour and superior energy of the men of the North-West if they suffer further delay to occur in taking measures for the improvement of their position and prospects." The objects are good, but we would recommend the members to obtain the services of a professional actuary before adopting the proposed rules and rates.

LOCAL BATTERIES .- Captains T. Pulman and A. H. Heath, of the Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, have arrived at the Presidency, for the purpose of organising and training two new batteries of artillery, one of which is, we believe, to be stationed at Barrackpore, and the other at Dum Dum. These batteries will be formed from the artillery recruits now arriving, and about to arrive, from England, and the local company of artillery now in Fort William. We are glad to see this lattermentioned holy about to be utilised and moved about as "local" does not mean Calcutta, but Indian, and a permanent stay at the presidency must have a Capuan influence on any British troops. The men in question can be utilised all over India or Asia; and as they have availed themselves of the right to be local, they can be detached and removed to their batteries, should those with which they may at any time be serving get orders for Europe.

CASHMERE.—A circular has recently been issued by the Maharajah of Cashmere, to the effect that all liquors taken into Cashmere by European visitors, or accompanied by a letter specifying the name of the officer for whom they are intended, will be considered exempt from duty, but that, when they are sent by merchants for sale, duty will be paid.

OFFICERS AND GENTLEMEN.—The Ondh Gazette states that two young officers of her Majesty's 27th regiment at Gonda have got themselves into a most serious scrape, and that it is likely their case will have to be sent up to the High Court, Calcutta, for trial. The particulars, as related to us, are most revolting, and we can hardly think of anything more unmanly, or more cowardly, than that one Englishman should keep watch while another forcibly dishonoured a woman, almost within sight of the poor terror-stricken husband. The wonder is, that the villagers did not set upon these young "gentlemen," and belabour them to within an inch of their lives. It is said that one of them carried a gun, and this sufficiently accounts for their escape unhurt.

ATTERMT TO MURDER COLONEL GAWLER.—
The Delhi Gazette mentions an attempt on the life of Colonel Gawler, which may yet be followed by the most serious consequences. A thief entered his tent in the head-quarters camp on the night of the 18th of November, one march from Agra, on the Gwalior road. Colonel Gawler made an attempt to seize him, when the man stabbed him with a knife, or dagger, through the chest, underneath the region of the heart. The disturbance aroused a servant, who also, in attempting to capture the thief, was stabbed, we believe mortally. Colonel Gawler lies in a very dangerous state. The deputy magistrate went out yesterday to take his deposition; and, meantime, the criminal has been caught.

THE FIRST NOVEMBER.—Sir R. Montgomery held a Durbar in Lahcre Government House, on the 1st November, for the reception of the nobility and gentry of the district. This date should be similarly observed by heads of provinces throughout India.

MR. SUTHERLAND, the author of a recent very useful publication containing the regulations of the Bengal Code at present in force, has been appointed reporter to the appellate High Court, and will attend to report decisions in the court presided over by Sir Barnes Peacock. The plan usually adopted has been to deliver written judgments, which are duly filed at the Registrar's office. The Chief Justice, however, is accustomed to deliver oral judgments, and the necessity of subsequently writing them, in order that they may be filed, has been found to entail an additional amount of labour which, in the present condition of the arrear file, it is necessary to avoid. The system of reporting judgments by a responsible officer of the court might, we think, with advantage be adopted in the courts of ordinary original jurisdiction.

SHIPWRECKS .- The American steamer Mississippi, of 2,030 tons, Capt. Taylor, was lost in her passage from Monte Video to Hong Kong; passengers and crew saved. The Duke of Lancaster (British ship), of 463 tons, Capt. Balmano, with a cargo of rice from Singapore to Shanghai, has been totally lost near the Island of Formosa.

COMMITTAL OF MR. HEELY .-- A Calcutta paper understands that Mr. Denis Heely, who has been in custody at Jessore on a charge of having been concerned in the affray at Sarulia, has been finally committed for trial, and will be sent to Calcutta under a European escort.

NATIVE CAVALRY. - The following corps of native cavalry will move this season in addition to those included in the relief:-9th battalion from Julpegooree to Cawnpore, 8th battalion from Cawnpore to Seetapore, 5th battalion from Seetapore to Julpegooree.

EX-ROYAL FAMILY OF DELHI.—The Government of India have sanctioned pensions for the destitute members of the ex-royal family of Delhi to the extent of nearly £800 per month.

MR. JOHN LANG, proprietor of the Mofussilite has, it is said, left Meerut for Calcutta, to appear in the High Court, as defendant in a criminal suit instituted against him by Lieut.-Col. Raikes for libel and defamation of character.

THE PEOPLE'S PARK .- The Madras journals are loud in their expression of satisfaction with the People's Park, and its attractions of music, &c., in the evening. The favourite drive on the beach seems to be deserted for the park. In this respect a great improvement has been made in Calcutta. Lord Elgin has established the custom of walking in the Eden Gardens when the fine band and pipers of the 92nd Highlanders Occasionally, he seeks the companionship of a lady. Accordingly, all Calcutta is now to be found in the gardens at dusk, and the weary hour in the cold weather between drive and dinner is thus most pleasantly spent.

HYDERABAD, Nov. 4 .- The Government of India has ordered the construction of a railroad from Sholapoor to Hyderabad. This will unite us to Bombay, and of a railroad from Hyderabad to Kudopah, otherwise Kurpah, which will approximate us to Madras. The larger portion of the community will be satisfied with this; it remains to be seen whether it will not give, as it ought, universal satisfaction. It will, of course, bring many advantages, but that which I take most delight in is, that it will bring persons of various nations and of various opinions to our capital, and instruct our people that there are other ways than their own of thinking. Lord Elgin's orders regarding the Murray case have arrived. The officiating Resident, in regard to Ekhtadar-ool-Moolk, is directed not to invite him to any party at the Residency, by which I understand that he is to hold no intercourse with him, and he is directed to request the Nizam not to admit Ekhtadar-ool-Moolk to the presence when the Resident attends the court. This is sufficient. It marks his lordship's sense of this nobleman's conduct, and will, I hope, be a warning to others, and put down the intrigues which it may almost be said pervades every minute of each day, and almost every great house in this capital. It will bring quiet to his Highness the Nizam, by leaving his mind undisturbed by misrepresentations, and to the people peace by precluding conflict within the capital itself among powerful personages. I must not be supposed as saying that this small lesson by the Governor-General will achieve all things; but as I regard it as the forerunner of a series of similar repressions, several examples having already been made, none reaching so high as the present, I hope to find it more profitable than its antecedents have been. In regard to the Murrays, the papers concerning their case are before the law officers. They must necessarily be brought to trial. trust, however, for the sake of truth and justice, and a proper exposition of the whole case to the English Government, that they may not be tried solely by Native judges and moulvies, but by an English commission if practicable; or else, as has been the practice here heretofore, by a mixed commission of English and Native officers; at all events, under the supervision of an English officer, according to the usage obtaining under & provision in the treaties of all the European Powers with Turkey .- Englishman.

HIGHWAY ROBBERIES IN THE DECCAN .- The Madras Times notices the increase of highway robberies in the Deccan, and especially in the jungly districts of East Berar. The victims are villagers going to or retiring from the weekly markets. The partial famine, which has reduced the price of the common jowary grain from forty-five to twenty seers per rupee, is said to have led to this increase of petty robbery. The Berars have always been under-officered, but they will not be properly cared for till, like Nagpore, they are our own.

POLICE EXTORTION .- Colonel Colbeck, the senior magistrate of police in Madras, having reason to believe that the police are in the habit of extorting from the people parts of the compensation and maintenance money awarded to those who have suffered injury, invites informers that he may punish the guilty with a fine of Rs. 500 and six months' imprisonment.

CAPTAIN SINCLAIR, of the 6th Infantry Hyderabad Contingent, who left Bolarum with his regiment a short time back en ronte for Jaulnah, was stabled by an Arab between Sungum and Bedeah. He was marching some little way in front of his men and met a couple of Arabs on the road. He told them to make room for him to pass; they became impertinent, and high words passed. At last one of the Arabs drew his dirk and stabled Captain Sinclair in the side. Some of the sepoys coming up just at this time, captured the Arabs, who are now on their way to Hyderabad for trial. conduct and gentlemanly bearing between lads Ciptain Sinclair's wound, though severe, is not mortal.

EVANGELISING OFFICIALS.—While the leading officials of the Punjab are making arrangements preparation for Christianity than preaching, which for a general conference of missionaries there, at the other end of the empire, in British Burmah, the high officials preside at and subscribe to a Bible and Tract Society. At the annual meeting on the 2nd of September, at which Colonel Phayre presided, Colonel Sparks said: - "I rejoice exceedingly that I have lived to see the abandonment of that false and degrading policy, which would have prevented you, sir, from presiding over, and me from taking part in, a public meeting like this, which has for its avowed object the evangelisation of the people committed to our charge."

MADRAS HUNT.-The same journal states that the screw steamer Calcutta brought out a pack of hounds for the Madras Hunt. The dogs, thirtyone in number, are beautiful specimens of their race, and have received a thorough training in their work. Already they have been tested and found fully up to the work.

MOUNT ABOO LAWRENCE SCHOOL .- The sixth report of the Mount Aboo Lawrence School, for the Bombay Army, shows an average of fiftyeight children during the past two years. The school seems to be in all respects in a satisfactory state. Mount Aboo is described as a hill detached from the Aravelli range, and standing about 4,500 feet above the sea, in a small tributory State of Scrohi, in Rajpootana. It lies about fifty miles E.N.E. of Deesa in Guzerat, and as far as S.S.W. of Erinpoora in Serohi. The school buildings and grounds cover about four acres. adjoining the church, and there is accommoda-tion for upwards of ninety children. The school stands much in need of subscriptions, and it deserves liberal support.

MADAGASCAR.-M. Lambert, the French envoy to Madagascar, conveyed to the ladies of the Court, as a present from the Empress, crimson trains and skirts covered with embroidery and crinolines. The joy of King Radama's daughters knew no bounds on opening the boxes. One decided on wearing the "cage" over instead of beneath her skirts. The crinolines are said to be of "Thomson's most ingeniously contrived shape," the virtue of which seems to be that they are capable of expanding far beyond the ordinary size. It is too bad of the Empress to deluge Madagascar with such vanities, which can only make their semi-savage wearers ludicrous.

WITCHCRAFT IN BOMBAY .- Eight natives in Bombay have been sentenced to various periods of imprisonment from two to five years, for cutting off a woman's nose under the belief that she had so bewitched the husbands of two of them as to lead to their death. The so-called witch was first bound down to the earth by a rope round her neck and there held, others held her legs, and another, sitting on her chest, deliberately cut a piece off her nose. The victim would probably have been burnt in England two centuries ago, so strong is superstition.

DEMOLITION OF THE RAMPARTS OF BOMBAY The order of Government for the demolition of the ramparts of Bombay has been formally announced, and a commission is sitting for the appropriation of the land for public offices, schools, and hospitals.

FREE CHURCH INSTITUTION. - The Bombay Guardian gives an account of a meeting held by the Rev. Dr. Wilson, of Bombay, of young natives who had been educated in the Free Church In. stitution, and now hold positions of usefulness and respectability. Though the greater part of them had not embraced Christianity, yet they appeared to feel that they had gained morally and intellectually by becoming acquainted with the Scriptures, and with Scriptural works. Nothing is more remarkable than the difference in moral educated in first class missionary schools and those who have been educated in State schools. For this class education does far more as a as occsional and generally evanescent.

DR. HAUG ON PYTHAGORAS .- The Poona Observer reports Dr. Haug's second lecture on the "History of Grecian Philosophy," which was confined chiefly to the great "Sadhoo" or Saint Pythagoras. Describing the Pythagorean institution, which has been compared to Freemasonry except that women might be members, he said its doctrines were kept as very secret as the Brah-mans keep their "shrooties" or Vedic traditions. Dr. Haug remarked that the notion of representing things by numbers was not peculiar to the Pythagorean institution. It was also to be found in the Vedas. In the Aitareya Brahmanam (Rig Veda) 27 is given to the Brahman, 16 to the Kshetrya, 17 to the Veshya, 21 to the Shudra, 5 to cattle, and so on. Dr. Haug said that the whole philosophy of Farmenides bore a striking resemblance to the doctrines of the Upanishads and Vedantism. His Entity was their Brahma. and his Nonentity their Maya. Both agree in the belief that what the senses perceive is unreal like a mirage, called in the Vedant books "gandharvapura," i.e., a town of the heavenly singers. Both agree in the omnipresence of the real or Brahma.

WRECK OF THE P. AND O. Co.'s STEAMER "Colombo."-The following telegram was received in Bombay on Tuesday, the 25th November :- "P. and O. Co.'s steamer Colombo struck on north end of Minicov Island on the morning of the 19th. Passengers and crew all saved. Mails partially saved. Ship become a total wreck. Passengers all well. Send assistance immediately." This telegram reached Bombay about seven P.M., and was shortly afterwards confirmed by another. Fortunately there were seven of the company's vessels lying in the harbour at the time, and Captain Black, with a praiseworthy promptness, at once issued instructions for two of them to be at once prepared for sea. The Ottawa and the Azoff were the vessels selected to proceed to the scene of the disaster; the former left on the evening of the 26th, and will take on the mails and passengers to Suez, the latter was to leave on the 27th, and on her arrival will stay by the wreck to render assistance. As an instance of the energy and zeal displayed by the company's employes in an emergency of this kind, it may be mentioned that, under ordinary circumstances, it would probably have taken three or four days to prepare the Ottawa for sea. coal, provisions, nor water on board; her boilers, moreover, were out of order, and required nearly 150 new tubes. Notwithstanding all this she was fully equipped and ready for sea in less than sixteen hours from the first order being given. Divers were sent in the Ottawa, and Captain Black, the company's superintendent, we believe, proceeds in the Azoff. The unfortunate steamer a hopeless wreck, having parted amidships, and her loss adds another to the long list of casualties this great company have suffered. The Berenice and the Victoria, I.N. steamers, were both placed at the disposal of the P. and O. Company, by Government, but their services were not requird.—Times of India.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM BANNERMAN, of the 3rd Regiment Bombay Native Infantry, is to be appointed commandant of the Guzerat Bheel Corps, in succession to Captain R. Bonnor, proceeded to England on medical certificate.

THE KHOJAHS .- The unhappy differences which ave for some time past been existing in the Khojah community have attracted attention so frequently that a few words as to the cause of their occurrence will, it is hoped, convince the public that the appeal to Government on the part of the more peaceably disposed of the body was necessary for the safety of their lives and interests. The first offence given was the establishment of an English school for the education of the poorer class of Khojahs, which excited the indignation of H. H. Aga Khan (whose object is to keep the Khojahs in complete ignorance, that he may the more easily exact divine honours and service from them). The lives of the promoters of the school were openly threatened, but, thanks to the Times of India, the cause of education triumphed. Chagrined at his failure, the Aga, who is never wanting in expedients, struck out the plan of issuing a paper and requiring all the Khojahs to sign it. It contained among other things an undertaking to renounce the soonce doctrines prevalent among them from the time of their conversion to Mahomedanism, and a promise to introduce new customs and ceremonies after the Sheah doctrines, to acknowledge the supreme authority of the Aga, to allow him to perform in all marriage and funeral ceremonies, and, finally, to invest him with full power as their spiritual and worldly guide in all things. The paper was signed by the ignorant and poorer part of the caste, which, as is generally the case, is more numerous than the wealthier portion of the community, who are known as the Soonee community, or Reformers. Seeing the paper to be a mere slavery bond, they of course refused to sign it, and hence arose the present differences in the caste and its divisions into two sections-one advocating the cause of the Aga and the introduction of Sheah doctrines, while the other remain firm to their old faith, and oppose the growing influence of the ambitious man who is tolerated at their head. When the followers of Aga Khan saw that his hopes were not fulfilled, led by the influence of faunticism, they resorted to violent means, such as assaulting and abusing the opposite party, to terrify them into compliance, thereby causing incessant appeals to the magistrates, before whom the injured party goes for redress and safety. But even this conduct did not gain the wished for object. The Reforming party could not be put down even by violent means, although several of the members through fear of losing their lives drew back somewhat. The next device was to serve several of the members of the community with written notices demanding their compliance with the Aga's demands on pain of being expelled the community, and deprived of the use of the Jamath's property which has been accumulated from contributions made mostly by members of the Reforming party. Their reply to the notice was to the effect that the followers of Aga Khan had no authority whatever to deprive them of access to the Jamath Khanah, to which they are freely entitled. A meeting was then called on the 18th September last, in which it was resolved to take forcible possession of the Jamath Khana, and not to allow the Reforming party to enter it or to use the Jamath's property. A woman related to Mola-dina Soomar (one of the Reforming party) died on the 6th October, and the performance of certain funeral rites which the custom of their caste required necessitated the friends and relatives to go to the Jamath Khana, which, when they reached it, they found to their great surprise shut and barricaded from the inside. The door was knocked at and admittance in the presence of Mr. Forjett This, but fo. asked for, but was refused. the friendly and wise advice of Mr. would have led to serious results. The party composing the funeral procession retired quietly to their homes, leaving the ceremonies undone, which are, according to the customs and notions of the caste, considered essential for the soul of the deceased, and for the comfort and consolation of the friends living. The injured relatives have brought a charge against several of the leading members of Aga Khan's party who were present at the time, and the cause is under investi-

va e medical practitioners in Bombay lately me morialised the Governor against allowing such "unqualified persons" as apothecaries and exs udents of the Medical College, none of whom hold diplomas, to practice. The Governor replies -" Had you grounded your case on any injury to the public arising from the practice of medicine an I surgery by uneducated or unskilful persons, you would at least have shown cause for inquiry. But you indicate, as the object of your memorial, the exclusion from private practice of men who, to much training in the way of regular medical education, have added long and approved practical training in the public hospitals, high official and professional character during prolonged service, and a large measure of public confidence, as shown by the alleged extent of their non-official practice." Even had the anotheraries complained of been worse than they are said to be, interference such as is the case in England would be impossible in India. A little English medicine, unlike a little learning, is not a dangerous thing in India compared with the evil done by purely native

Advances to Ufficers Travelling.

Military Accountant's Office, Fort William,
Oct. 17, 1862.

To the Officiating Assistant Adjutant general,
H.M.'s British Forces.

Sir,—In reply to your letter No. 3,259, dated 11th inst., I have the honour to inform you that the Controller of Military Finance has sanctioned the advances, noted below, to meet the demands of officers proceeding up country in command of detachment of recruits this cold season, and the several divisionals paymasters will be instructed to remit the money accordingly.

The regimental paymasters receiving the advances will be held strictly responsible for their due adjustment within a reasonable time, and I request you will be good enough to impress upon them the necesment within a reasonable time, and I request you will be good enough to impress upon them the necessity of an early settlement.—I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant, o Olineers commanding Divisions, District Regiments, and Batteries. Adj. Gen.'s Office, II.M.'s British Forces, Calcutta, Oct. 22, 1862. Memorandum.

Memorandum.

To enable regimental paymasters to meet the demands which will be made on them under the provisions of paragraph 18 of "Instructions for Officers arriving in India in Command of Drafts," dated Calcutta, Sept. 16, 1861, which, under the present system of limited advances, would be impossible, the Controller of Military Finance has sanctioned (copy of the latter anguest) the density of certain ways. of the letter annexed) the deposit of certain sums with the paymasters of the British infantry regiments at the stations noted. [Benares, Allahabad, Cawipore, Agra, Delhi, Umballa, Mooltan, Meean Meer.

Para. 2. These advances may be taken up at once, but paymasters are responsible that they are repaid into the district treasure-chest on or as soon after

Para. 3. In the event of the relict of one of these regiments taking place during the cold season, the relieved paymaster will make over to his successor any balance in hand, and subsequently remit to him any balance in hand, and subsequently remit to him the money which he advanced to officers commanding drafts; either party will thus be only held responsible for the recovery of the money which has actually been paid out by him, but the paymaster present on the 1st of April at the station where the advance was taken up will adjust with the district paymaster the sum originally drawn from his chest. Paymasters in making these advances will be guided by the period which must necessarily clapse in proceeding from one pay station to another; and it is considered that if they limit their advances accordingly, the sums authorised by the Controller of Lieut. St. G. Kirke, gen. list, inf., with 2nd Goorkha cordingly, the sums authorised by the Controller of Military Finance will be sufficient to meet all de-Lieut. F. W. Macmullen, gen. list, cav., attached to mands which may be made on them.

THE LAST OF THE MOGULS.

THE last of the Moguls has been gathered to his forefathers, though far from the Imperial City in which for so many years he exhibited the "counterfeit presentment" of a King. In the year 1837 Meerza Aboo Zuffur succeeded to his father Akbar Shah, and assumed the more sonorous title of Mahomed Sooraj-oodeen Shah Ghazee. For twenty years he grovelled in the crapulous pleasures of the Imperial sty at Delhi, and might have continued to do so until his death had he not, in an evil hour, cast in his lot with the mutineers from Meerut. Possibly he may have had but little choice in the matter, as his extreme old age, being then nigh to fourscore years and ten, must have rendered him incapable of taking an active part on one side or the other. There is abundant proof, however, that during the eventful siege which ensued, he fully sanctioned all the acts of his sons and their rebellious followers, and lent the magic influence of his name to rouse every Mahomedan in the country to take up arms against the British Government. His own capture and the death of his two sons at the hands of the lamented Hodson are still too familiar to the memories of our readers to need more than a passing allusion. Neither is it necessary to dwell upon the subsequent trial and righteous condemnation of the fallen Prince. His life, indeed, was spared in consideration of his grey hairs and his own utter imbecility, but from that time he has dragged on a wretched existence on the scanty pittance allowed to him by Government, in the company of his favourite Begum Zeemut Mahal and her son Jewan Bukht. And now his chequered career has closed in poverty and exile-the last of the race of Timour that will wear so much as the semblance of a crown. His death created no excitement or sensation among the Mussulman population of Rangoon, and even at Delhi it will be said that nothing is changed—there is only an old man the less. In the words of a well-known writer—the highest authority on all questions relating to the modern history of India-"A name which for more than half-a-century was one of the most splendid figments which the world has ever seen-a title which, whatever might be the fallen state and the personal insignificance of its possessor, was still a living influence, a mighty institution in Hindostan-has now been erased for ever from the list of the princes of the earth." And yet the Government will do well to keep a close watch on their other prisoner, the last King of Oude. It is not impossible that troublesome, if futile, Ally Nucky Khan, in the hope of obtaining of establishment taking place." head of the Mussulmans of Upper India. Still more likely is it that the Nizam will aspire to the titular suzerainty of the Indian Moslemin, and with every prospect of success Under ordinary circumstances it would be of little moment to us upon whom devolves the empty title of Commander of the Faithful, but should times of trouble again arise it may be in the power of the Mussulman Chief to work us no small injury. In any case a little caution will not be misplaced, in the sense of the homely proverb that prevention is better than cure.

EUROPEAN VAGRANCY.

THE rapid increase of European vagrancy in India has at last attracted the serious attention of the local authorities. In our last issue we stated on the authority of Mr. Wauchope that at the commencement of 1861 there were no fewer than three hundred European vagabonds in Calcutta alone, who had no ostensible means of obtaining a livelihood. The attentions of the police, however, had the effect of clearing the capital of these unwelcome guests, but only to disperse them widely through the interior. This result can hardly be deemed satisfactory. In Calcutta their proceedings might have been so closely watched that their evil propensities would find comparatively rare opportunities for indulgence, as seems really to have been the case, whereas in the Mofussil the least harm they can work is to lower the English character in the eyes of the natives. Hitherto, however small might be the attachment and good-will of our coloured brethren, they have been constrained in spite of themselves to recognise and respect the superior moral tone, the industry, the perseverance, the honesty, and truthfulness of their English rulers. this estimate, so creditable to us as a people, is scarcely likely to be maintained if European "loafers" are permitted to wander about the country, preying on the weak and ignorant, and exhibiting the worst vices of civilisation. It was always predicted, indeed, that such would be the case when railways were introduced and the many other improvements that in the first instance demand European labour as well as European supervision. To the sepoy mutiny, however, may be attributed the present plague of vagabonds. Adventurous spirits of all descriptions flocked to India at that time in the hope of "something turning up" in the midst of the general confusion, while many men in very subordinate positions having lost their regular means of support took to soldiering for a time, and to idleness for ever after. Many discharged soldiers, too, for a while accepted employment on the railways, but soon grew weary of the monotonous regularity of their lives and again cast themselves adrift, or were abruptly dismissed for drunkenness and general miscon-Exceptional cases also occasionally occur, where a sober and industrious man may be turned off without any fault on his part, as in the following instance quoted by Sir William Mansfield. A gunner of the Royal Artillery "who gave up the service to become a railway guard, was shortly after suddenly discharged by the Great Indian

But men of the recognition of his dethroned master as the this stamp do not become "loafers," nor, indeed, have they long to wait before meeting with respectable occupation of one sort or another.

"It must happen "-Sir William observesdoubtless often does—that when a firm or company have induced a soldier to take his discharge for the purpose of serving them, they either summarily get rid of him on account of irregular conduct, or be-cause they may have no further call for his services. Soldiers accustomed to live under the strict rule and supervision of military discipline, who, in such circumstances, have exemplary characters, are very liable to change altogether in this respect when the shackles of the regimental system are removed from them. Private employers are well aware of this, but they have many vacancies to fill, such as of railway guards, head porters, clerkships, &c., &c., to find recruits for which her Majesty's regiments are an unfailing resource. At present Government brings out these men at great expense, and, having made soldiers of them, is constantly deprived of their services at the time when they have become their services at the time when they have become most valuable, in consequence of the inducements held out by private employers. The soldiers rarely, perhaps never, take their discharges in the hope of securing employment, but generally under a regular promise of a good situation. They then either buy their discharges themselves, or their freedom is purchased for them, the frequent consequence being, as I believe, early disagreement between the employers and the employed—the dismissal and the destitution of the latter. If a little thought be given to the subject, the conclusion is inevitable—that no check having been imposed by Government or by law, such results must flow from a great industrial develop-ment, such as that which is now proceeding in India, involving the frequent employment of those belong-ing to the British lower classes in situations for which the natives are deemed not to be so well fitted as they are.

Of the existence and dangerous consequences of the evil there is no doubt, but there is much difficulty in devising a remedy. These are not times for interfering with the liberty of the subject, or otherwise the propriety might be suggested of shipping off to those parts of Australia where labour is wanted all those who cannot or will not work for their livelihood in India. Some such measure is almost indispensable, for we cannot afford to lower the prestige of the English name for the sake of a few idle dissolute vagrants steeped in vice and not averse to crime.

NORTH CANARA.

SIR BARTLE FRERE is evidently not disposed to follow the example of the somnolent Governor of the sister Presidency. Whatever he takes in hand he labours to accomplish with all his might of mind and body. There is no danger of the grass growing beneath his feet, though like a good fairy he causes flowers to spring up where he passes, even if his path lie through a desert. Only a few months ago the fine province of North Canara was enveloped in the cloud which seems to have settled down with ever increasing density upon all the territories comprised within the Presidency of Madras. Its capabilities were known to be inferior in no respect to those of the most favoured regions of Southern India; but owing to the apathy of the Local Government there was no means of conveying its surplus produce beyond its own boundaries. and consequently no inducement to grow more than was required for the wants of its own limited population. The inutility of endeavouring to rouse Sir William Denison to any sort of action being sufficiently apparent, the Secretary of State was compelled to adopt the very unusual course of withdrawing the unfortunate province from the feeble government that could not be brought to intrigues may be set on foot by his ex-Minister | Peninsular Railway Company on a reduction | appreciate its valuable resources, or, at least, that took no trouble to turn them to a proper account. In a happy hour for North Canara, it was ruled that it should henceforth form an integral portion of the Western Presidency, and be placed under a more enlightened administration than that of the Indian "Sleepy Hollow." Blessed with a natural harbour of very considerable extent, and naturally adapted for all the requirements of a large coasting trade, North Canara was destitute of any town that could conveniently serve as the seat of its Local Government. There was also this difficulty in selecting a site, that the people dwelling above the ghats and those dwelling below them would be naturally jealous of any preference being shown to one district over the other. At the same time it was impossible to have two capital towns, and thus the Bombay Government was obliged to confine itself entirely to commercial considerations. From this point of view there could be no doubt that the little town of Konay, in the district of Sedasheghur, was by far the most eligible, and accordingly that hitherto unknown spot on the Western Coast is already beginning to afford a spectacle of fervid industry such as that which delighted and astonished the Trojan chief as he looked down upon the rising walls of Carthage. The town is to be laid out so as to obtain the greatest possible amount of sea-frontage, and a topographical survey is to be made of all land within a radius of four or five miles. Until a Municipality can be formed a Provisional Committee is to be appointed, consisting of the Collector and Magistrate for the time being as Chairman, the Superintendent, the Executive and Superintendent Engineers, two intelligent and influential members of the non-official European community, and two Natives—the last four to be selected by the Collector and Magistrate. [The first duty of this Committee will be to decide the following points:-

"I.—The main roads and approaches, the direction and breadth of which should be laid down.—A road from Beitkul, one from Kyga Ghaut, and one along shore, are obvious suggestions, but there may be others which the committee will be best able to decide upon.

"II.—Cross roads.—In laying out these a standard width should be fixed, and the direction of the prevailing winds and other sanitary considerations

"III.—The best position for a railway terminus, and the best line of approach for a railway.—A moderate sea or creek frontage for the terminus will be sufficient, but land must be secured so as to allow of extensions hereafter inland for workshops, ware-houses, &c., to as great an extent as any railway in the Presidency. IV.—Suitable sites for public offices as below given, and for any other that may be considered necessary, should be provided.—Many of these offices will be at Beitkul, some between that and Konay, and probably a few at Konay itself. But the sites of all should be settled at once, and land reserved for them either on the sites selected by Colonel Turner and Mr. Hope, or an any other sites which may be considered preferable. Land must also be reserved for residences for the public officials, on sites as near as may be to their offices.

Nor does Sir Bartle Frere neglect the interests of the interior, while pushing forward the erection of his new capital, destined one day to play no insignificant part in the com-

India. Above all things he directs that not a moment be lost in putting into tolerably good order the roads that communicate with the Kyga and Arbyle Ghats, both above and below. It is particularly urged upon the local officers that the question is not whether the existing lines of roads are the best that could be chosen, neither is it important that the easiest gradient should be obtained. What is at present wanted is simply means to convey to the sea-coast with ease and safety the produce of the interior, leaving to a future opportunity the construction of such roads as the best available engineering skill may hereafter be able to devise.

"A cotton crop far larger and more valuable than any which has ever yet been grown in the Southern Mahratta Country is now growing and will be ready for exportation before the end of the season. The money value of this crop to India is very great, but its value to England cannot be told in money, and every additional thousand bales which we can get down to the sea-coast before the season closes in June may not only save scores of weavers from starvation or crime, but may play no unimportant part in ensuring peace and prosperity to the manufacturing districts of more than one country in Europe. These are not considerations to be weighed Europe. These are not considerations to be weighed against improved gradients, or even a few miles more or less of road to be made. Government know that by the lines on which Captain Baker proposes to by the lines on Which Captain Baker proposes to work, cotton carts can travel, and have travelled, and that by the work which he proposes to do, these roads can be greatly improved, secured, and made still more easy for cart traffic. The utmost which he can fairly spend upon them during this season will be repaid, and more than repaid, by the results of this reasy season without looking to Gutter ware?" be repaid, and more than repaid, by the results this very season, without looking to future years.

These are wise and sensible words, and show that Sir Bartle Frere fully understands the exigencies of the moment, and is prepared to meet them in a straightforward and practical

MR. LAING AND THE BOMBAY ASSOCIA-TION OF NATIVE TRADERS.

Bombay, Oct. 27, 1862.

Sir,-I, on behalf, of the Bombay Association, beg you to accept this expression of their respect and good wishes on the occasion of your retire ment from the post you lately occupied of Financial Member of the Council of the Governorgeneral of India.

Although at a distance from the scene of your recent labours we were by no means unobservant witnesses of the numerous and eminent services which you rendered to the State during your short tenure of office. The change which you have wrought in the financial position of the British Indian Empire within the short period of three years from your assumption of office is wonderful, and indeed unprecedented. On your first arrival in India you found a serious deficit; the cash balances were fallen so low as to threaten insolvency. You left it with a full exchequer and unclouded financial prospects. To your wise and able administration, under Providence, is this marvellous change to be mainly ascribed, and we fondly entertained the hope that you would be able to remain in India to perform public services of equal or still greater importance.

As you have, however, now resigned your honourable and anxious post, and will probably not again return to India, we feel it to be our duty, as representing the native community of Bombay, to record their and our lively feelings of gratitude and the settled conviction that you have fully realised the highest expectations formed by those who knew your abilities of the benefits you would be able to confer on India, and, through India, on England. We deeply regret the circumstances which compelled you to resign your post. At the same time we rejoice to express our belief that the finances of India have been brought by you into such a satisfactory state as amply to justify the remission of taxation and the increase of expenditure on public education and public works which you proposed, in a wise and states mercial and agricultural relations of Southern | manlike spirit as we believe, and which were unanimously agreed to by his Excellency the Governor-general and his Council.

Although you may not again be able to labour on behalf of India in India itself, we hope soon to hear that your health is re established, and that you have re entered Parliament, where, from your practical experience and personal knowledge of this country and its wants, you will be in a position, by our advice and aid, to further all legislation that is calculated to improve its Government, to promote its prosperity, and to develope its inexhaustible resources, for the common benefit of the English and the Indian people.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

JUGSUMATH SUNKERSETT, President, Bombay Association.

Samuel Laing, Esq., London.

Malvern, Nov. 28, 1862.

Sir,-I have received with great gratification the address of the Bombay Association, representing the native community of that important city.

The main object which I invariably proposed to myself while I was responsible for the financial administration of India was to discharge my trust faithfully for all classes of the empire, and to second, to the best of my ability, the efforts of your late lamented Viceroy, Lord Canning, to make the Government of her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria conducive to the welfare and acceptable to the feelings of the 150,000,000 of native population.

The advantage to England of extending her commerce and opening out a field for her capital and enterprise, great as it is, cannot be set in competition with the paramount duty of governing India so as to do the greatest possible good to the greatest number.

Fortunately the two objects are, if rightly understood, identical; and while, on the one hand, the increase of trade and the extension of English capital and enterprise are the most powerful levers to raise the mass of the population, on the other hand, that feeling of confidence and security which can only result from the community being satisfied with the general policy and measures of their Government is the first condition of that commercial success by which alone such capital and enterprise can be attracted to the country.

The restoration of the finances, therefore, to a point which not only extinguished the enormous deficit that had so long shaken credit and caused alarm, but also enabled the Government to repeal obnoxious taxes, extend public works and education, and still show a surplus, was, undoubtedly, a great result. It is a result, however, for which I cannot accept the sole credit, for it never could have been so quickly and so completely attained without the hearty support of Lord Canning, and the cordial aid and advice of many of the ablest men in India, among the foremost of whom I may mention your present Governor, Sir Bartle Frere, whose counsel and friendship during the first trying months of my administration, when imminent bankruptcy stared us in the face, were indeed invaluable.

These perils are now happily past, and I cannot but feel confidence that India is now entering on an era of great material prosperity.

Whether that prosperity shall be permanent, and whether it shall be used in a right spirit, as an instrument towards moral and intellectual progress, rests mainly with those who, like yourselves, are the leaders and representatives of large classes of the native community.

There is nothing in the common origin of the race or in the faculties given by nature, and there will soon be nothing in outward circumstances and in material appliances to prevent India rising to a level with other great nations of the Indo-European family. But a high standard can only he attained by great efforts, and the action of a Government, however wise and fraternal, goes but a little way to supply the place of individual action and example.

Bombay has in this respect taken an honourable lead, and among her native merchants she can already point to men whose public spirit and liberality would be a credit to Liverpool or London.

That Bombay will become every day more and more important as a great commercial emporium is, I think, inevitable.

May it become a centre of civilisation as well as of commerce, radiating improving influences and enlightened ideas, as well as bales of merchandise and boxes of bullion, and may its native community never want leaders with sufficient intelligence to form their own opinions respecting public men and measures, and sufficient independence to express those opinions temperately but firmly on befitting occasions!

I have the honour to remain, your most obedient servant, S. Laing. Jugsumath Sunkersett, Esq., &c., President,

EAST INDIA COMPANY.

A general court of proprietors was held on the 10th at the office of the company, Lothbury, Colonel W. H. Sykes, M.P., in the chair.

The minutes of the last court having been read and cofirmed,

The Secretary read the financial report, exhibiting the state of the Security Fund on the 1st of June last, from which it appeared that the total amount invested at that date was £5,581,647, at a cost of £5,110,043, consisting of £756,420, in the Three per Cent. Consols, and £4,825,227 in the Three per Cent. Reduced. The sum of £26,750 stood at the Bank as dividend. There had since been invested £13,301.

The CHAIRMAN, in moving the adoption of the report, said he had much pleasure in informing the proprietors that their new office was now furnished with all books, papers, and documents necessary for the use of the proprietors generally. After being buffeted about for some time he trusted they had now got a permanent habitation.

The report was then adopted, and after some discussion the proceedings concluded with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

(Before the LORDS JUSTICES of APPEAL.)
LORD V. COLVIN.

This was an appeal from a decision of Vice-Chancellor Kindersley, dismissing a petition with costs. This appeal has been in hearing four days-namely, the 25th of November and the 8th, 9th, and 10th inst. It is a petition presented by Captain and Mrs. Moorhouse (that lady being the daughter of the late Dr. Peter Cochrane, of the Indian Medical Service, by Raheem Bebee, a native Indian woman, alleged to have been married to the doctor according to the Mahomedan rites), praying for leave to file a bill of review in order to let in the evidence of native witnesses who allege that they were present at the celebration of the marriage. The property now in court, the subject of the litigation, is upwards of £230,000. The names of the chief witnesses proposed to be examined in India are—the Mcer Hassan Ali, Nubbee Bux Elohi Begum, Kum-Toompir Begum, Khan Terab, Khan Doolhun, The Vice-Chancellor, in giving Moona Lall. judgment dismissing the petition, said that, al though he knew that he himself had been thought to have felt too strongly in disbelieving native testimony, he was sure that feeling was shared in by those Europeans who had the best means of knowing how the matter stood. It appeared to him that the fresh evidence did not differ from that which was adduced ten years ago, and was of the same contradictory and unsatisfactory character. None of the conditions necessary for supporting a petition of this nature had been fulfilled, and therefore it must be dismissed with costs.

Mr. GLASSE and Mr. WELFORD supported the petition.

The Solicitor General, Mr. Anderson, and Mr. E. F. Smith were for the plaintiff, the respondent, Mr. Lord; Mr. W. Morris and Mr. Jackson for the executors; Mr. Bailey and Mr. Roxburgh for the Scotch next of kin of Dr. Cochrane.

Mr. GLASSE was heard in reply.

Their Lordships gave judgment dismissing the appeal, as contrary both to principle and to the practice of the Court, with costs.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA BAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that the extent of line open for traffic at the commencement of the half-year consisted of 1323 miles from Bulsar to Dolia. On the 3rd of September last a further portion of 344 miles, from Dolia to Mehmoodabad, was opened, making a total length of 1974 miles of line open for traffic. This last portion included the Mhye Viaduct, a work of considerable magnitude and importance. The works on the remaining 18 miles to Ahmedabad (the northern extremity of the line) were so nearly finished when the last advices were despatched from India that an engine had run within half a mile of that place, and there was little doubt that the additional mileage was now open for traffic. Great progress had been made in the works south of Bulsar, including the important bridges over the Veturnee and Bassein rivers. The complete opening to the north would enable those works to be carried on with increased activity. It was hoped the line would be opened to Dhanoo in the ensuing spring, and to Bombay in the summer or autumn, so as to make the railway available at the earliest practicable period for the transport of cotton and other goods from the northern districts to the shipping wharves of Bombay. The accounts from India continue to assure the directors that upon the opening of the line throughout, a very large stream of traffic would flow over it, which the extremely favourable gradients would admit of being carried at a very reasonable cost. The importance of this consideration can hardly be exagge-The Indian Tramway Company were proposing among the first of their works to connect a district rich in cotton and other produce with a main line of this railway. It was deemed necessary to make provision for the issue of fresh share capital to the extent of £1,000,000, and the sanction of the Secretary of State for India in Council had been obtained for that issue, guaranteeing interest thereon at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. The capital had been taken up, and the calls would be made as the exigencies of the company might require. The total receipts for the balf-year ending the 30th of June last, on 1324 miles, amounted to £25,208, or £19 per mile, including £17,709 for passengers, and £7,499 for goods. The total receipts for the corresponding period of 1861 amounted, on 1091 miles, to 15,570, or £172 per mile, including £12,547 for passengers, and £3,023 for goods, showing an increase in the mileage of 23 miles and £9,638 in the receipts. The receipts had increased from £90 per mile open in the first halfyear, ending 30th of June, 1860, to £191 per mile for the last half-year. In the 14 weeks ending the 5th of October last the receipts amounted to £16,262, or £112 per mile, against £8,251, or £70 per mile for the corresponding period of 1861, showing an increase of £8,011.

TELEGRAPH TO INDIA COMPANY.

The directors of this company state in their report that when the first ordinary general meeting of this company was held, in July last, the Board had received an intimation of the intention of the Indian Government to undertake the construc tion of the line of telegraph from Bagdad to Kurrachee, and that in consequence the directors recommended that no steps should be taken beyond keeping open the communication between Alexandria and Jubal until they had ascertained the views of the Government in relation to the Persian Gulf. The shareholders were at the same time informed that a communication had been addressed to the Secretary of State for India, in which the claims of the company to be intrusted with the proposed work were brought under his notice. The correspondence resulted in the decision of the Secretary of State for India in Council that the Bagdad and Kurrachee line should be constructed by the Government of India. The directors did not question the soundness of this decision, although it could not be doubted that the determination of the Government had most materially affected the interests of the company. The line between Alexandria and Jubal continued to work most satisfactorily, and a return of the weekly traffic since the opening of the line showed that the company's receipts from the 7th of March to the 12th of November had reached an average of about £170 per week, or at the rate of nearly £0,000 a year. The annual expenditure, on the lowest scale consistent with efficient working, was estimated at £6,500 per annum, including all expenses at home and abroad, but this amount would be considerably reduced should the Government agree to a proposal made to them by the Board, to allow the telegraph offices in India to receive messages for the company, which would obviate the necessity of maintaining agencies abroad. Thus it would be seen that, should the present receipts only be maintained, a balance of profit would be left equal to £5.10s. 8d. per cent. on the subscribed capital of £15,175. The traffic, however, appeared to be steadily increasing, and the directors had every reason to believe that it would be extended considerably if messages could be transmitted in the With a view of trying that ex-Arabic language. periment, they had authorised their superintendent to engage three or four native signallers, at trifling salaries. It was also proposed, at the request of some of the leading merchants in Alexandria, to open a station at the large native town of Tanta, through which the line passed. and where a considerable amount of business was expected, especially in connection with the cotton Under these circumstances there appeared no season for abandoning the undertaking, which was even now remunerative, and which there was every reason to believe would become increasingly so, while the possession of the line from Alexandria to Jubal gave the company the key of the work, if ever it should be found expedient to carry it on to Aden or India. The directors therefore recommended the company to continue to work the land line in Egypt, and the cable between Suez and Jubal, retaining the firmans, instruments, and other property in Egypt, as, in the event of the Bagdad line proving inadequate to the commercial requirements, or from any other cause which should indicate the need of an alternative means of communication, the company would, no doubt, receive the cordial support of her Majesty's Government and of the public in continuing the line. Should the shareholders concur in this view, the Board would further recommend that the land line in Egypt should be placed in a state of thorough and permanent efficiency, and for this purpose it was advisable that the whole of the posts should be carefully examined and renewed where necessary. The whole cost of a thorough inspection and renewal of the posts, including the removal to the railway, would not exceed £1,000, while it was expected that a saving of £250 per annum would be effected in the maintenance. With respect to the other property transferred to the company by the Government, which was no longer required for the purposes of the line, the directors recommended that it should be immediately disposed of on the most favourable terms. The 200 miles of new cable on board the steamship Sir James Duke may shortly be expected to arrive, and the Board had made preliminary arrangements for disposing of it at once. They also propose to realise, subject to the approval of the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, as much as possible of the property at the various stations on the Red Sea, including the station-house at Aden, built by the Red Sea Company, at a cost of upwards of £5,000, together with as much of the submerged cable as could be recovered, either by contract or otherwise, without cost to the company. The directors have thus far given their services to the affairs of the company without remuneration, and they proposed to do so, at all events until the undertaking was in a position to pay a satisfactory dividend. The engineers of the company, Sir Charles Bright and Mr. Latimer Clark, had also stated their desire that their services to the

MISCELLANEOUS.

APPOINTMENT - MAURITIUS . - ( Downing street Dec. 8.) - The Queen has been pleased to appoint Gustave Barthellemy Colin, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, to be Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of the Island of Mauritius.

APPOINTMENTS .- ( Downing-street, Dec. 15.) -The Queen has been pleased to appoint Henry Byerley Thomson, Esq., to be Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of the Island of Ceylon; Richard F. Morgan, Esq., to be her Majesty's Advocate for the Island of Ceylon; and John Comber Browne, Esq., to be Superintendent of Government Schools and Organising Master for the Island of Mauritius.

English Professorship at Poonah .- (Oxford Dec. 13.)-Mr. Monier Williams, M.A., of University College (Sanskrit Professor), has given notice that the Professorship of English at the College of Poonah (Bombay Presidency) is now vacant. It is worth £500 per annum, and is open to candidates who have taken their B.A. degree this term.

MADRAS COLLEGE .- Mr. Francis Stone Evans, B.A., demy of Magdalen College, Oxford, has been appointed by Sir Charles Wood, Secretary of State for India, to the Professorship of Mathematics and Physics in the Presidency College, Madras. Mr. Evans, who is an old pupil of the Bristol Grammar School, obtained first class honours in mathematics and physics at the final examination in Easter Term last, and subsequently re-ceived a testimonial from the public examiner, the Rev. Bartholomew Price, M.A., F.R.S., and Sedleian Professor of Natural Philosophy.

Anglo-Indian Cotton Company.—A prospectus has been issued of the Anglo-Indian Cotton Company, with a capital of £500,000 in shares of £5. The direction includes several practical cotton spinners of influence in Lancashire, and the object is to promote the growth of superior qualities of cotton from New Orleans acclimated seed in Khandeish and other eligible localities in India. INTERMITIENT FEVERS .- The Societé d'Acclimation has just received a letter from India, accompanied with a box containing a quantity of seeds of the Casalpina Bonducella, a plant which, according to Mr. Hayes, the writer of the letter, is much used there as a specific for intermittent fevers. The Bengalee for this plant is Natha; it is a small creeper, producing a nut, the kernel of which is exceedingly bitter, and possesses the quality of Jesuits' bark in an eminent degree, with this exception, that it is aperient rather than the contrary, a valuable property in a tropical climate where the bilious system is so generally affected. One of these seeds reduced to a paste, with three or four pepper-corns, and taken three, four, or five times a day with the adjunction of Cherettalitea (Gentiana cheravita), is generally found so infallible in its effects that many European physicians in India have adopted it, and will probably in a few years abandon bark entirely. Cherettah is a kind of gentian which grows on the mountains skirting the course of the Ganges, and may be got at all the bazaars of Bengal; it is a stronger febrifuge than the Gentiana lutea of Europe. Native physicians employ Natha also as a powerful tonic; they administer it in powder mixed with spices and castor-oil; externally the seed is applied in cases of hydrocele. At Amboyna it is administered as a vermifuge; the roots are used as a tonic in dyspepsia. In Cochin-China the plant is considered deobstruent, and the oil extracted from the leaves is found useful in paralysis. In Egypt the women make necklaces and amulets with the seeds. The latter are often carried to great distances by the sea, as, for instance to the coast of Scotland, where they are known as Molucca beans. It is singular that the remarkable virtues of this plant should have remained so long unnoticed, offering as it does a cheap and powerful substitute for Jesuits' bark, which, as every one knows, com-mands a high price. As this plant thrives in Egypt, Mr. Hayes thinks that it must prosper in Algeria, and even in the south of France.

ORDER OF THE BATH .- ( War Office, Dec. 12.)-The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the Hon. Frederick William Adolphus Bruce, c.B., her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Emperor of China, to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Second Class or Knights Commanders of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

DRAFTS ON INDIA .- The Indian Council have announced that, until further notice, they will issue a monthly sum of £1,000,000 in bills on India, of which £400,000 will be on Bombay, £60,000 on Madras, and the remainder on Calcutta. The amount will be divided into two drawings, respectively fixed for the first and third Wednesdays of each month, commencing on the 7th of January next, and the portion for the first Wednesday will be limited to £600,000.

SPECIE TO THE EAST. - The Bombay mail steamer Ceylon took out specie to the amount of £429,205, of which the proportion for Bombay was £405,705, and for Alexandria £23,500. The remittances of specie to India will for the moment be slightly checked by the detention of the mail which should have been brought by the wrecked vessel Colombo, and which, doubtless, contained the usual amount of orders and draughts. It is said, however, that the French steamer from Marseilles at the end of the week will take out nearly a million, English as well as French shippers being led to prefer the French vessels from their lower charge for freight. The Peninsular and Oriental Company lately reduced their charge to meet the French competition, but have since announced a return to their old terms.

THE LABUAN COAL COMPANY have issued a circular containing an analysis of specimens of their coal made by Dr. Percy, of the Government Museum of Geology. The first specimen was from a quantity supplied to her Majesty's steamer Scout in April last, and is pronounced to be very valuable and superior to the best coal of South Statfordshire, from the fact that it contains more hydrogen and less water. The second specimen was one sent home by the manager, Mr. Sinclair, and on this the judgment is equally favourable. It burns with a copious bright flame, is a noncaking coal, and has the great advantage of containing only a small proportion of sulphur. It has likewise peculiarities that specially adapt it for sea-going vessels, and also for the manufacture of gas, as well as for use in the various metallurgical operations in which a copious flame is required, as in reverbaratory furnaces. quantity available appears to be virtually inexhaustible, requiring nothing but a good supply of labour for its extraction. A Singapore Gas Company has recently been established, to which it is likely to afford important facilities. The first report of Dr. Percy was prepared for the Admiralty, who have furnished a copy of it to the directors.

WESTERN NEILGHERRY PLANTATION COMPANY. A prospectus has been issued of the Western Neilgherry Coffee, Tea, and Chinchona Plantation Company, with a capital of £50,000, in shares of £5. It is proposed to purchase 3,000 acres on the western slopes of the Neilgherries, in the Madras Presidency, of which a portion is already producing coffee, and, in conjunction with the cultivation of coffee and tea, to direct particular attention to that of Peruvian bark. The purchase money is to consist of £20,000 cash, and £10,000 in shares, the vendor (who is to undertake the future management) leaving one-half of the total amount in the hands of the company, in order to guarantee a dividend of 8 per cent. for five years.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Drectors of the East India Company.
On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varmished, £3. 3s.

mished, £3.3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their rames, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-nequired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been actualled. MAP of INDIA compiled

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourside East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12a. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9, high. 9s.; or, on cloth, is a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRK of ANAM. On two sheets - Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cioth, in a case, £1. 5s.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo. sloth, 15s.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that nake The general scope of the book is the refutation of that nake positivism of which M. Coate is the apo-tle. . . Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, thus treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative behef in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is larder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics when is larder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics itself, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1863.

A SHORT TRIP in HUNGARY and TRANSYLVANIA in the SPRING of 1862. By Professor D. T. Ansted, Post 8vo., cloth, 8s. 6d.

"Professor Ansted's descriptions are written with a ne ness attesting the accuracy of a scientific observer's eyes. Tolume is one both of value and entertainment: a book callated to turn the thoughts of tourists down the Danube, Atlenaeum, Aug. 16, 1862.

"Many a tourist this antumn will have cause to thank Professor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a four than the author of this interesting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1862.

MEMORABLE EVENTS of MODERN hood of Great Men," Sc., &c. With Illustrations. Post byo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"A practical writer, with a high sense of his obligations as an instructor of children. Mr. J. G. Edgar never makes a contribution to juvenile literature that does not deserve a certain measure of commendation. We can conscientiously recommend it ('Memorable Events') as a work at the same time entertaining and useful."—Athenœum, March 6, 1862.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaffected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the envisible talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-beards, and of so describing events as to suzgest many a topic for grave reflection. It is last ("Memorable Events") is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agreeable, highminded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and failures."—Spectator.

THE HISTORY of CHESS: from the Time of the Early Invention of the Game in India till the Period of its Establishment in Western and Central Europe. By Duncan Forbes, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes a stout fight for the Hudoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than chessplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative ymology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the tukepoge. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but eshly, clearly, and in an ammated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Heraid.

"Mr. Young is well-known as the author of undoubtedly the best treatise on the 'Theory of Equations' which is to be found in our language—a treatise distinguished by originality of thought, great learning, and admirable perspicuity. Nor are these qualities wanting in the work which we are reviewing.

Cons dering the difficulty of the task which Mr. Young has undertaken to discharge, and the extent of useful knowledge he has succeeded in imparting accurately and lucidly in so small a compass, we can without hesitation comend this work to the public as by far the best elementary course of mathematics in our language."—The London Review, April 6, 1861.

"Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English beys, and many thousands of English men and women. Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution to wards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites: and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to markind, of the Quixotes', Gullivers', and other luman foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to our shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old overflowing with wit, fun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of nationa thanks, we undertake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."—London Review.

RRTCHARD'S DANDELION, CAMO-MILE, RHUBARB, and GINGER PILLS.—This peculiar preparation of Dandelion acts particularly on the liver, thus avoiding the use of mercurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a sluggish state of that organ, or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well known stomachic efficacy of camomile, rlubard, and ginger, renders these pills the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a safe remedy they will find this medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all persons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience. Prepared by W. Pritchard, Apothecary, 65, Charing-cross, London, in bottles, 1s. 13d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all Medicine Vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.— This purifying and regulating medicine should occasionally be had recourse to during loggy, cold, and wet weather. These Pills are the best preventives of hoarseness, sore throat, diphtheria, pleurisy, and asthma, and are sure remedies for congestion, bronchitis, and inflammation. A moderate attention to the directions folded round each box will enable every invalid to take the Pills in the most advantageous manner; they are there taught the proper doses and the circumstances under which they must be increased or diminished. Holloway's Pills act as alteratives, aperients, and tomes. Whenever these Pills have been taken as the hast resource the result has always been gentifying; even when they fail to cure they always assuage the severity of symptoms and diminish danger.

The Illustrations drawn on Wood expressly for the Work, by PAUL J. NAFTEL, Member of the London Society of Painters in Water Colours.

"The 'Channel Islands' is an excellent book of its class—well conceived, well written, well illustrated, well printed. It is the produce of many bands, and every hand a good one. Nearly every thing which a man can desire to know about Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark—about their history, Geography, and natural history—Professor Ansted and Dr. Latham have contrived to tell. Altogether the contents of the volume are as varied and interesting as a well-sustained drama; and to this drama no more graceful and picturesque scenery could have been furnished than we find in the illustrations so profusely given by artists worthy of the subject and equal to their worth—Paul Naftel and M. Petere Le Lièvre. The result is not a merely handsome volume of the old 'Keepsake' style, made to sell and be looked at, but a book of rare merit and value, made for instruction and delight, to be read with pleasure and to be referred to with profit."—Athenaum, Nov. 15, 1862.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 22nd November brings very little news of general interest. The advent of the cold season, indeed, is welcomed by the European residents throughout India, and the official world shakes off the lethargy in which it has reposed for the last six months. Unhappily, the bracing influence of the falling temperature has not been confined exclusively to Europeans. The Khasiahs are again in arms, and a military force has been despatched to inflict well-merited chastisement; but the task is not so easy as it may appear.

The belief in the existence of Nana Sahib has been revived, through the confessions or affirmations of one Madhoo Rao, a rebel lately captured by Captain Nuttall in the Southern Mahratta country. It is said that the prisoner was, like the Nana, an adopted son of Bajee Rao, and that not many months since the pair were hiding together in the jungles of Nepaul.

Cholera is reported to have broken out at Mean Meer, after having entirely ceased at Peshawur. The official Report of the Commission appointed to inquire into the nature and peculiarities of that dreadful scourge will now very shortly be published.

The accounts from Japan are by no means satisfactory. It is stated that the Tycoon has applied for foreign aid to assist him in controlling his own nobles. The murderer of Mr. Richardson, Shimadzoo Saburo, the head of the retainers of the Daimio, or Prince, of Satsuma, was still at large, nor does it appear that any very decided steps had been taken to insure his apprehension.

In China there has been some hard fighting, which has resulted in the capture of Fung-wha and Kahding. The first attempt against Fung-wha was baffled by the obstinate valour of the Taepings, who repulsed the Chinese Contingent, and compelled the allied reserve to retire from under the walls. In this affair Commander Bosanquet, of the Flamer, and a midshipman on board the Encounter, with a score of sailors and marines, were more or less wounded. On the following day a force of 6,000 rebels was discovered approaching the city, but being vigorously attacked they withdrew in some confusion, and the garrison, taking alarm, evacuated Fung-wha that same night.

At Kahding the Taepings displayed equal resolution, and were only driven out after a severe bombardment for upwards of two hours from thirty-eight pieces of ordnance, including mortars throwing 8-inch shell. Captain Mitchell, of H.M.'s 31st regiment, was slightly

The Mahomedans in the province of Shensi appear to have been subdued far more easily than was expected, and another body of rebels was routed in Shantung by the redoubtable, if perfidious, San-ko-lin-sin. For the moment the Imperial arms are everywhere triumphant.

THE BOMBAY MAIL.

The steamer with the homeward Bombay mail, of the 12th inst., passed Jubal on the 24th. She brings the following intelligence:

The Azof reached Ceylon on the 10th inst. with 159 boxes of mails and 329 bales of silk from the wreck of the Colombo.

BENGAL.

OUR PAPER CURRENCY.

The issue of Government notes evidently does not go on so rapidly as was anticipated by those who sanguinely advocated their introduction.

According to the last returns, it amounted only to Rs. 4,58,00,000, or about enough to meet the requirements of the Presidency Banks and their branches. We are not in the least surprised at this. In the first place, the issue being in the hands of joint-stock banks, the fact of there being a Government currency is lost sight of by the majority of the native traders; and those who know better, the shroffs, soucars, and others engaged in banking, and the issue of hoondies, carefully keep that knowledge to themselves, and, we are assured, frequently mislead those who are ignorant upon the subject. In fact, as we always predicted, the circulation of these notes is directly or indirectly opposed by that powerful class who have hitherto had, except in the Presidency cities, the monopoly of the banking and exchange business throughout India. They know perfectly well that the larger the amount of currency notes put in circulation, so much less would be their profits upon a branch of their business which performed the same functions as a means of remittance, as that afforded by the Government currency.

In this opposition their hands are strengthened by the fact to which we have before referred, and especially by the difficulty experienced in the remoter towns of the several presidencies in getting them cashed at the several treasuries. Our Darjeeling correspondent says that the natives charge the tea planters Rs. 1-4 per Rs. 100, thereby reaping a good harvest; the same thing has occurred in the Madras Presidency. We remember seeing in the report of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce a correspondence between that body and the Chief Commissioner of Oude on this subject; the latter asking the opinion of the former as to whether they approved of Calcutta notes being receivable at local treasuries, or of district notes payable at the capitals of the district (any circle or province, and not merely a zillah), and whether they might safely be made a legal tender or not. The answer was, that in order to give the fullest effect to the perfect introduction of a paper currency in India, both as regards the facilities which such a currency should afford to the monetary transactions and trade of the country, and the necessity of popularising paper money by proving its utility to the people, the note should be made payable on presentation at all treasuries or agencies throughout India, irrespective of circles With regard to the notes being or provinces. made a legal tender, the introduction of a paper currency intended to supply a less cumbrous and expensive circulation than that furnished by the precious metals, renders such a provision both as regards its utility and convertibility a matter of absolute necessity. We recommend these suggestions to the consideration of the Government, as we think the full success of the paper currency depends very much upon their adoption. They have a strong opposition to encounter in its introduction and extension beyond the presidency towns, which it will require much skill and tact on the part of those entrusted with its introduction to overcome. We do not, however, look upon the obstacles opposed to its extension as insurmountable, if measures are taken at once to remove them in the manner above indicated.-Englishman.

OUR RELATIONS WITH NEPAUL.

Among all the foreign States in Hindostan with none perhaps is our intercourse so restricted as ALLE simestimpossible to repress a feeling of pity for Mithe Librernment of India, a mighty power among de fairest jewel and the most power among the fairest jewel and the most power.

A chief the most exclusive empire in the forced to open her sea-ports to admitted merchants of every confederacy; not allowed, in answer to his repeated Punjab loan, and when entreated by the Delhi entreaties, to take his place in the front rank of King to join him, presented the letter to the commercial intercourse with her.

North and south, east and west, over the wide expanse of the two hemispheres, may a European roam in search of health and wealth and recreation. But as he approaches the eastern limits of our Indian territories, his bounds, like the sea, are set. True it is that there are countries like Thibet and Tartary, Cabul and China, Independent States north of Rajpootana, where it is not advisable to go for recreation, and where there is little prospect of trade. But with Nepaul the case is different. Her mountains rise range above range out of the flat level of British territory; far away they stretch, east and west, capped with the snowy range telling of cool breezes, leaping water-falls, and the genial climate that an Englishman loves. To those whom duty binds to the arid plain of Behar Nepaul looks like the land forbidden to the Israelites. They may see its shadowy form, they may enjoy it hereafter, but not yet awhile. The lower part of Bengal has its sanitarium at Cherrapoonjee. Calcutta and the districts north and south of the Ganges to Purneah have their hill station at Darjeeling. But to the fevered brain, or for the dying soldier in Behar, Ghazeepore, Goruckpore, and for many a weary stage, there is no haven short of Simla or Nainee Tal, and yet the finest sanitarium in the world lies in exclusiveness, approachable to none but the Resident, the doctor and the assistant. Katmandoo, the capital of Nepaul, lies in a valley within a few miles of the snowy range, and within easy access to the districts alluded to. The lowest camp follower from Segowlee, the greatest ruffian from Patna, is at liberty to go and come as he pleases, but to a white man the Terai and the whole range of the hills are closed, and so will they remain until the Government of India makes some move in the matter. Is it too much to ask the English Government to extend to a European the privi-lege permitted to a native? An inoffensive Englishman seeking Rhododendrons lost Sikkim to its rulers, and Jung Bahadoor may perhaps argue that a delicate woman in search of health may involve him in disputes. Once accept such logic and all nations should confine themselves to their own country. The position of the British resident at Nepaul is a most humiliating one. He cannot leave the capital except in one direction, and that along a road, eight miles in length. Picture the French Ambassador confined to Manchester-square, or Lord Cowley to the Rue des Italiens. Jung Bahadoor, the ruling power, has accepted and enjoyed English hospitality, and searched deeper, if reports be true, into the domesticity of English life than any native of the East, and yet he is of all foreign rulers the only one who denies access to our countrymen, and treats the resident like a State prisoner. Do the Nepaulese distrust us? Are they not dependent for their daily food upon our outlying provinces We trust they will long act so as to maintain their comparative independence; but there is less reason why Katmandoo should be more sealed against the Englishman than Pekin.—Friend of

THE LATE MAHARAJAH OF PUTIALA.

The somewhat sudden removal by death of his Highness Nurender Singh, Maharajah of Putiala, has undeniably deprived India of the noblest of its chiefs, and England of the most loyal and valuable of its feudatories. The ruler of a principality with a population of a million, and an annual revenue of a quarter of a million sterling, there are many wealthier and more powerful princes among our feudatories than he was. But not one administered his estates so well; not one has ever shown, alike in adversity and prosperity, so hearty and intelligent a loyalty not one did England such service in 1857. was a type of greatness for which we shall at present search Asia in vain, but which, we trust, will be followed as an ideal by his successor and his brother chiefs throughout India. Denied an independent career such as might have placed him, like Runjeet Singh, at the head of the pure Sikh his estates in peace and war that Putials was more peaceful than Bengal in 1857, and its people rendered to our Government far more assistance. Physically, he presented an imposing appearance, which has been well described as that of a Hindu hero-god in human form. So little do we know of Asiatio life, and so few are our opportunities of observing such rulers as he, that we may well pause for a little over the history of himself and his family.

Guru Govind, the tenth from Nanuk, was the last spiritual and the first military leader of the Sikhs. To the worship of the "book" he added that of "steel," and, in a fortunate moment for British supremacy in the East, two centuries after declared unvielding hostility to the Mussulman. Making the thenceforward sacred Umritsur the centre of his power, he there held periodically the Gurumata or federal council of chiefs. But Govind's successor was not fitted to lead the initiated ones to victory, and it was not till long after, in the political contests which followed Nadir Shah's invasion of India and the death of the renowned head of the Doorani monarchy, Ahmed Shah, that the Sikh chiefs swept the Punjab, and formed misals or clans, ultimately twelve in number, which had each its representative and vote in the Federal Diet at Umritsur. Those north and west of the Sutlei were known as Manjha Sikhs, and ultimately succumbed to young Runjeet Singh, who, himself of the Sukarchak misal, married, like Henry VII. of England, the lady regent of the Ghani misal, and gradually absorbed the others. But south of the Sutlej was the Phoolkean misal, which was fortunate enough to submit to Lord Lake, when in 1805 he chased Holkar to Umritsur. Its three most dis-tinguished heads were Putiala, Nabha, and Jheend, who, under British protection, were spared from the all-devouring rapacity of Eunjeet, and in 1857 were able to return the favour by assisting the English to subdue the hated Mussulman and Poorbeah.

The Sikhs were at their worst when in 1762, just a century ago, at a spot some twenty miles from Loodiana, they were defeated by Ahmed Shah. Among the prisoners was one Alha Singh, who so attracted the conqueror by his courage that he was pardoned and dismissed with honour. Before that he had erected a fort in Sirhind, on the Koosilla, a mountain torrent, and named it after himself Put-i-ala or Alha's abode. Soon he became governor of the whole province under its Pathan conquerors, and was succeeded by Saheb Singh, a grandson, who so spread the terror of his arms from the Indus to Delhi that Abmed Shah gave him the title of Maharajah. But from his death in 1781 till the arrival of Lord Lake Putiala was administered by a minor, who, at last, with the assistance of Metcalfe, defied Runjeet Singh, helped Ochterlony to beat the Ghoorkas, and had his title confirmed by us in the name of the puppet King of Delhi. At a good old age Saheb Singh was followed by Kurum Singh, his young son, and in 1845 Nurender Singh, the late Maharajah, succeeded to the power which he wisely exercised for seventeen years.

As his grandfather had assisted Ochterlony Nurender Singh was found ready when, just after his accession, Lord Hardinge began the Sikh campaign. Again, in that terrible night of 13th May, 1857, when the dread news of Meerut and Delhi, and the disaffection of our troops at Umballa, began to be the theme of every bazaar,. Putials at once in person took the head of his contingent of 5.000 men of all arms, and throughout the long and doubtful crisis protected Umballa, Thaneysur, Kurnal, and the Grand Trunk Road to Phillour, the main line of communication with the rear of our Delhi force. He gave a hospitable welcome to refugees from massacre; he furnished necessary supplies for the army in its march from the Hills to the doomed city, and for the numberless contingents which followed, and he co-operated with General Van Cortland's levies in Hissar. He contributed £70,000 to the us always supplied with most valuable information, and he himself repeatedly begged to be allowed to head his own troops in the final assault. Apart from actual assistance, who shall estimate the moral effect of such loyalty, combined as it was with the proportionally great efforts of his clansmen, Nabha and Jheend? Well did he deserve the princely reward of Narnoul, Bhuddour, and the Begum Zenut Mahal's palace in Delhi, as well as the honorary titles conferred on him. After the Royal Proclamation he addressed a remarkable letter to her Majesty, which thus began :- "To the sublime presence, everlasting in power, lord of the universe, famous as Alexander, glorious as the sun, empress of land and sea, most puissant of potentates, the Queen of England (may whose empire and fortune endure for ever!): Your humble petitioner, Nurender Singh, hopeful of your gracious favour, and placing the forehead of submission upon the ground of humility, ventures to tender this dutiful address." And he goes on to say with a more than oriental heartiness of expression—" Every one who heard the gracious promises of your students who sought to matriculate at the Cal-Majesty made instant obeisance to the throne of cutta University last year, and four of whom were the one only God, who, as in His wrath He had crushed the people of Hindostan in the press of calamity created by rebels and traitors to their salt, so now, by means of the gracious clemency of your Majesty, was pleased to liberate them from misery, and restore them again to peace and nificant amount of Rs. 7,420 was raised by prihappiness."

naturally befits a Sikh Chieftain like Putiala, to than last year. We are not told if this includes the graver details of civil administration, we find him no less active and intelligent. To him, and old nomenclature being preserved to the end of to him alone, the Blue-book on the subject clearly proves that Lord Canning's Adoption policy was due. In our review of Lord Cauning's career we showed by extracts from official correspondence that in April, 1858, he first eagerly asked for this boon, which was for nearly a year opposed by such authorities as Sir J. Lawrence and the late George Barnes, and by Lord Canning himself. In the case of his native as of his land policy the great idea was not original, but only gradually grew in the late Viceroy's mind. We admire the real Asiatic ability of Rajah Dinkur Rao, but for a liberal and enlightened State paper commend us to Putiala's "paper of requests," rather than the Rajah's Memorandum on Indian Government. And when Sir B. Frere introduced a Bill into the Council to promote entail and primogeniture among our rewarded feudatories, it was Putiala who "greatly approved" of it on states manlike grounds, while the Rajahs Dinkur Rao and Deonarain Sing opposed it on the mere mercantile principle that property is valuable only as it can be disposed of. Unlike them, one who was himself a prince at once seized our idea of not only creating but perpetuating a great and a loyal aristocracy. To us it is a matter of regret that the Maharajah should have so far yielded to superstitions which he inwardly despised as to visit Saugor Island and plan a journey to Pooree and its Juggernaut; but he was in heart a Sikh, a true deist, tolerant of all other faiths, and only too subservient for social and political ends to Brahminical influences. His administration of his own million of tenantry was a model to the rest of native India. When he died estimates were being made for an irrigation canal to be drawn from the Sutlej, where it issues from the lower hills, and to pass through his estates. And it was only yesterday recorded to his honour that he abolished the inhuman custom of the Khutrees, which is worse than suttee, in dooming widows to a condition of isolated wretchedness for four years after their husbands' death.

As we review the career of the late chief, we feel proud that our stable and just Government should have borne such fruits in the most distinguished of our feudatories, and utter the prayer that we may soon have many Putialas .- Friend of India.

been arranged with some care and system. | ness of this opinion, though we are disposed to The educational authorities are cheerful at the result of their past labours, and at the prospect before them. But while readily acknowledging the zealous and intelligent manner in which educational and civil officers have promoted the cause of education, we must be permitted to touch on some grave fallacies that obtrude themselves in the report.

The nomenclature of schools has been slightly altered, those formerly called Tehsili being now termed town schools. The alteration is significant. It denotes not simply a change of name, but an encouraging degree of progress in education itself. The number of city schools has not perhaps absolutely increased, but the attendance of scholars, with a general air of improvement in the small town schools, has been sufficiently rapid to entitle them to a separate designation. There were at the close of the year twenty schools of the higher sort, of which three at Delhi, Umritsur and Lahore, aim to be classed as colleges, and have between them contributed ten successful. The number of scholars at these schools was 2,148, with an average daily attendance of 1,714. The expenditure during the year was Rs. 78,323, of which Rs. 63,693 were contributed by Government, and the insigvate subscriptions. The annual cost of educat-When we turn from the turmoil of war which ing each pupil was Rs. 45-11-1, or Rs. 0-14-6 less the cost of supervision. Of Tehsili schools (the the year) there are nearly 120 with 6,765; the average daily attendance was 5,452; the expenditure Rs. 136,690, of which Rs. 1,278 is from Government, almost all the rest by the levy of a cess on the landholders: the annual cost of educating each pupil Rs. 6 11-9, or Rs. 0-3-11 more than last year. Of village schools there were 1,750 with 38,849 pupils on the rolls; the average daily attendance was 31,016; the expenditure Rs. 138,035, of which Rs. 3,195 is from Government; and the annual cost of educating each pupil Rs. 4-7-2, or Rs. 0-3-1 less than last year. These results are, no doubt, respectable: but we cannot help thinking that they might have been still more satisfactory if some important theories of education had been sufficiently understood.

1. It is encouraging to find that the plan of securing the co-operation of civil officers works so the analogy justified by the scheme. The fact is well, and that "it is both economical and efficient." As an instance of what can be done by an officer who has his heart in the work, the case of Mr. A. Brandreth, Deputy Commissioner of Goojranwalla, is worthy of being cited, though some of his theories are rather crude. Brandreth believes that our great aim should be to let the town schools shift for themselves, to assist the zemindars' schools, "to deliver them from the exactions and power of the moneylenders, and not to make them pay for teaching their great oppressors to be still more successful. The argument is plausible, but only half stated. It is quite true that a cultivator who has been taught the want of the co-operation of civil officers, where to read and write will be less under the control of his "Shah" than one who has not. But it does not follow that the town population is not almost as much in want of moral and intellectual advancement, or that its moral and intellectual advancement will not, in the long run, tend to the amelioration of agriculturists themselves. The very best friend an agricultural community can have is an intelligent town population. Nor is education so inconsistent that it will make the zemindar better but the townsman worse. Its operation is purely catholic, and, rightly directed, must result in good. It surely follows, therefore, that the class which is best able or most ready to avail itself of its assistance is precisely the one we are bound to encourage. Mr. Spencer, extra assistant-commissioner in the Hoshiarpore District, takes a view opposite to that of Mr. Brandreth. and holds "that we should concentrate our efforts on the large towns, on the ground that the agricultural population has been the last in the race of for the past year is unusually complete, and has progress." There can be no question as to the sound-that we have an absolutely scholastic aims agree with Mr. Alexander, one of the inspectors. that it is practicable to steer a middle course, and that a concentration of our efforts on towns in compatible with an extensive increase of village schools. But the notion that a town nounlation is a curse to an agricultural people should be dismissed as thoroughly mischievous. The town population of India is not a whit worse than the of any other country in the world. It is hardly ever remembered that this class always works out its own liberation unaided, and that, far from making any sensible efforts to raise themseives, agricultural populations have risen in spite of their own efforts to remain stationary, and by the intelligent aid of the trading class. After all the practical recognition of this doctrine by Government is apparent from the fact that the superior schools on which most labour and money are expended, and on whose beneficial aid in the revivification of native society most reliance is placed, are pure town schools.

2. Mr. Alexander goes on to express his opinion that a simple organisation and a moderate course of study are among the chief wants in our system. It is a pity this truth is not practically recognised by the head of the department. We attribute the want of attention simply to a total absence of system in the administration of educational atlants. This is hardly the fault of the present incumbers, but he should trouble himself to work on some recognised theory. Does he agree with his sabordinate? If he does, why not elaborate a system of education proceeding upon a simpler and sounder basis than the existing one? If he does not, still it would appear that the remarkable disclosures affecting the national system of education in England, and resulting in the acceptance of the doctrine cited by Mr. Alexander, demanded that the subject should have been deliberately and fairly argued.

3. We find Captain Fuller still insisting on the merits of his scheme of studies which we have before criticised, and which, he says, "have worked well on the whole." We fear that the scheme has not "worked well on the whole." was impossible that such a mongrel piece of workmanship should ever have resulted in absolute good. What would be thought if, in an English school, a boy were to enter on the study of his A, B, C, and his "alpha, beta," simultaneously, or alternate his Mavor's Spelling Book with comstruing Greek and Latin? Yet this is precisely the scheme has "worked well on the whole" oxic where it has been quietly ignored and corrected. And Cantain Fuller himself admits that "the Zillah school curriculum will require a good desi of alteration;" and " the gradation of the reading books is not over good, (!) and in many points the series is not thoroughly adapted to Indian pupils."

4. The number of female schools has niest from 38 to 52, the number of girls from 812 te 1.312, and the average daily attendance from £21 to 1,158. This small increase is by no measure creditable, and that it has been so slight is due to alone have the local influence which is indistensable in the formation of such schools. Ibs instance of the success attained by Cartair Elphinstone shows what can be done. Of the entire number of such schools no less than $7 have been organised by him in his district of Jellundhur. It is in such cases as this that the otherwise salutary principles of discretionary power vested in district officers works so was chievously. There is too much room for the one ration of official idiosyncracies, and the Punjak civilian, relying on the almost autocratic now which he wields, does not hesitate to ignore so vise a principle of national policy as this, repeated enunciated and enjoined by the present head of the local Government. The use of these female schools is not understood. It may be consided that our great object is to work these depths where all the eagles of debasing traditions have gathered themselves together to prey ex test mind's carcase. It is not, as may be thenglet educating females: that is doubtless a prominent recommendation; but the great end of these schools is the moral shock which ancient prejudices suffer in the amelioration of the social constitution of women. With our steps on the threshold of the inviolate zenana, surely we shall have won what must be considered a fit prelude to a magnificent success in the future. Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA CHARITIES .- A fancy sale of useful and ornamental work is to take place at the Town Hall, on the 25th Nov., in aid of the Calcutta Normal, Central, and Branch Schools, and the European Orphan Asylum. As the greater part of the articles which will be offered for sale have just arrived from England, and were, we believe, selected with especial reference to the cold sea son, we think the fair stallkeepers may reasonably expect as great a demand for "goods" as is experienced by any of the "investments" of Lall Diggee. We may add that, although there will be a fair sprinkling of the elegant nick-nacks which usually characterise a fancy sale, we have been assured that the "useful work" is all ornamental, and the "ornamental work" is all use-It may be interesting to some of our readers to know a little of the institutions for the benefit of which this sale is to take place. The first supports the Normal, Central, and Branch Schools. The Central School for the education of native females was established in 1824, under the immediate patronage of the Right Honourable Lady Amherst. It was greatly assisted by a munificent donation of 20,000 sieca rupees from Rajah Boidonath Bahadur, and for some time owed its efficiency to Mrs. Wilson, who afterwards established an orphanage at Augurpara. The Normal School for training female teachers, both English and native, for schools and zenanas, was commenced under the auspices of the late Bishop of Calcutta. These two schools were, for greater economy and concentration of effort, united in 1857 and connected with them were several branch schools. The number of pupils in the European department is, we believe, limited to ten, on account of the insufficiency of the accommodation for boarders. The number of native boarders in the central school is about twenty. There is also an infant day school, numbering from forty to fifty scholars. In this infant school the pupils of the normal school teach daily, thus giving them experience before entering upon their career as teachers. The whole is under an able European superintendent, who is assisted by teachers who have been educated in the Normal School. Many teachers have already been sent into branch and other female schools, as well as into several zenanas, where we hope their influence will be gradually extended. It is through the Hindoo mothers that the Hindoo must eventually regenerated; and unless the Hindoo females are educated they will never rise from their degraded position. We would urge our native readers to remember the enlightened example of the Rajah Boidonath Bahadur, and give some aid to these institutions, which are intended solely for their benefit. In these schools. too, the young Hindoo widow may find a solace for her unhappy fate, and by devoting herself to the cause of female education, she may in time break the tie of superstition which now binds her in bonds nearly approaching to slavery. But to return to these schools. They are managed by a committee of ladies, assisted in all difficult matters of business by a committee of gentle-Their funds are greatly assisted by the sale of fancy-work sent from England periodically by ladies interested in the institution .- Eng lishman.

> MILITARY MOVEMENTS .- The 33rd Regiment N.I., now in the Jyntea district, are under orders to proceed to Gowhatty, in Assam, by the steamers which have conveyed the 21st P.N.I. from Barrackpore to Sylhet. At Gowhatty the 33rd will set free the 28th P.N.I., which is ordered, in the annual relief, to the Upper Provinces, and will move at once for its destination.

November it was said, and believed, that the rebel parties out had resolved upon an attack on Bholagunge, and a number of them were prowling about and stopping communications between Tharris, which they had plundered, and Mahadeo, about half way up to Cherra Poonjee. Cherra natives reported that the rebels had declared their intention to waylay all passengers and to loot all goods passing up or down, to murder the Europeans, but to let the Cosseah carriers go The small party of troops sent without harm. down on the 9th to Tharria returned bootlessly from a wild-goose chase. The body under Worsley had a small brush with some of the marauders at Nanghiri, or some such place, but the darkness, for it was night, prevented any pursuit, or knowledge of the harm done to the rebels, though there was a hope that at least one had been shot. The magistrate is, of course, helpless; he can spare no detachments from the scanty force at Cherra, and equally, of course, the rebels know and appreciate the fact right well. It was hoped at Cherra that some portion of the Kamroop regiment, in motion for Sylhet, would be able to detach parties for places toward Cherra and stations at the foot of the hills. But that expectation was cold comfort in the uncertainty as to when they might be expected, and the supplies of Cherra and other isolated places were already for the time being cut off. They bade fair to be starving, for during the preceding three days nothing had gone up; no one would carry supplies up with the certainty of plunder and a good chance of something worse befalling. The Tharria road, the main road, was altogether deserted. The Government has at length seen the necessity of grappling seriously with the rebellion or opposition to its power and authority in the Jynteah and adjoining districts. The 1st Battalion of Bengal Military Police has been ordered down to the Presidency from Soorie, for immediate service in the Jynteah district, and has left Calcutta by steamer for Sylhet. Some light and Christian company of artillery at the latter station. But in the first instance this artillery will proceed to Cherra Poonjee, there to await orders when required to act against the refractory hill tribes.—Englishman.

only say it is a good fort and strong, with its broad and deep moat well constructed. It is now completely forsaken, and left to go to ruin, which it is doing fast. No troops there of any description; its barracks are tumbling to pieces, and it is overrun with a jungle of thick high grass above the head in height, and to move in any direction I was obliged to push my way through this jungle. On my way to the fort I observed a mausoleum, a very primitive affair, to the memory of numerous officers of the 76th Foot, who fell there in September, 1803. The 2nd Regiment Native Light Infantry marched in here this morning and encamped. They go on to Chola to-morrow, and will be at Delhi on the 10th. They have a great number of sick since marching from Shahjehanpore.

CACHAR, Nov. 8 .- There will probably be another bout of rain before the cold sets fairly in. The natives always look for one in November, and last year it was, if you remember, so continuous as to flood the country. It is the November rain which gives the first stimulus to the mustard crop. and the ryot is now busy getting his fields ready, and scratching in his manure in readiness for the welcome showers which are to start the plant into growth. There is, besides, the ordinary field culture - another and rather desoltory method adopted by all dwellers near jungle tracts-of clearing patches of jungle land, taking a crop off them, and then allowing them to run up again. The sort of land made use of for this purpose is alluvial, and covered with a tall species of grass called "ekur," averaging from ten to fifteen feet in height. The grass is cut magistrate in Seebsagur, Assam.

THE DISTURBED DISTRICTS. - On the 12th | and laid down all over the tract, and takes about a fortnight to dry; it is then fired and burns off clean, leaving a thick residue of ashes, in which the mustard seed is at once sown. If rain be not wanting to give the crop a start, the luxuriance of its growth is very remarkable, considering the total absence of tillage and of weeding, for so little is this crop looked to as a standby that the ryot will take not the slightest trouble with it beyond the mere preliminaries. The Act for the sale of waste lands is again in abeyance. There is at present some complicated calculation, which it would seem transcends Cachar arithmetic. going on in Calcutta, regarding the present value of future rental, and things here are at a stand-still until it is completed. Why all this nervous dread and miserable vacillation? Let Government boldly fix the rate at 2.8, or even less, and they will not be far wrong a hundred years hence, which period is but small in the life of a nation. It is not the actuary, but the capitalist that gives its true value to the land .- Englishman

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, Nov. 6 .- Mr. Lance, the Magistrate of Cawapore, has been appointed to the vacant judgeship of the district. must remember, some time ago, when people from all parts of India were writing about this gentleman's alleged mismanagement of the Cawnpore Memorial Gardens. The fact is, there was scarcely a word of truth in the whole correspondence, which, for nearly two months, waxed exceeding warm in the columns of a local paper, and at last died out, leaving the magistrate in possession of the field. The Memorial Church is not progressing so rapidly as a subscriber to it might wish and expect-indeed, it seems as though it were still " in contemplation." At the Agra railway station, for a distance of a couple of hundred yards, you see nothing but a high pile of cotton bales waiting, as patiently as may be, for wagons to convey it to Allahabad. Judging from the quantity lying there I should say it will take every truck belonging to the railway, at the rate of six trips a week, fully a month befield-guns and howitzers have been ordered up to fore it can be removed to its destination.

Jynteah from Dacca, in charge of the Eurasian Now it is that the public feel a want of confidence in the railway, built at so much expense and of so little real use when required, in an emergency like the present. year and a-half ago, when famine was in these provinces, the railway could scarcely convey one KHOORJA, Nov. 5 .- In my travels I put up at | half of the grain offered to it, and now one hears Allygurh a day or two ago, and was induced to of them actually retusing to load cotton from go and see the fort. I fancy it is too well known small stations to Allahabad, preferring to carry to you to require description from me; I will direct from Agra, on the score that the greater the distance the cotton is conveyed the more profit to themselves. Very true, but unworthy a large and respectable company. The bridges on the Ganges Canal are so low that the Ganges Causl Company are virtually unable to carry unpressed cotton at anything like a remunerative rate. This company is in the last stage of its corporate existence, and must soon expire from the combined ill effects of bad management and having nothing to do .- Englishman.

CHOLERA has ceased to work its will at Peshawur, after carrying off four officers and some tifty men, but is said to have again manifested its existence at Mean Meer. Mr. Strachey has now left Calcutta to take up his appointment as Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces. It is due neither to him nor the Government that the long delayed Report of the Cholera Commission has not been published, but to his colleagues who differ with him in some of his conclusions, and yet will not send in their opinions. The report will now be published without their remarks, which may follow, but the delay has not, we are glad to learn, prevented the recommendations of the Commission from being acted on.

PENSIONERS.—An order has been issued by Government, to the effect that in future its pensioners will not be obliged to furnish agents with powers of attorney to enable them to draw their pensions, but that properly stamped receipts will be sufficient; the paying officer at the same time as well as the pensioner adopting such cautionary measures as will prevent fraud.

Mr. W. Minto has been appointed an honorary

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.-We learn from the Hurkaru that "the old proposition of revising the office establishment of the Financial Department and of creating a new statistical branch in con nection with it, according to the scheme suggested by Mr. Laing, is now being carried into effect. Mr. Laing has sent out four Cambridge men, who are expected by the next mail, for the purpose of their being employed as probationers in that department. Another gentleman, also sent by the home authorities, and who has lately arrived from England, has been appointed one of the head assistants in the Financial Secretary's office by the new arrangements, on a salary of Rs. 800 per mensem. Besides the above appointments, three native junior assistants have been appointed, one from each of the three presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, on a salary of Rs. 400 a month, with a prospective increase to Rs. 600. The duties of those assistants would be to proceed periodically on a tour of inspection into the accounts of several public offices.

LAND SURVEYING .- The Gazette notifies the appointment of two trained surveyors of waste lands for Eastern Bengal and Darjeeling. That no time may be lost, as the strength of the surveying parties is utterly disproportioned to the work, we (Friend of India) would suggest the adoption of the American plan. In the United States the surveys are founded upon a series of true meridians running north generally from the mouth of some well-known river. Base lines intersect these meridians from east to west at right angles. At last the whole country is thus divided into squares of one mile and townships of six miles each, a square mile containing six hundred and forty acres, which is again sub-divided as low as to forty acres, the minimum that the State will sell. This any human being may purchase for fifty dollars, free from even general taxation for five years. Six shillings and threepence per acre is the upset price, and in point of fact this is seldom exceeded. There is another lesson which in this matter we may take from America. In every township one thirty-sixth part, or a square mile, is devoted to educational purposes.

CASTE PREJUDICES .- At Agra an instance of the evils arising from caste has just come to light. A boy whose father formerly belonged to the sweeper caste, but who is now a Christian engaged in teaching, was admitted into the college. For two or three days his presence in college created but little notice, when suddenly the principal was pestered with petitions to turn out the unclean youth, under pain of losing nearly the whole of his Brahmin pupils. The Principal wisely refused to yield to the prejudices of the caste men, and in consequence more than a hundred scholars have been removed. The next generation of Brahmins will probably be wiser than their fathers; at any rate, if they refuse to attend a good school merely because a low caste boy is admitted, they will be doing their utmost to destroy their own power. In the Government schools in the Madras Presidency boys of all castes may now be met with in the same class.

THE HILL STATES .- The Simla correspondent of the Englishman draws attention to the value of the native States around Simla. Of the 21 petty sovereignties in the Himalayas, lying between the Aluknunda or eastern boundary of non-British Gurwahl, better known as Teeree, and the Beas, fourteen are " protected and tributary," and seven are "protected not tributary." The chiefs are bound to keep up roads which they do not do. Government receives subsidies from them varying from Rs. 72 annually in Mangul, to Rs. 15,000 the whole amounts to only Rs. 28,752. It would certainly be profitable for us to buy out these chiefs, who, generation after generation, deteriorate, and may be best compared to the miserable Irish squireens drowned in debt from whom the Encumbered Estates Commission saved Ireland.

TREASURE TROVE.—The Outh Gazette records the discovery of jewels valued at upwards of thirteen lakins of rupees. They were found in the possession of a common "Kahar," who has long been trading on them. They are supposed to have been taken out of the Kaiser Bagh during the mutiny.

DOST MAHOMED "ASHAMED."-The Cabul newsletter in the Delhi Gazette contains one or two When the interesting touches of human nature. bier on which was borne the wife of Sooltan Jan, and daughter of the Ameer, was carried out of Herat, the procession of mourners was joined by several of her brothers, the siege being suspended. After the burial the deceased's son was taken to old Dost Mahomed, "who, after embracing and kissing his grandson, asked him if he knew him. On this the boy said, 'I know very well that you are my grandfather, but am very much surprised to find that you have no justice in you. See, continued the boy, 'the Shah of Persia has granted us a piece of bread, and you have resolved to take it from us, as if you have no bread in Cabool.' When Ubdoollah Khan thus snoke in public, the Ameer felt ashamed, and taking him into his arms comforted and dismissed him with favour."

THE NEW THEATRE IN CHOWRINGHEE .- The Hurkaru gives a description of the new theatre now being built on that plot of ground in Chowringhee henceforth to be known as Victoria square. The building, which is 147 feet long and 51 wide, is intended to accommodate 400 with or 800 without crinoline. The stage, which is to be 43 feet deep by 25 broad, will be on a model of the new stages of Drury Lane Theatre and Covent Garden. The scenery, which is shortly expected from England, has been painted by Beverley-a sufficient guarantee for its excellence. Shirley Brooks has written a prologue for the first night's performance, and Lord Elgin has taken tickets for the season. Amateurs, we presume, will supply the company" when there are no wandering "stars."

THE HOWRAH MECHANICS' INSTITUTE held their annual meeting on Friday, Nov. 14, the chaplain of the station presiding. This institute is as flourishing and useful as most of the same class in England. The English community of Howrah is large and the number of members has risen to 155, paying subscriptions amounting to Rs. 1,083. The number of books circulated by the institute was 3,286, the library containing 2,000 volumes.

NATIVE LIBERALITY.—The Maharajahs of Marwar and Ulwar have each subscribed Rs. 5,000 to the Cotton Distress Fund, through General Lawrence, the political agent.

DEATH OF CAPT. VICARS, AT RANGOON.—There has been a perfect gloom thrown over the military circles, by the death of Capt. Fox Vicars, of II.M.'s 68th D.L.I., a Crimean hero, beloved and respected by every man in his corps, the leader of all their games and amusements, and their foremost man on the cricket field. Besides this, his affable manners endeared him to all with whom he moved, from the major general down to the lowest "sub." While out at a "dog-hunt" a month ago, he either brushed past a fence placed round the roadside avenue of young trees now growing up about the town, or fell against one of them. A scratch under the chin, a continua-tion of the "hunt," a canter home, a piece of sticking plaster applied over the wound, which healed in a few days, a pain in the jaw a few weeks after the occurrence, which increased and inflamed the glands of the neck and surrounding parts, and poor Vicars dies from "tetanus, despite the doctors. After death, on opening the parts where he described the pain to be, a small piece of bamboo or jungle wood splinter was found, about half an inch long, which had entered and was driven up under the angle of the jaw bone. While entering he could not have been aware of it, as it must have been instantaneous. He was out a day or two before his death, on the cricket ground. His funeral was attended by almost every man in the corps, the general and all the staff, and a good sprinkling of merchants and others. The Rev. Mr. Crofton became much affected while reading the burial service. The previous evening (Sunday), at the iron church, Mr. Poynder preached a funeral sermon, from Hebrews, chapter xiii., verse 14th, to a full audience .- Madras Athenaum.

HYDERABAD-DECCAN, Nov. 6 .pagers have informed the public of the capture at Barree of the Brahmin supposed to be the Rao Salub of Hyderabad. His capture was effected by one Gujraj Singh, worming himself into his confidence, and then giving information about him to the English authorities. Previously to his doing so, he obtained a letter from him addressed to one Oudenath Singh at Hyderabad. which this person is informed that he has SQCOO Rathores at Dharoor, who will, on an appointed time, simultaneously seize upon Poond, Alunedonggur, and Sholapoor, and directs him to seize upon the Nizam and his minister at the same time, and to confine them. I have not yet ascertained who this Oudenath Singh is; Gujraj Singh formerly served in the assigned districts.

SIR WM. DENISON AT TINNEVELLY .- The Madres papers describe the visit of Sir W. Denisee to Tinnevelly. He received an address from the European and native missionaries, and visited the schools. At the end of 1861 the number of Christians under their care was 50,358, of whom $1,977 had been baptised, and 6,514 were comzunirants. The number of children in the schools, and pupils in the educational institutions, was 12,888, of whom 4,096 were girls. The proportion of children of Christian parents in schools to the entire Christian population was over 16 per ant. There were in the training institutions at Palamcottah and Sawyerpuram 994, of whom 467 were boys and young men, and 527 girls. In the 18 ecclesiastical districts of Tinnevelly there are 18 Finglish and 18 native missionaries, and more than 800 catechists and teachers. The native Christians subscribed Rs. 11,641 for missionary and charitable purposes last year. The missionaries confess that many are Christians but in name, "but as regards freedom from vice and crime, and especially as regards religious knowledge, order, docility, and libercity, will bear a comparison with an equal nucaber of Christians of European descent, bekenging to similar classes in society in any part of the world." Then all are loyal subjects. Sir W. Denison replied, "I quite agree with you that Government would step out of its proper province were it to attempt to aid directly in the evangelisation of the people, but you may rest assured test it looks with great interest upon the efforts you are making, and will be glad to afford to you scots aid as may be legitimately demanded from it."

GOTTON FROM NAGPORE. The Englishman pub-Eshes a report made to Government by Mr. Stanbrough, a merchant, on the Godavery route and the export of cotton. It confirms the deductions Friend of India) drew from Colonel Bruce's memorandum, while it asserts that the want of below will prevent any increase in the export of action from Nagpore. The route, if opened, will be of only local benefit, and canals must be made round the rocky barriers, for merchants will not break bulk. The Godavery, if the transit service were judiciously conducted, would certainly besome a communication of immense importance to the Central Provinces, however much the railway may eventually compete with it. The Jheree or spring crop of cotton is only ready to be removed May and June, at a season when the country made which should take it to the railway are on the point of being shut up by the rains. Lac, oilseds, and grain of all descriptions, are within reach of the rivers, which are then rapidly filling, so that these bulky goods can be conveyed to the neighbourhood of Chanda without very great experce, at the very time when the roads are bezoming impracticable. This transit service Mr. Rantrough would entrust to private management.

Notional, Education.—At the time when Mr. Educatione and the Supreme Government propose to surrender the educational cess in the N. Provinces, the Madras Government have appealed on the subject to the people of the Godawery district, offering to pay half the cost of every select they establish. Accordingly they have proved to subscribe some Rs. 5,000 annually to probability of the subscribe to witness this wise application of the protein aid system. A Normal school should now be established to supply good teachers.

CUDDAPAH COTTON.—A correspondent of the Madras Athenæum states that the cultivation of Egyptian cotton is being largely introduced into Cuddapah. The experiment is so successful as to induce the ryots to extend it still more. One Babreddi, of a village with an almost unpronounceable name, was one of the only two competitors for the Governor-General's prize of Rs. 10,000 for the best cotton grown in the Madras Presidency.

CHOLERA is said to be raging in Fort St. George in Madras. The artillery have been moved to, Palaveram. The Madras Times says 300 per week have for some time fallen victims to the epidemic, but it does not mention how many Europeans.

COLONEL E. BRICE, C.B., with the rank of Brigadier general has been appointed Inspector of Artillery in Madras.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CAPTURE OF MADHOO RAO .- The Southern Bombay police have again been so clever as to catch a rebel ringleader. Hardly is Zahoor-ool-Hossein despatched to Campore, when the assistant of Rao Sahib in the conspiracy at Hyderabad is apprehended near Sholapore. A correspondent of the Bombay Times of India asserts that the man calls himself Madhoo Rao Sahib, is the adopted son of Bajee Rao, the last of the Peishwas, like the Nana, and says he has come all the way from Nepaul, where the Nana is, and for some time was dodging about in different places, the greater part of which time was spent at the Hindoo shrines, at Panderpoor, and other places. The Nana had planned another rising, but this time in the Mahratta country. The socalled Madhoo Rao, at the time of his seizure by Captain Nuttall at Punchgaum, a village thirty miles from Sholapore, had treasonable documents. Among them was a proclamation offering a reward for the head of every European. He was dressed in the garb of a Goosawee, and little expected detection. With him were apprehended Pundit, who was guilty of murder in 1857, and another.

Mr. SMALES, late Paymaster of the Inniskillings, having been confined as an insolvent, has been freed for four months, under a medical certificate that longer confinement would be injurious to his health. Most of his creditors for large amounts are in England, and as they must be served with notices, it will take four months before the insolvent can be brought up again. Mr. Smales has a son in New York, and a large family in England. His principal debt was incurred twenty years ago, when he first entered the army. It is for Rs. 10,000 to Messrs. Dolan and Co. This a sad conclusion to the Mhow scandal. It is said that Lieut. col. Crawley, commanding the corps, has obtained leave to England on private affairs. We doubt if he will be able to modify the strongly condemnatory opinions held regarding his conduct by the military authorities.

THE INDIAN GOLD FIELDS .--All hopes of pro fitbable gold mining in the Southern Mahratta county are set at rest by the statements of a Mr. Schott, deputed by an embryo gold-finding company to report on the spot. It appears in a letter to the Bombay Times of India. There are evidences of gold, but to work it will never pay. quartz-reef which promises to be profitable is rarely met with anywhere, and fuel is too dear to work it. As to alluvial mining, the deposit in which the gold occurs is confined to a few insignificant nullas and blind water courses, occupying the slopes and flats, the bed rock in every case being exposed more or less, denoting a very scanty supply of wash dirt. The native washers are said to be more careful and effective than any in the world, whether Chinese or Australian, and yet in twelve days at Sootoor one man secured only three runees' worth.

Muscar.-A correspondent of the Bombay Times of India notices the great popularity of Major M. Green, our political agent at Muscat, among the Arabs. Previous to the departure of the agent the Imaum came in from Woolthia, a distance of nine miles, to pay him a farewell visit. Our influence in the Persian Gulf is extending, and we shall yet monopolise and increase its trade. The telegraphic wire has been laid to Ras Cutcherie, a distance of one hundred and twentythree miles from Kurrachee. By 1863, it is said, the line will be laid to Charbur Bay, six hundred miles from Kurrachee. Thence a submarine cable will go to Muscat, as the coast beyond Charbur is Persian territory. From Muscat it is proposed to run an aerial line of wire to Ras-ool-Khyma slong the Buttinah coast of Arabia, which is well adapted for a telegraphic route. From Ras-ool-Khyma a submarine line is proposed, touching at the many islands on the Arabian side of the Gulf to Grane, a noted seaport a little to the southward of Bussora. From Bussora, by the River Euphrates, the distance is about two hundred miles to Bagdad, to which place the Turkish Government have a telegraphic line from Constantinople. The Russians have a telegraphic line to Teheran in Persia, and it is supposed to be Russian influence acting on the Persian Court which causes our negotiations for telegraphic purposes to be looked on distrustfully by that Court.

A JUSTICE AND A FELLOW.—In Bombay a good deal of scandal has been caused by Mr. Goculdass Tejpall, a justice of the peace and fellow of the Bombay University, having cheated the Calcutta and Burmah Steam Company. He made false declarations respecting the amount of specie contained in certain boxes which he shipped for Kurrachee, and thus escaped paying the full amount of per centage charged for carrying specie. The matter has been compromised: the justice of the peace has agreed to hand over Rs. 6,000 to the Lancashire Relief Fund.

Bombay Harbour.—A commision is now reporting on the best means of lighting the harbour of Bombay and the whole question of the conservancy of the port. The plan of Capt. Barker, the master-attendant, is to erect one lighthouse on Kenery Island, which marks the entrance to the harbour on the south side, and another opposite to it on the S.W. Prong, at the distance of a mile and three-quarters from the present lighthouse. This coast has of late been almost as notorious for wrecks as the treacherous Hooghly.

ADULTERATION OF COTTON.—According to the Bombay Review the local Government has appointed a commission to collect evidence of the extent to which the fraudulent adulteration of cotton prevails. The commission consists of the Hon. Mr. Scott, Hon. Mr. Inverarity, Mr. Hannay, Mr. McIlwraith, Dr. Forbes, and Mr. Forjett. Three of the members have left for the Broach districts, where the evil flourishes unchecked.

COLONEL L. PELLY has resigned his appointment as acting Political Agent at Zanzibar, and will succeed Captain Jones, I. N., in the Political Agency of Bushire. We trust Colonel Pelly will make us as familiar with the Persian Gulf and its shores as he has so pleasantly done in the case of Eastern Africa.

THE COTTON PRIZE.

Nov. 11.—No. 6,386.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council has resolved that in the territories subordinate to the Presy. of Fort William, the conditions of competition for the Government cotton prize of 1862-63 shall be the same as those observed in the past season. The foll. rules, therefore, based on the Govt. resolution, which appeared in the Gazette of the 10th Aug. last year, are now published for general information: mation :

The prize will be given for the largest quantity of cotton, combined with the best quality which shall be grown upon any one estate within the Presy, during the season of 1862-63, and which shall be brought for shipment to any port in or before the month of June, 1863.

B. Cotton, from whatever district in the interior it may have come, will, if intended for shipment from any port in the territories subordinate to the Presy. of fort William, be considered eligible to compete for the prize.

C. The extent of ground under cultivation must not be less than thirty acres, all belonging to one property, or cultivated by one superintendent.

D. The fulfilment of the last-named conditions must be certified by the chief revenue officer of the district in which the estate is situated, or by any other agents specially recognised by the Government for that purpose.

These two last rules are intended to prevent the prize being given to a selection of picked samples from a large area, which would require none of the care or attention to the general cultivation of the plant which it is the desire of Government to en-

The prize will be awarded by the Chamber of Commerce at Calcutta, if the gentlemen representing that body will consent to undertake the task.

F. A sealed sample of the cotton must be sent by each competitor to the Chamber of Commerce, and the consistence of the con each competitor to the Chamber of Commerce, and the consignment to which the prize is awarded will afterwards be inspected by the Chamber and verified as corresponding with the sample. In case of its being desired to ship the consignment at an ontport, the inspection of it will be made by some person specially appointed by the Chamber of Commerce.

G. Each sample must be accompanied by a full and clear statement by the grower of the system which has been pursued in the cultivation, with an accurate and detailed account of all the expenses

H. Any subsidiary rules which may be found requisite will be laid down by the Chamber of Commerce.

All public officers whose assistance may be sought in respect to the conditions of the 4th rule, or any other object, are enjoined to give their cordial co-operation in carrying out the intentions of Government.

JOINING-TIME, CIVIL SERVICE

Nor. 14.—The following letter from the Hon. E. Drummond, see, to the Govt. of Inaia, Financial dept., to H. D. Sandeman, Esq., civil paymaster, Fort William, dated Fort William, Council Chamber, Oct. 7, No. 704g, is published for general information. tion:

am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 41, of the 30th July last, enquiring whether the orders in respect to joining-time, contained in the concluding paragraph of the letter, No. 2.713, addressed from this department to the Madras Government, on the 26th March, 1869, were intended to modify the twentieth section of the Covenanted Civil Absence Rules, and sufmitting, as an illustration of this annum, the cuestion what ioning time. tion of this enquiry, the question what joining-time should be allowed to—

1st. An officer who is ordered to a station at a distance of 310 miles, of which 100 are traversable by rail.

2ndly. An officer deputed to a distance of 100 miles, all traversable by rail.

In reply, I am desired to inform you that Section XX, of the Civil Absentee Rules is still in force, and applicable to all cases where railways or steamers not available; but where such means of loco motion exist, the rule to be observed is that laid down in the orders of the 26th March, 1860, which down in the orders of the 26th March, 1860, which have been confirmed, as respects travelling time, by the notification, No. 65, of the 30th March, 1861, and as regards time for preparation, by the letter to the Civil paymaster, Madras, No. 11,369, of the 7th Sept., 1861, a copy of which was forwarded to your office with the endorsement noted in the margin. [No. 11,376, dated 7th Sept.]

In the cases, therefore, which have been supposed by you, the officers will be entitled to joining-time, excluding Sundays, of 29 days [14 days to prepare, 1 day for the 100 miles traversed by railway, and 14 days for the remaining 210 miles] and 15 days [14 days to prepare, and 1 day to travel] respectively.

This rule, I am to add, applies equally to covenanted and uncovenanted servants; but when any uncovenanted officer is required in joining an appointment to perform a journey for which neither railways nor steamers are available, his joining-time will be regulated by Section XIII of the Absentee rules of his own service.

ABOLITION OF THE INDIAN NAVY. [The following are the official papers lately issued relating to the final abolition of the Indian Navy, to which we alluded in our Summary of the 8th inst. No. 561:] To his Excellency the Right Honourable the Go-vernor-general of India in Council.

vernor-general of India in Council.

My Lord,—1. I have received and considered in Council the despatch from your Excellency's Government, No. 3, of the 18th January last, in the Marine Department. The manner in which naval and maritime services can best for the future be performed on the coasts of India, and in the neighbouring seas, has been very fully discussed in the correspondence which has passed between the Government of India and that of Bombay. Since the receipt of that correspondence I have had the great advantage of personal communication upon the subject with Sir George Clerk and Commodore Wellesley, who have lately returned to England, and I proceed to communicate to your Excellency the final instructions of her Majesty's Government.

final instructions of her Majesty's Government.

2. It was stated in my Marine Despatch, No. 77, of the 30th of August, 1861, that the defence of India against a serious attack by sea, as well as the naval services required in the Red Sea, and upon the eastern coast of Africa, will be undertaken by vessels of the Royal Navy. You have represented in the strongest terms that it would not be for the public advantage to maintain the Indian Navy with public advantage to maintain the Indian Navy with its existing organisation, but reduced into a smaller service, for the purposes only of protecting the Indian ports, of suppressing the slave trade and piracy in the Persian Gulf, and of transporting troops and stores. I fully appreciate the serious difficulties which would attend such a change; and I have also before me the opinion which has been expressed by Commodore Wellesley, and confirmed by the Government of Bombay, that it would be by the Government of Bombay, that it would be considered as a degradation, and felt as distasteful, by the officers of the service themselves. considerations have forced upon her Majesty's Government the conclusion that the wisest course will be altogether to abolish the Indian Navy as at sent constituted, and to provide otherwise for the performance of such duties affoat as cannot advantageously be undertaken by vessels of the Royal

3. Such services as are required from ships of war in the Persian Gulf will for the future be performed by the Royal Navy. Arrangements for this pur-pose will be made by the Board of Admiralty, and the senior naval officer in the Indian seas will be placed in communication with your Excellency's Government, and with that of Bombay, and instructed to meet, as far as possible, any demands for naval operations which may be made upon him by either of those Governments.

4. The floating defences of the Indian ports and harbours remain to be considered, in order to dispose of the purely naval portion of the duties for which the Indian navy was intended to provide. The only yessels calculated for harbour defence which now The only form part of the Indian navy are two gunboats. may be desirable to add to their number, as well as to provide iron-plated floating batteries for the defence of Bombay, and possibly, also, for that of other ports in India. These vessels in time of peace will be kept in a state of readiness for service, and when required, they will be commissioned by officers of the Royal Navy, their crews being raised in India, or, if necessary, sent out from England. All the expenses of these floating defences will, of course, be defrayed out of the revenues of India.

5. The manner in which the Bengal marine has answered the purposes of the Government of India proves that there are many maritime duties which can be performed with efficiency by a temporary service, fluctuating in numbers as the demand for vessels may increase or diminish; and her Ma-jesty's Government consider that such duties on the restern coasts of India as have hitherto been performed by the Indian Navy, but for which it may not be convenient to employ ships of the Royal Navy-namely, the transport of troops and stores. and other civil duties—can be performed for the fu-ture by a local service, entitled the Bombay Marine, on the same footing as that on which the Bengal Marine has always been, and not under martial law

6. I have now to consider the number of vessels which will be required for these duties, and I am of opinion that six steam transports, three sailing transports, and two steam-vessels for general service will be sufficient for such purposes for all India. The names of the vessels which, as far as I am able to judge, are best suited for the several services, as well as the manner in which it seems to me that when as the manner in which it seems to be that they should be distributed, are shown in Enclosure No. 1 to this despatch. The four vessels required for the Bombay side of India should constitute the Bombay Marine, and the remaining vessels on the Bengal side should form the Bengal Marine. There is no need of a separate marine for Madras; the vessels required there for transport services have always been furnished from other presidencies where there are docks and conveniences for the repair and fitting of ships, as well as for their lying in safety during the adverse monsoon. One or two of the Go vernment vessels retained on the Bengal side might be considered as available for the transport service Madras upon the requisition of the Government of that presidency, and while detached upon such service they should be under the orders and at the charge of that Government.

7. I leave it to your Excellency's Government, in communication with that of Bombay, to determine are required how many officers of different classes for the Bombay Marine. Their pay and allowances will be the same as those of the officers of the Bengal Marine, all of whom, excepting such as are employed afloat, or have been placed in suitable shore appointments, will have been now discharged with gratuities proportioned to their length of service, in accordance with the instructions conveyed in my despatch No. 77, of the 30th August, 1861. If there should be a sufficient number of volunteers from among the present officers of the Indian Navy fi to command and officer any vessels of the Bengal Marine which may be required from time to time, they should have the preference over all other can didates, upon the conditions which will be laid down in a subsequent part of this despatch. All officers, both of the Bengal and Bombay Marines, should be employed upon the clear understanding that their service is only temporary, and does not entitle them to pensions, for I agree with your Excellency's Gonment that, as private enterprise extends in India, it may become expedient still further to reduce the number of vessels in the service of the Govern-

8. I have next to consider the manner in which the officers of the Indian Navy should be dealt with, who, from no fault of their own, will be deprived of their professional prospects. I have already, in a former despatch, expressed the high sense which is entertained by her Majesty's Government of the gallant and meritorious services of the Indian Navy, and now that political and financial considerations have rendered it necessary to abolish that service, it is my desire to consider the interests of the officers in the most liberal spirit.

9. I have, therefore, somewhat modified in their favour the scale of pensions which was recommended by your Excellency's Government. The revised scale will be found in Enclosure No. 2 to this despatch, and it should be brought into operation at I shall promulgate it to the officers of the Indian Navy who are now at home, and pensions in accordance with it will at once be allotted to them here, leaving for future adjustment any cases in respect to which there may be a doubt as to the amount of pension to which an officer is entitled. Although the acting masters of the Indian Navy are not entitled to pensions under this scale, I shall not interfere with the pensions which the Government of Bombay have granted, subject to my sanction in Council, to ten of those officers who have served for more than fifteen years. The honorary promotions upon retirement should be gazetted at once by the Government of Bombay. I have only further to observe that the names of such officers as accept the highest scale of pension, in lieu of the right which they now possess to succeed to the pension of £800 per annum (that is to say, the officers placed in the first category of the pension scale), will be retained in italics upon a general list to be framed, which shall include the four present holders and all the expectants of the pension of £800 per annum, for the purpose of regulating the succession. Officers who may select the lower scale of pension, with the prospect of the pension of £800, will only succeed to the latter in their proper seniority, and as they would have done if all the officers now entitled to succeed to it had retained their right and actually succeeded in turn. A copy of this list should be forwarded to me.

10. I concur with your Excellency's Government. that it may be more acceptable to some of the offi cers if their pensions are commuted into a capital sum, and I shall be prepared to commute half value of the pensions of officers of the rank of lieutenant and upwards, and the whole value of the pensions of officers junior to lieutenant. It will be necessary that officers applying for the capitalisa-tion of their pensions shall be examined as to the state of their health by a medical board, and if the medical report is satisfactory the pensions will be capitalised upon the principle that the lives of the officers are as good as average lives of the same age in England, and the commutation will be calculated at a rate of interest of 5 per cent., according to the table which forms Enclosure No. 3 to this de spatch.

11. The officers of the Indian Navy should be invited to volunteer for the Bombay Marine, as well as for employment in any branch of the uncovenanted service in India. I have no doubt that such employment may be found for many of them, should desire it, and I most earnestly impress upon your Excellency that it is the duty of the Govern-ment to provide in this manner for as large a number as can advantageously be so employed. A preference should be given to these officers in filling up all vacancies in maritime appointments, such as those of master attendant at the different presidencies or ports in India, port officers, emigration officers, and any situations on shore where the skill and professional acquirements of a naval officer would be use-Whenever an officer of the Indian navy in receipt of a pension, granted to him upon the abolition of that service, is appointed to any office in India, or under the Secretary of State for India in Council at home, it should be upon the condition that, if the emoluments of the appointment exceed the amount of his pension by one-fourth, he shall not receive any portion of his pension while he is so employed. the emoluments are less than the pension and a fourth, such portion of the pension only shall be drawn as will make the total sum received annually by the officer equal to the amount of his pension and a fourth. An officer of the Indian Navy, upon ceasing to hold any such appointment, will receive his Indian navy pension and, in addition, the pension, if any, to which he may be entitled under the regulations applicable to his subsequent employment. Officers volunteering for service in India will not be permitted to commute their pensions, or any portion of them, for a capital sum whilst so employe

12. I rely upon the Government of Bombay to ke care to discharge the crews of the vessels of the Indian Navy gradually, and so as to prevent more seamen being thrown out of employment than can be absorbed in the merchant service or otherwise. Among the crews are many marine boys of various ages and qualifications who, having been sent out to India under articles of apprenticeship, must be kept upon full pay (and subsistence must be found for them if invalided) until the expiration of their articles, unless those who may be twenty-one years old, or the parents or guardians of such of them as may be under age, shall consent to cancel the articles of apprenticeship. This consent could probably be obtained in many instances by the offer of a small gratuity, and the Government of Bombay is authorized to make such allowances, according to the circumstances of each particular case. The greater portion, however, of these apprentices must now be good seamen, and it would be for the advantage of the public service to retain such men in preference to other seamen until the end of their apprenticeship. It is not intended to send out any more marine boys or apprentices to the local marine services.

13. Every officer on the effective list of the Indian Navy will, on his retiring in consequence of the abolition of that service, be allowed the passage money homeward of his actual rank. Several of these offi cers have already left India upon furlough or sick certificate, or with special leave of the local Government, under the authority given in my recent despatch to the Government of Bombay, in consequence of there being no employment for them at In every such case, when the offipresent in India. cer eventually retires upon the abolition of the Indian Navy, passage money homeward will be allowed to him, provided he left India after the receipt at Bombay of your secretary's letter of the 17th of April, 1861, which ordered large reductions in the Indian Navy, and recommended its abolition; and provided that the Government shall not have already defrayed that the Government shall not have already defrayed the cost of the officer's passage homeward.

14. You were informed in my despatch, No. 77, of the 30th of August, 1861, that the surveys of the Indian seas will be conducted by the Royal Navy, at the expense of the Imperial Government, after the completion of those portions of the surveys of the coasts and harbours of India which are incomplete or require to be verified. I transmit herewith a copy of a letter from the hydrographer to the Admiralty, specifying the surveys which have to be completed at the expense of India in order to carry out this arrangement. I have, therefore, to desire that, in addition to the ships which are required for other marine services, three suitable vesquite for other marine services, three suitable vessels may be retained for the purpose of completing the work specified by the hydrographer, which will be divided into three portions, a surveying party being employed upon each until it is completed. The competent surveyors of the Indian Navy will be invited to volunteer to perform this service upon the surveying pay and allowances heretofore received by officers of the Indian Navy; but they will not be considered as commissioned officers, or be under martial law while so employed. I shall take steps to ascertain what number of surveying officers of the Indian Navy, now at home, desire to volunteer for this service. The Government of Bombay should forward to me, without delay, a similar list, and specify the vessels which are disposable for the ser-vice. The surveyors will then be selected here, and the necessary instructions given to them. They will, after the completion of the surveys, receive the pensions which may have been allotted to them upon the abolition of the Indian Navy.

15. With the exception of the ships required for the transport and civil services, of those which it may be advisable to retain for purposes of harbour defence, and of those which may be retained for a time in order to complete the surveys, the remaining ships belonging to the Indian Navy and Bengal Marine should be disposed of to the best advantage, as opportunities occur.

16. I am not, at present, possessed of sufficient information to enable me to decide finally upon the manner in which it may be most for the advantage of the public service to deal with the dockyards of Bombay and Kidderpore. It is obvious, that the reduced requirements of the Bombay and Bengal Marines should enable your Government and that of Bombay to reduce the expenses of those es-tablishments. I shall be glad to learn what course you recommend as to the dockyard at Kidderpore, and, after you have communicated with the Government of Bombay, as to that of Bombay.

17. Arrangements must also be made for the transaction of the marine business at Bombay under the new system, and considerable reductions will, I apprehend, be found to be practicable in the existing naval and marine establishments at that presidency. for it will obviously be unnecessary and inexpedient to retain the existing organisation, which is only applicable to a war service. But I leave the future arrangements to be suggested by the Government of Bombay, and disposed of by your Excellency's Government, only observing that care should be taken to consolidate, as far as possible, all the maritime business of the port in one office.

18. You mention in the course of your despatch under reply that, in consequence of the announcement conveyed to you by my despatch No. 77, of the 30th August, 1861, that the naval services in the Red Sea and on the eastern coast of Africa would for the future be performed by vessels of the Royal Navy, at the expense of the Imperial Government, you have directed the cost of the vessels of the Indian Navy which since that time have been employed in those waters to be charged to the Imperial Govern-ment. It was not intended that a charge which has for many years been defrayed out of the revenues of India should be assumed by the Imperial Government before the services are actually performed by vessels of the Royal Navy. I, therefore, desire that the revenues of India shall be charged with those expenses.

19. In conclusion, I authorise your Excellency's Government to dispose of any matters of detail which may arise in regard to the various changes which are now directed by her Majesty's Government; and I have only to add that it is most advisable that no unnecessary delay shall occur in giving effect to the instructions which are contained in the present despatch, a copy of which has been forwarded for the information and guidance of the Government of Bombay .- I have, &c., CHARLES WOOD.

No. 4. To T. G. Baring, Esq., M.P., Under-Secretary of State for India.

Admiralty, April 3rd, 1862.

Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 1st inst., I have to state that I had, some weeks since, requested the principal officers of the Indian Navy who are now on furlough in London to prepare, 1st, a memorandum on the present state of the Indian coast survey; and, 2nd, on what remains to be done. This memorandum is now in the hands of the printer, and I am enabled to give you a summary of the latter heading at once :-

1. The east coast of the Malacca Straits, from Pulo Penang northwards to the Pakshan river, a distance of about 300 miles, requires to be immediately surveyed. As the coast is fronted by an archipelago of small islets, it would probably require three years to complete it, unless work could be done in the south-west monsoon. The Indian Navy brig Krishnah, that has, I am told, been already employed there, would do the work very well, and to carry it out efficiently and economically, she should have a surveyor in charge, with two paid assistant surveyors and a youngster.

2. The coast of Orissa, on the north-west side of the Bay of Bengal, from Santapilly northwards to Point Palmyras, about 300 miles distance. The Mutlah brig, I believe, might do this work. She would require for staff a commander and surveyor, two assistant surveyors, and a youngster; and, as the coast is tolerably straight, I think it might be completed in two seasons.

3. The west coast of India, from Bombay north-wards to Danu, a length of about 100 miles. It would not require more than one fine season, and possibly the Euphrates brig might be employed on it. This survey should also be in charge of a surveyor, two assistant surveyors, and a youngster.

4. Bombay harbour, which, I understand, the Secretary of State for India has already ordered to be undertaken. This survey must be chiefly carried out in boats or in a small steamer.

 Chronometric measuremenst in the Bay of Ben This work would occupy the whole of one fine season. It would be best and most economically done by a small screw steamer with a batch of about thirteen good chronometers, and the vessel would require the same staff as above.

6. Chronometric measurements from Bombay westwards to the Red Sea and Gulf of Suez; also to the outlying groups of islands and shoals in the Indian Ocean, as the Chagos Archipelago, Saya de Malha Bank, Seychelles, Amirante, and the doubtful dangers in that neighbourhood, which should be swept out of charts if they do not exist. This work would occupy at least one fine season, with a similar screw steamer and the same number of chronometers. It might be done after the Bay of Bengal, which is the more important.

7. The Andaman group, when opportunity offers, should be re-examined and set right in position, which appears to be erroneous.

Should the Secretary of State for India in Council be disposed to carry out the above surveys, I think all will have been done that could in fairness be asked of the Indian Government, and it would be the finishing stroke, worthy of the useful and important labours that have already been executed by the officers of the Indian Navy.—I am, &c.,

JOHN WASHINGTON, Hydrographer.

I send a chart of the Indian Ocean, on which the portions of coast it is proposed to survey are marked in red.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF ARTHLERY .- In nominating the two officers for the new appointments of Inspector-general of Artillery for the Bengal Presidency, now sanctioned and filled up, his Excellency the Commander in Chief recommended Brigadier Swinley and Colonel J. Brind, C.B., and the Government accepted the nomination, and put those officers in orders. The appointment of the latter officer supersedes and passes over Colonel C. S. Reid of the Artillery, who is senior to Colonel Brind; and consequently the latter officer will, so long as he is serving in his own arm of the service, be liable to be inspected and commanded by a junior officer. Col. Reid, on being passed over in this manner by the Commander-in-Chief, referred his case to the supreme Government. The Governor-general re-fused to interfere with the selection of the Commander-in-Chief, on the grounds that he was the best judge in the selection of officers for such commands as those in question, and for purely military appointments generally.

RENOVATION OF BOMBAY.

THE town and harbour of Bombay are, at last, to be placed in a state of defence against either an attack by a European naval force from the sea, or an assault by a mob from the land side. As Sir William Mansfield wisely remarks, it is quite impossible to construct fortifications to protect a city containing 800,000 inhabitants from a regular siege. An army moving in the open field is the only secure defence in such a case. The present Fort has long been recognised as untenable. In the present stage of military science and naval gunnery it is a snare rather than a shield, and would be found more efficient to destroy than to save the town. The Fort, therefore, is to be demolished with as little delay as possible, and harbour defences constructed on a large and comprehensive scale, and rendered as formidable and complete as the highest engineering skill can devise. On the land side, however, only a cordon of detached forts will be formed, such as can be held by a small garrison, though amply sufficient to suppress any civic disturbances, or to crush an attempt at a coup de main by any force less considerable than an army. ground gained by the demolition of the ramparts will, in the first place, be set apart for the following public edifices: -Barracks for troops required for defences; European general hospital and sanatarium or quarters for officers on medical certificate; high courthouse; small cause court; police-office; postoffice and telegraph-office; custom-house; secretariate; quarters for staff officers and officials of all grades, civil and military, of various departments whose offices or duties are in or near the fort; new passenger station Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company; schoolrooms, including day-schools, attached to the several Churches in the fort; treasury; Government Record - office; Government Offices now dispersed in Town-hall, the Town Barracks, and its neighbourhood in Church-lane, and opposite the Cathedral. The remaining portion of the recovered area will be sold to private individuals under conditions that will secure a certain degree of uniformity and of architectural beauty. The entire expenses of the demolition, and of the harbour defences and forts, will not only be covered by the sale of these plots of building ground, but a balance exceeding a million sterling is confidently looked for. The most stringent rules will be laid down for the care will be taken to render new Bombay the most beautiful city in the East. It is another point to be considered is, what has true, Englishmen do not generally excel in raising architectural monuments worthy of the outlay incurred in their erection, but in this instance there is some reason to hope that there will be no repetition of the clumsy blunders that have made London the laughingstock of men of taste. In three years the military part of these great works will be completed, if the estimates be not too sanguine, and then for the first time for many years the merchants of Bombay will be able to regard with equanimity the prospect of war between Great Britain and any other maritime power. Hitherto, the unprotected state of the harbour, and the valuable shipping it contained, have absolutely invited aggression.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

As Governor of the Bombay Presidency Sir Bartle Frere seems bent on surpassing the character he acquired as an able administrator during his Commissionership of Scinde. On a very recent occasion we were called upon to notice the vigour and sagacity he had displayed in imparting animation and the elements of material prosperity to the long-dormant province of North Canara. We showed how he had called into being a commercial seaport, destined, without doubt, to exercise an important influence on the future welfare of the rich and extensive districts sloping towards the western coast. New roads are being constructed to convey the products of the interior to the new capital, whence they will be transported on shipboard to the far distant Isles of the West. Nothing, in short, appears to have been overlooked that could further the speedy and efficient development of the valuable resources of the long-neglected province. But while accelerating the progress of the more remote territories entrusted to his stewardship, Sir Bartle Frere has not committed the too common fault of neglecting those near at hand, and which might be thought to have advanced beyond the period of tutelage. The very unsatisfactory and incomplete arrangements connected with the railway system appear to have attracted his special attention, and certainly there are few subjects at the present day more worthy of the serious consideration of every Government. The construction of trunk lines alone will clearly never suffice to meet the growing wants of the community, or even to provide an adequate return for the money and labour expended upon them. Sir Bartle, therefore, with the approbation of his colleagues, calls upon the Consulting Engineer for Railways to report upon the roads already made, or making, from the different stations to the nearest town, or village, and he pointedly alludes to the absence of any tolerable road from any station between Tanna and Sholapore-a circumstance characterised by his Excellency as "a discredit and blemish to the great work with which it (the road) ought to communicate." The Tramway Company, indeed, propose to supplement the works of the Railway Companies by laying down tramways to connect all places of importance with the nearest trunk line. Thus, in the Bombay Presidency, they improvement of the present unsatisfactory offer to construct a tramway from Palej to sanitary condition of the island, and every Tumbooseer, a second from Neriad to Dakore, and a third from Annuad to Pitland. But been done for the convenience of travellers beyond conveying them along the railway, and also what has been done for the accommodation of traffic. In both respects there has been great remissness on the part of the railway authorities. The passengers' waitingrooms, we are told, are neither suitable nor sufficient, while a ladics'-room is seldom provided. There is likewise much to be desired under the head of decency and cleanliness, and scarcely anywhere is there any accommodation for native travellers, who are compelled to wait in a goods'-shed, or under a verandah, until the time arrives for issuing the tickets, when a general and unseemly scramble takes place. To obviate these various inconveniences the Bombay Government give instructions for the erection of a Travellers' Bungalow wherever there is a sufficient resort of respectable travellers to maintain one. At the smaller stations a room is to be provided for passengers waiting for a train, with at least one room to which ladies may retire, and where they will be free from intrusion. For the natives, again, a good Durumsala, or Serai, is to be supplied, "fairly proportioned to the traffic at each station, and always furnished with one or more private rooms suitable to any native family of respectability which may require it, and prefer it to the accommodation in the Travellers' Bungalow." And as an adjunct to the Serai, a good well, with trees to shelter men and beasts, is mentioned as indispensable, whereas, at present, the supply of water is often deficient and distant, or appropriated by the railway. Then, goods'-sheds are wanting, nor has any provision been made for carts, cattle, and their drivers, that bring goods for transport on the line. All these deficiencies are to be made good, and suitable measures adopted for affording every reasonable convenience and accommodation to native carriers and traders, and, in fact, to all persons making use of and benefiting the various lines of railway. It is almost superfluous to remark that the Madras Government has not yet made any sort of movement in a similar direction.

INDIAN BANKS AND INDIAN INSOL-VENTS.

THE Calcutta Insolvent Court was enlirened, a few weeks ago, by a broad farce, the principal characters in which were taken by an insolvent officer and a learned judge. The former was a captain in her Majesty's 10th Regiment of Bombay Native Infantry, and lately Assistant-superintendent of Police at Lucknow-the latter, Sir Mordaunt Wells. It must be admitted that the insolvent conducted himself in a very unbecoming and disrespectful manner towards the Bench, and altogether exhibited himself in the light of a vain, frivolous spendthrift, ignorant alike of what was due to himself and to others. His debts amounted to upwards of £5,700, while his assets were nil, unless the sum of £340 which he claimed as owing to him by some of his brother officers be regarded as a set-off. Jewellery and clothes, of course, formed no inconsiderable item in his schedule, but a very much larger amount must be placed to the account of the enormous interest charged on loans from the Banks. One bad feature in the case was the purchase of a gold watch, valued at £45, after the insolvent was fully aware of the desperate state of his affairs; and a still worse one was his attempting to obtain from Messrs. Grindlay and Co. the sum of £500, by means of a draft on his father, though he well knew that the draft would not be honoured. He pretended, indeed, to believe that if time had been given him he would have been able to gradually liquidate his debts, and also stated that he trusted to his father's sorely-tried forbearance to save him from dishonour. On the Judge asking him if he really supposed that he could have paid off so large a sum as £5,000, he answered in the most familiar manner:-

"My debts don't amount to that sum, which is only imaginary. If you divide it by four that would be about the sum I owe.

"His Lordship.—I am speaking from your own schedule

"Insolvent.—Yes, that is the sum stated there. but that is a myth, and I'll tell you how it came to swell into so enormous a figure. My legal advisers in Lucknow told me that I would be obliged to put down every debt, no matter when incurred, and how much seever I might dispute the amount; so that if you deduct these debts and the large amount of interest tacked on to each debt, the balance will be one-fourth of the amount."

Soon afterwards he affirmed that one of the principal causes of his being brought before the Court was that he had been "let in' rather heavily by becoming security for his brother officers, and this statement he subsequently repeated, for which he was very properly rebuked by the Judge, who reminded him that the utmost he had lost in this manner was under £400. On being questioned as to his transactions with Messrs. Grindlay and Co., he said that he had borrowed some money from them on his return from England, when he was "hard up," and had intended to repay it as soon as he had the means to do so. He then went on to say that some time in the spring he fell into difficulties at Lucknow, and would have been put into jail had there been any place "fit for the accommodation of European debtors." As it was he escaped and "made a bolt for it." Being further questioned as to the Bill of Exchange he drew upon his father after the latter had positively refused to afford him any further assistance, he replied that his father had not positively and distinctly refused to help him, but had only said that he could not do so without acting unjustly towards his other children. A little later the insolvent pleaded the high interest he had been charged, and asked if his lordship had calculated what it came to, an inquiry that led to the following edifying dialogue, which we copy from the English-

"Insolvent.—But have you calculated the interest? "Hes Lordship .- I have. It is right that the public should know how far tradespeople are affected in every case.

"Insolvent.—Now, will your lordship kindly look at the interest they have charged in each case

"His Lordship.—I don't see it in your schedule.

"His Lordship.—I don't see it in your schedule.

"Inselvent.—Well, look at their bills.

"His Lordship.—I have looked into your tailors' bills, and the sum is so great that I can safely say that it would not have cost me more for clothes for firty years.
"Insolvent.—Indeed! I must wish your lordship joy at being so very economical.

"His Lordship.—However reckless and indifferent a person may be, still he is not forgetful of the respect due to the Bench, and I am surprised that a gentle man in your position should address a judge in the manner you have done. Now, I should have avoided mentioning a circumstance, but since your conduct has been such as to disentitle you to any consideration in that way, I will state it. You endeavoured, tion in that way, I will state it. You endeavoured, sir, in a most improper manner, to influence a judge in the discharge of his duties by writing to him a private note.

"Insolvent.—I beg your lordship's pardon. I never wrote a letter with any such motive.

"His Lordship.—You have, sir. You addressed me a private letter, which a gentleman in your position must have known was a highly improper position must nave known was a highly improper proceeding. I forebore, for the sake of others, to mention it, and but for your demeanour this day it would not have escaped my lips. You appear de-sirous of exhibiting a spirit of bravado.

"Insolvent.—I beg your lordship's pardon. I am not displaying a spirit of bravado.

"His Lordship.—You have, sir, in the remark you have just made. It is the duty of a judge to notice extravagance on the part of an insolvent, and the sum you have incurred in tailors' bills would not have been incurred by a person with five times your salary. I don't care who an insolvent is or what his position—he may be an officer or a gentleman; when position—he may be an officer or a gentleman; when he comes here he will be dealt with in the same way as any other person. There can be no distinction in a court of justice. I see here one of the tailors' bills amounts to the large sum of £80.

Insolvent.-That debt was incurred in England.

"His Lordship.--I don't care where; and coming out with such a large stock of clothes, I don't see what necessity you had to run up further bills for the same article. Then, see, you are indebted to the proprietors of six newspapers. What right has a the same article. Then, see, you are indepted to the proprietors of six newspapers. What right has a gentleman with your means to subscribe to such a number of publications? I see the Englishman here, the Bombay Times, the Bombay Gazette, the Delhi

Cazette, and other newspapers.

"Insolvent.—My Lord, I did not get the whole of those papers at one time.

"His Lordship.—When you did not pay for those you had first, what right had you to stop them and subscribe to others? subscribe to others?

Insolvent.—I did not stop taking them, my lord, but the proprietors themselves discontinued sending me the papers when they found I did not pay them—(laughter)."

Is it possible to imagine a more undignified scene, or one more calculated to lower the respect due to the Bench? And then, as if he had not already sufficiently committed himself by this ebullition of temper, Sir Mordaunt Wells must go out of his way to make an indiscriminate onslaught on Indian banks in general. It is true that they very often do afford regrettable facilities for obtaining loans on personal security, for which they charge an extremely high rate of interest; but were there no banks the only difference would be that needy men would have recourse to native usurers, and be fleeced without mercy. There is certainly nothing in their mode of transacting business to justify their condemnation in the severe language used by the learned judge, who ascribed to the system of credit pursued by them the utter ruin of so many young officers.

"They ran into debt." he continued, "heedlessly, and perfectly regardless of the consequences, and so long as they could get money by simply put ting pen to paper they would continue to do so, and so long as the banks found it a profitable speculation drawing large sums at interest, they were sure to countenance such a system. What mattered if they lost their money in one or two cases? Enough that a majority paid. His lordship could not understand by what process of reasoning the banks considered that officers on a salary of a couple of hundreds were able to pay thousands. Probably they looked to their aged parents in England, clergymen and others, who found it difficult to live, especially with the pittances they received, to come to the res-cue of their children; and many a poor parent was obliged, to save his own offspring from disgrace and utter ruin, to give the little he had saved for a rainy day or when the infirmities of old age incapacitated day or when the infirmities of old age incapacitated him to work. He was quite confident, and he was not afraid to declare it, that were it not for the faci-lities afforded by the banks for young officers and others to get into debt, there would not have been so many cases of insolvency. It was a shame that such a system was encouraged by the shareholders. The object appeared nothing more than the high rate of interest and insurance they received from their young constituents. Such a system ought to be deprecated in the strongest terms."

After all this declamation, all this denunciation of extravagance and usurious discounts, what does the reader suppose was the righteous judgment of this stern and uncompromising

I | but not the less true, that the case was adjourned sine die to enable the insolvent to apply to his father for funds wherewith to satisfy his creditors! Such a decision is manifestly unjust both to the long-suffering father and to the equally long-suffering creditors. The former is almost compelled by this appeal from the Bench to sacrifice the members of his family who have given him no trouble for the sake of one who has more than once been a heavy drain upon his means. But should he have the firmness to decline to injure the innocent in order to save the guilty, the insolvent's creditors will have some reason to complain of a judgment that buoyed them up with false hopes, while it was in direct opposition to every sentiment of justice and equity. Sir Mordaunt Wells has shown that he is quite qualified to take his seat with our own Commissioners of Insolvency—is it necessary to be more explicit?

CORRESPONDENCE.

A QUESTION FOR ORIENTAL SCHOLARS. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,-I am anxious to ascertain if any difference exists between the laws of Menu and the Burmese Scriptures, and, if so, whether or not the firstnamed code of laws is ever adopted and taught in any temple in the Burmese empire? addition to the information which I seek as above specified, I would further inquire if either of the religious works referred to are procurable in this country, and at what cost? Some of your numerous readers may be able to furnish me with peafectly satisfactory replies upon the subject, in regard to which I desire to be enlightened, and if you would be so kind as to allow my interrogatory epistle to appear in your widely-circulated journal I have not the least doubt I shall be duly favoured .- I remain, yours obediently,

THE RELIEF OF DISTRESS IN LAN-CASHIRE.

Lord Elgin, the Viceroy of India, has addressed the subjoined letter to the Lord Mayor on a question connected with the distress, the consideration of which has of late been much urged on the Indian Government by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the community of Calcutta generally :-

" Fort William, Nov. 17.

"My Lord,-In reply to a communication addressed to the Lord Mayor of London in the year 1861 by the Government of Pombay, on the subject of the appropriation of the surplus then remaining in hand of the fund so generously contributed by Great Britain for the relief of the sufferers by the Indian famine of 1860, his lordship observed 'that it might be held in reserve for the relief of distress of the same nature in any part of India;' for, his lordship wrote, 'although not likely to recur to the extent to which it has lately existed in the North-Western Provinces of the Punjaub, destitution must be expected to prevail from time to time in particular localities, owing to the failure of crops, inundations, and other causes.' Notwithstanding the injunction contained in these words, so deep and general is the sympathy which the distress now existing in some of the manufacturing districts of England has awakened in this country, that the Government of India has been strongly urged to remit their surplus at once to your lordship, in order that it may be added to the funds which are now being raised for the relief of the Lancashire ope-

"We do not consider that, as trustees of this surplus, we should be justified in diverting it on our own and sole responsibility from the destina-"Censor morum?" It is almost incredible, tion originally imparted to it by the subscribers, and subsequently confirmed by the decision of the Lord Mayor, which I have cited above; but we think that, under the circumstances, we may invite your lordship to review that decision, and inform you that, if acting on behalf of the subscribers, you should be of opinion that it may, without impropriety, be applied in the manner which I have indicated, the Government of India will heartily concur with your lordship in giving effect to that opinion.

"The precise amount of surplus available is not yet ascertained, as certain claims arising out of the famine of 1860 are still unadjusted; but your lordship's draughts on the Government of India for the sum of £20,000 will be at once honoured, should your lordship see fit to add this contribution to the funds placed at your disposal for the relief of our suffering fellow-subjects in Lancashire.—"I have the honour to be, my lord, your lordship's very faithful servant,

"ELGIN AND KINCARDINE. "The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of London." A meeting of as many of the Indian Famine Committee as can now be got together has been convened to consider the matter.

THE PERSIAN GULF TELEGRAPH.

On the 23rd inst. the Government contract for the construction of this important telegraphic route, extending 1,100 miles along the sea-coast from the mouth of the Persian Gulf to Mekra, was conceded to Messrs. Henley, and the manufacture of the cable will be commenced forthwith at the works at Woolwich, under the superintendence of Sir C. Bright and Mr. L. Clark, the Government telegraphic engineers. The English and Continental system, which extends to Bagdad, is now being carried forward as part of one great scheme from Bagdad to the head of the Persian Gulf, and the communication is being simultaneously carried forward from Mekra to Kurrachees where it will unite with the Indian telegraph system-a total length, when completed, of 6,000 miles as between Calcutta and Cornwall. Arrangements are now being made with the Persian Government, by Lieutenant-Colonel P. Stewart, of the Public Works Department, for settling the precise route, and establishing the stations.

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY.

The directors of this company, in their report, state that by late advices the steamer Indus was reported as proceeding up the river Indus with three flats, containing 1,500 hogsheads of beer for Ferozepore on Government account. She had gone through the Sukkur Pass, where the stream was very rapid, and was proceeding up the Sutlej. The steamer Sutlej was to follow in a few days, with two barges also laden with beer. Mr. Bourne had purchased on very favourable terms, from the Government of Bombay, a Boydell's traction engine, with five waggons, to work between Ferozepore and Lahore, a distance of about thirty miles, thus completing the communication, by the line of the Indus and Sutlei rivers, from Kurrachee to the capital of the Punjab. On the Ganges the progress of the company had also been satisfactory. The steamer Soane had, by last accounts, completed her third voyage to Allahabad and back, and was about to start on her fourth voyage. The steamer Ganges was on her first voyage, with two large barges, to the same place, and was progressing favourably. In consequence of the company's vessels having difficulty in ascending so high as Allahabad during the period of the year when the river was low, the directors have recently purchased the steamer Thomas Brassey, and three flats; and it was their intention to employ this steamer on the upper parts of the river at that season, in taking on the barges conveyed to Dinapore by the larger steamers of the company. The balance sheet showed a surplus on the operations of the company of £10,614. Part of this money had been earned during the current year, with only half of the vessels comprising the company's flotilla as yet in use. During the next year it vessels now in course of erection would be completed. The directors recommended that a dividend, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, be raid for the past half-year, clear of incometax, on and after the 1st day of January next, leaving a balance of £1,722. The capital account showed that £371,124 had been expended, leaving £7.447 in hand.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Specie to the East.—The specie taken by the Messageries Imperiales steamer on the 19th, from Marseilles, was £156,000-a much smaller amount than was expected previously to the reannouncement of the India Council, and the general change in the appearance of the demand for silver for the East.

THE INDIA BENCH. --Mr. Edward Parkyns Levinge, brother of Sir Richard G. Levinge, M.P., has been appointed to the vacant judgeship at Calcutta. Mr. Levinge was called to the bar in Michaelmas term, 1848; has published some law works of high character; and, we doubt not, will prove himself well qualified to discharge the duties of the important post to which he has been appointed.

MANDARIN WARD, who was recently killed by the Taepings at Rungpoo, was an American. He had fought under Walker, the filibuster, and afterwards went to China as mate of a vessel. When the rebels held Soonkong, and threatened Shanghae, Ward contracted with the Chinese Government to retake the one and relieve the other for so much cash down. He raised and equipped an army of Chinamen and foreigners, and in a few weeks restored Soonkong to the Imperial Government. He was made a general and a mandarin for this service, and empowered to raise whatever armies and retake from the rebels what towns he chose at his own price. The English and French admirals at first opposed and afterwards assisted him. Ward having increased and thoroughly drilled his army, was about to form a Chinese navy, and had given orders for gunboats in England and America, when a shot put a stop to his career.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCILLORS .- We notice that, in nominating Mr. A. A. Roberts as Member of the Legislative Council for the Punjab, the Lieutenant-Governor has started a question of no small importance. He protests, and very properly so, against Mr. Roberts being retained at Calcutta during the sitting of the Council, and then returning to the Punjab to resume his duties as Judicial Commissioner. Upon this point there can be no doubt respecting the correctness of his Honour's views. The post of Judicial Commissioner cannot be rendered subservient to that of Legislative Member of Council; nor can it be permitted that the important duties of the former appointment should be broken into by those of legislation. The status and the employment of Legislative Members of Council will no doubt be speedily settled. At present the anomaly is monstrous. The gentlemen who have been recently brought to Calcutta, and whose experience and abilities are supposed to fit them for the task of legislation, will really have but little to do whilst the Council is actually sitting, and nothing at all to do when the sittings are over. We take it for granted that Mr. Harington and Mr. Grey have really done all the work, and that little remains for Messrs. Roberts, Campbell, and Ellis beyond the bare labour of discussion. It stands to reason that, if Mr. Beadon can govern Bengal and manage the Bengal Council, and at the same time fulfil his duties as member of the Legislative Council, those gentlemen whose duties are confined to legislation will have at all times a considerable quantity of spare time upon their hands. When, however, to this circumstance be added the impossibility of permitting them to resume their posts, after the sittings of Council, without great detriment to the public service, we shall see that it will be necessary to provide one and all of these gentlemen with permanent employment at Calcutta.- Englishman.

BLACKHEATH COLLEGE. — Principal Rev. J. A. ANDRAS, M.A., late Scholar of St. John's College, Cambridge, and in double Honours. Preparation for every kind of Examination, Military or Civil. Mathematics by two Graduates in Honours. Languages by Native Masters. A jumor department distinct from the senior. A confortable home for the cuitdren of parcets in India, several of whom are now under the care of the Principal, and satisfactory references given. Extensive premises, with good cricket ground.

A HOME FOR THE SONS OF PARENTS
A RESIDING IN INDIA AND THE RRITISH COLOMIES.—There are Vacancies for the Sons of Gentlemen under incen years of age in a first-class School, conducted upon Unsecturian Evangelical Principles. Experienced Tutors,
Graduates of Oxfood and Cambridge, assisted by Fortign Professors, and a Civil Engineer, prepare the Puplis for the Public Schools, the Universities, and for the various Naval and Mihitary Examinations. Popils from this School have successfully entered Rugby, Harrow, and Eton, have matriculated at the Universities, have passed with great credit the examination for Naval Cadetship, for Sandhurst, for Direct Commissions in the Army, and also the Competitive Examination for Wordwich, and for the Indian Civil Service.

The religious instruction and the moral and physical wellbeing of the Puplis are objects of the Principal's continued schicitude, and his experience of upwards of twenty years devoted to educational training is brought to bear unon the daily school life and occupation of those committed to his care, in repressing and counteracting the evil, and in develoing and bringing into healthul action the good, discoverable in individual character and habit.

The massion, the grounds, and park, situated in one of the healthiest western districts of Middlesex, are unexceptionable
as to locality, soil, and water, and are fitted with every apparatus and appliance calculated to strengthen the constitution by promoting healthful out and in-sloor exercise.

The sons of parents resuling in India and the Colonies, who are placed entirely under the guardianship of the Principal,
find a home in his family circle, are treated in every respect as his own children, and join his holiday party in its annual excursion to the Continent.

The highest testimonals from parents of pupils, and from late pupils,—many of whom are now officers and civilians in the Iridian Presidencies—are offered, Latin, French, Mathematics, English Subjects, Stationery; also the charges for Pew-rent,

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE, LAW, WILL with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo. cloth, 15a.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the "This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Coaste is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by every mair interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1-62.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of manked to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to recept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book toll of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined errice of metaphysics which is hought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the metaphysics which is harder to the properties of th

A SHORT TRIP in HUNGARY and TRANSYLVANIA in the SPRING of 1862. By Professor D. T. ANSTED. Post Svo., cloth, 8s. 6d.

"Professor Ansted! descriptions are written with a neatness attesting the accuracy of a scientific observer's eyes. His volume is one both of value and entertainment: a book calculated to turn the thoughts of tourists down the Danube."—Athenæum, Aug. 16, 1862.

"Many a tourist this autumn will have cause to thank Professor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . . . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a tour than the author of this interesting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1862.

MEMORABLE EVENTS of MODERN HISTORY. By J. G. Engals. Author of the "Boy-hood of Great Men," &c., &c. With Illustrations. Post 8vo., atch. &c.

"A practical writer, with a high sense of his obligations as an instructor of children. Mr. J. G. Edgar never makes a contribution to juvenile literature that does not deserve a certain measure of commendation. We can conscientiously recommend it ('Memorable Events') as a work at the same time entertaining and useful."—Athenœum, March 6, 1×62.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaffected, and from the first page to the lost the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enviable talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-beards, and of so de-cribing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. His last ("Memorade Events") is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agreeable, highminded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and faitures."—Spectator.

By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D., 8vo., cioth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes a stout fight for the Hindoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than cheasplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative is modocy, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all smitignated by a person who contented himself by reading the title-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but eship, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Hersid, SIN: its Causes and Consequences. An Attempt to Investigate the Orizin, Nature, Extent, and Results of Moral Evil. A Series of Lent Lectures. By the Rev. Henry Christmas, M.A., F.R.S. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"These lectures are learned, cloquent, and earnest, and though they approach the 'limits of religious thought,' they do not transgress those limits; and they present the reader with a comprehensive review, based upon revelation, of the nature, extent, and consequences of moral evil or sin, both in this world and in the world to come."—Civil Service Guzette.

THE REPUBLIC of FOOLS: being the History of the State and People of Abderia in Thrace. Translated from the German of C. M. von Wieland. By the Rev. H. Christmas. 2 vols., post 8vo., cloth, 18s.

COURSE of ELEMENTARY MATHE

meum, March 9, 1861.

"Mr. Young is well-known as the author of undoubtedly the best treatise on the 'Theory of Equations' which is to be found in our language—a treatise distinguished by originality of thought, great learning, and admirable perspicuity. No are these quanties wanting in the work winch we are reviewing.

Considering the difficulty of the task which Mr. Young has undertaken to discharge, and the extent of useful knowledge he has succeeded in imparting accurately and lucidly in so small a compass, we can without hesitation comend this work to the public as by far the best elementary course of mathematics in our language."—The London Review, April 6, 1861.

Edition, with Illustrations. Price 10s. 6d.

"It is a book that we can sincere'y recommend, not only to those who are desirous of abundant and reliable information respecting the social economy of the Russian people, but to those who seek an entertaining volume, that may be perused in any part with both profit and amusement."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

"This is not only one of the most amusing books that we have re id for a long time, but also the best and most reliable account of Russian like and manners which has hitherto been given to the public."—Spectator.

"The tone is so genial the descriptions are so vigorously touched, and the author's perfect acquaintance with his subject is so marked throughout, that his sketches are sure to delight any one into whose hands they may full."—Literary Gazette.

Translated from the German of C. M. von Wieland. By the Rev. H. Chieffman. 2 vols., post 8vo., cloth, 18s.

"As a prose satire, 'The History of the Abderites' yields only in breadth of humour, and pangency of wit, to bean Swift's immortal travels of Captain Lemuel Guilver, and of works of that class we know of none in any language that can compare with either of the two."—Observer.

"Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English men and women. I nfortunately for the world Pisstratus Cavton departed this life without having made any contribution towards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites: and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to mankind, of the Quixotes', Guilivers', and other? uman foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to on shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old overflowing with wit, tun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of national thanks, we un lettake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."—London feview.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—RECRUITED HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—RECRUITED HEALTH.—When once the nerves feel unstrung, and listlessness supplants energy, is the right time to take some alterative, as Holloway's Phils, to prevent disorder running into disease. These excellent Pills correct all irregularities and weaknesses. They act so kindly, yet so energetically, on the functions of digestion and assimilation that the whole body is retired, the blood is rendered richer and purer, the muscles become firmer and stronger, and the nervous and absorbent systems are invigorated. These Pills are suitable for all classes and all ages. They have a most marvelous effect on persons who are out of condition; they soon rectify whatever is in fault, restore strength to the body, and confidence to themiad.

To pretent spurious imitations, please to observe that the words "KE.ITING'S COUGH LOZENGES" are engraven on the Government Stamp of each Box, without which none

BY DAVID THOMAS ANSTED, M.A., F.R.S., &c. AND

ROBERT GORDON LATHAM, M.A., M.D., F.R.S., &c.

The Illustrations drawn on Wood expressly for the Work, by PAUL J. NAFTEL, Member of the London Society of Painters in Water Colours.

"The 'Channel Islands' is an excellent book of its class—well conceived, well written, well illustrated, well printed. It is the produce of many hands, and every hand a good one. Nearly every thing which a man can desire to know about Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark—about their history, Geography, and natural history—Professor Ansted and Dr. Latham have contrived to tell. Altogether the contents of the volume are as varied and intesting as a well-sustained drama; and to this drama no more graceful and picturesque scenery could have been furnished than we find in the illustrations so profusely given by artists worthy of the subject and equal to their worth—Paul Naftel and M. Peters Le Lièer. The result is not a increly bandsone volume of the old 'Keepsake' style, made to sell and be looked at, but a book of rare ment and value, made for instruction and delight, to be read with pleasure and to be referred to with profit."—Athenaum, Nov. 15, 1862.
